Opinion is that the Issue Should be Decided by Vote

Are debates at the University of Toronto failing as a means of entertainment and instruction? The small attendance at recent debates and the decline in popularity of the Hart House debates points to a general lack of interest. No debating teams have been formed by two years of University College.

In an effort to locate the trouble, several students were interviewed yesterday by "The Varsity". "Debates are a good thing," said E. C. Powell, I.U.C. "I think they should be given more publicity to arouse interest among the students. In a university like this I believe that if the topics chosen were of a more humorous nature the students would find them of greater interest."

"I can't understand why they don't draw a larger attendance at the debates," said a third year Commerce and Finance student who desired to remain anonymous. "I think perhaps that there are too many other things to go to. I don't think they should hold debates more frequently than at present. They should first try and get the students interested in the ones they have now. I don't believe in having debates in the afternoons. After attending lectures all day a student doesn't want to stay until six o'clock listening to a debate."

M. Nelson, MEds, said he attended many debates in the west and would like to see more interest taken here. He said that lack of time kept many students from attending debates. "I would like to see a greater interest taken in debates," said D. Forbes, III U.C. "I think it is better to have the issue decided by a vote of those present than by a few judges. The judges take so long to make a decision that there can't be much unanimity in their opinions."

H. Gerrard, II U.C. said there should be more debates.

Because professors are tired of hearing the complaints of students who consider themselves overworked, a time card system is being installed for the engineers at Wisconsin University.

Correspondence

"The Varsity" is glad to print the following letter received yesterday afternoon from Baldwin House: Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

We regret to see, in your editorial of to-day, that you have put a serious interpretation upon a motion of a frivolous character carried in the Private Business transactions at the recent Hart House debate. The original motion was a (frivolous) "vote of censure on the Debate Committee" itself, for not securing sufficient advertisement of the debate. The action of the "Varsity" reporter in defending his paper against criticism which had not even been suggested, made it difficult to resist the temptation to amend the motion so as to read "Varsity" instead of "Debate Committee". Both the proposer and the seconder of this motion wish to make it quite clear that they are fully appreciative of the valuable support which "The Varsity" has given to the Hart House debates since their inception; and hope that this misunderstanding will in no way weaken the good feeling which has characterized the relations between the Debate Committee and "The Varsity".

Yours, etc.,

A. F. W. Plamptre,
V. W. Bladen.

FILM MOVING PICTURES ON OHIO STATE CAMPUS

Columbus, Ohio.—The moving picture being sponsored by the Student Senate depicting life at Ohio State University, which has created much interest and curiosity on the campus, is soon to be released.

Filmed by the Photographic Service Company, the picture contains familiar scenes of the campus, among which are shots of football games, initiations, Sphinx rituals, the cane rush, classroom sessions, Henrick's at the noon hour, and many other bits of student activity.

When released the picture will be shown in high schools throughout the state. At present letters are being sent to the various schools to ascertain when they wish a showing.

On top of this comes the announcement of a project of the department of education in producing a talking picture. The film has just been completed at the Ohio State University Elementary School and will enable prospective teachers to observe the elementary school in operation and to hear a discussion of the underlying theories.

The film is the outcome of many requests from groups interested in elementary school education.

Interfaculty Gymnastic Meet Won by 69 Points; Trinity Follows U.C.

S.P.S. carried off the honours in the first of the interfaculty gymnastic meets at Hart House yesterday afternoon, amassing a total of 1777 points to take the lead over their nearest rivals, University College, with 1708. Trinity was third with 1532 to its credit. The six best men in these meets will be chosen to represent the university at the intercollegiate meet to be held at Hart House at the end of next month. Wilkinson of S.P.S. topped the individual point scorers with 654, Bengry of the same team taking second place with 591. Ivey, one of the best men in the university, was unable to take part, but will be given a chance to make the team at a later meet. The individual standings are as follows:

1. Wilkinson (S.P.S.)	654
2. Bengry (S.P.S.)	592
3. Johnston (U.C.)	591
4. Campbell (Dents)	584
5. Jacobi (U.C.)	577
6. Allen (Forestry)	562

JUNIOR MEOS DEFEAT U.C. IN BASKETBALL

Junior U.C. were defeated by Junior Meos in an interfaculty basketball game played at Hart House last night by the score of 26-16. Meos led throughout the whole game and except for the last period rush by U.C. were never really threatened.

The winners led by 22-8 at half-time after jumping out into an early lead in the first few minutes of play, but were held in the second period to two field baskets by the red and white squad. Both teams missed many opportunities to score when in close under the basket and this kept the score down. For the winners, Simon, who scored ten points, was outstanding, while the rest of the team were evenly divided as to point scoring. The losers' best threat was D. Agnew, who chalked up a total of nine points, while Scott accounted for three and Schuck and R. Agnew each got two. U.C.—Forwards, Tindale and MacLean; centre, R. Agnew (2); defence, Howell and McDonnell; subs, Schuck (2), D. Agnew (9), Scott (3), Dyer and Koretsky.

Meos—Forwards, Simon (10) and Kohen (2); centre, Kyle (2); defence, Vaughan (2) and Kasler (4); subs, Scher (2), Herschorn (2), Chenoweth, Miller and Davenson.

Referee—Harry Sniderman.

The leader of the affirmative, amid interruptions from the negative speakers, affirmed that present-day people have repudiated religion with the result that the mediaeval man was happier than are the moderns.

The motion was thrown open for discussion. T. P. O'Connor, the sole male on the side of the "Noes", brought down the house when he cried: "I rise to the defence of femininity. God bless you modern women."

stated that more S.P.S. men remained in engineering or work directly connected with it than those mentioned by Professor Nathanson. Professor J. W. Bain estimated that about 7 per cent of the men in chemistry had entirely left that profession.

For many, it was said, the engineering profession serves as a stepping stone to higher positions in a business where such knowledge is very useful; and even if it is not the intention to go into engineering the training develops accurate and analytical thinking which can be turned to good account in any business. For instance, several School graduates are now lawyers.

few seconds later Seal passed the puck out from behind the net to Hodgetts, who banged it in to make the score 3-1 for Victoria. The period ended with the score still the same.

At the very outset of the second period Walls went down centre ice and passed over to Patterson for Victoria's fourth goal. O.A.C. came back with a goal by Hudson to reduce the lead to two. Play roughened up a little and penalties were frequent. Just before the end of the period Walls and Patterson again combined for a goal to make it 5-2 at two-thirds time.

From the outset of the third period O.A.C. forced the play and kept the puck in Victoria territory. Reamon scored for the Aggies to put them back in the running. Hodgetts sailed down from the defence, lost the puck at centre, picked it up again and then scored on a beautiful wrist high shot. The Aggies worried the Victoria defence for a few minutes and during the excitement Hodgetts and Kerr, the Victoria defence men, were ruled off for rough tactics. While they were off O.A.C. scored their fourth goal from a scramble in front of the net. Heat made sensational stops to rob Lavery of two sure goals as the game ended.

CONSISTENT APATHY GREET'S NEW CONSTITUTION; FEW HAVE READ IT

But Eight in 30 Interviewed Had Acquainted Selves With It

APPROVE GRADUATE HEAO

Reduction in Membership Will Abate Unwieldiness of S.A.C.

A general lack of interest in student government was again found by "The Varsity" on interviewing students of several faculties and colleges, regarding the suggested constitution appearing in Friday's "Varsity". Of 30 who were questioned, eight had read at least part, most of the eight being members of the S.A.C., while little concern about the whole matter was displayed by the remainder.

Those who expressed an opinion on the whole constitution favored a graduate president of the council, while there was a general feeling amongst the others that an undergraduate should fill this position as he would be in closer touch with university affairs and, if chosen from the graduating class would be comparatively free from prejudice.

The majority agreed with the constitution regarding the voting power of each member, which would become proportional to the registration in the faculty represented, instead of one vote per member. The objection advanced against this was that it places great power in the hands of one or two who might not be capable of using it properly.

A number of the replies are given herewith:

J. B. Hart, IV Vic: "I think a graduate president would be better as it should be fairly easy to secure someone who, while in business, would still keep up the Varsity spirit."

A. M. Doyle, VI Meds: "I have always favoured a graduate president. I am behind the constitution as it will cut down the number of members and thus give a group who are more interested and more widely than at present."

ASSEMBLY TACKLES BOUNDARY CHANGES

League of Nations Club Stage Second Annual Model Assembly

TORONTO HAS BEEN LEADER

The question of the revision of the boundary treaties grouped around the Peace of Versailles under Section 19 of the League Covenant, will mark the coming subject of debate at the second Model Assembly, to be held by the University League of Nations Club on Thursday evening, February 5th at 8.15.

W. J. Zimmerman, representing Brazil, will introduce the motion. As this question is of paramount importance in world affairs, a keen discussion and a large attendance is expected. Speaking delegates are drawn from the study groups of the League of Nations Club which meets weekly to consider such problems, as well as from kindred associations on the campus, the Foreign Affairs Club, the Fabian Club and the Policy Club.

Representing France, E. B. Jolliffe, of Victoria College, will oppose the motion. Victor Lange will represent Germany's viewpoint, Wilfred Wong of Trinity will represent China. Among other speakers, Miss Marjorie Beer is undertaking the difficult task of presenting a case for Poland.

C.O.T.C. BALL RECALLS MILITARY TRADITIONS

Recalling all the ancient traditions of brave men and fair women, the University of Toronto contingent of the Canadian Officers' Training Corps entertained at Hart House Friday evening with one of the smartest social functions that the university has enjoyed.

The guest officers with the red jackets of their "mess kits", lent a touch of colour to the occasion, the only military touch of the evening. It was not a military ball. A civilian orchestra rendered most excellent music, but there was no bugle call to announce each number on the program.

Members of the Corps advised "The Varsity" that the colourful "mess kits" are too expensive for the undergraduate officers in training and that the senior members of the corps had therefore refrained from attending.

INITIATE STUDENT SYMPHONY TICKETS

Appreciably Reduced Charges for Massey Hall Program

GENEROSITY OF TRUSTEES

Owing to the kindness of the trustees of Massey Hall, the students at this university are to be allowed special rates on tickets for the concert to be given by the Imperial Oil Symphony Orchestra on Wednesday evening, February 4. The orchestra is composed of most of Toronto's finest orchestra players and has been successfully directed by Mr. Reginald Stewart, whose art was warmly welcomed in London recently when he was guest conductor for a symphony concert in Albert Hall.

The program is an attractive one. Dr. MacMillan will conduct for the performance of his orchestration of the Bach Prelude and Fugue in G minor. Mr. Ernest Seitz will be at the piano for the Tchaikovsky Concerts in B flat minor. Beethoven's Fifth Symphony, Wagner's Tannhauser Overture, a Benedictus and a Spanish Rhapsody complete the program.

Dr. F. R. MacKelcan, one of the trustees of Massey Hall, and chairman of the Hart House Music Committee, writes, "You will appreciate that the Hall is generally leased for concerts and that it is not often that the trustees have an opportunity to do anything of this kind."

Terror Reigned When Naive Co-eds Invaded Privacy of Tired Athletes

An embarrassing situation was precipitated Saturday afternoon at the Varsity Arena when a group of co-eds said to comprise an interfaculty women's hockey team, invaded a small building which some players of the opposite sex had converted into a make-shift dressing room, and took partial possession of it.

The men, after playing a strenuous game, found themselves soaked with moisture from their exertions and retreated to a small building nearby to dry themselves, ignorant of the fact that it was regularly used by both men and women desiring to change their skates and shoes. When the men

"He should be handed over to the scientists. The trouble with fundamentalists is that they don't allow that people who don't share their point of view, can be just as sincere Christians. OPPOSITION FAILS GHANDI SUPPORTED

Trinity Decides to Approve of Hindu Philosopher and Idealist

OEACON JOSEPH REPLIES

Last Friday night, on the subject, "Resolved that this house approves of Gandhi", Trinity stated that it was unanimously in favour of that gentleman by a vote of twenty-five to ten. Six speakers spoke for Gandhi and three against. An interesting feature of this debate was the absence of an opposition and the non-appointment of opposition speakers.

Deacon Joseph, B.A., Madras, was the first speaker for the affirmative, speaking authoritatively, volubly and incoherently about why the Indians adored Gandhi and condemned British rule.

A. H. Woodcock, as there was no speaker prepared for the negative, stepped into the breach and stated that it was Gandhi's policy to appoint lieutenants to carry on his work and then enquired who would take up Gandhi's work if he should die. His ideas here ceased.

There were no second speakers for the government or the opposition.

Jesse Clough, the third speaker for the affirmative, claiming he knew nothing, reviewed the life of Gandhi from the time of his law student days and pointed out that Gandhi co-operated with England until his betrayal in 1920.

CAN YOU PICK A PERFECT FEMALE?

We begin with this issue a search for the Perfect Female. Each day this week, "The Varsity" will print twenty questions by which any female may be judged. There will be one hundred questions in all, and the maximum score for each will be ten points, making a total of one thousand points for the Perfect Female. Any male in the university may mark a score for any female in the university and send it to the office of "The Varsity", Hart House. The score for each question must be graded, according to the marker's personal knowledge and experience whenever possible. Ten should be awarded when the subject is perfect in any point, five when she clicks about half the time, and zero when she fails entirely. To the male who sends in the highest score and the female on whom the score is made will be awarded either one marriage license or two tickets to any downtown movie. To-day's questions are concerned with Looks and Health.

HEALTH

1. How clear is her complexion?
2. How normal is her weight?
3. How much common sense does she show in her diet?
4. How little does she need excess tobacco or alcohol?
5. How little does she talk about her nerves or headaches?
6. How long is she of walking and exercise?
7. How much pep and energy has she at the end of a long day; how well does her energy last?

Vancouver.—Students of the University of British Columbia will grow beards for their dear old alma mater. At a general meeting of the Men's Undergraduate Society, yesterday, it was decided that none of its members will shave until the present $20,000 stadium drive goes over the top.

The motion endorsing the beard-growing proposal was passed by a large majority amid much cheerful banter, but it is said that the boys intend to keep the resolution.

As an added incentive it was suggested that the women students should refuse to date students who do not join the beard-growers.

STOLEN PROPERTY STILL UNRETURNED

Hopeful Union Officials Delay Legal Action Toward Recovery

BURNER A PRIZED GIFT

The Chinese incense burner and the plaque which were removed from the Women's Union during a U.C. '33 class party two weeks ago are still missing, but Union officials are hopeful that they will be returned before it is necessary to take action in the matter.

Miss Kilpatrick, Dean of U. C. Women, interviewed by "The Varsity" in connection with proposals outlined in Friday's editorial, said, "We hesitate to take such steps as dismantling or closing the Union for future parties, and we trust our guests of that evening will respond to the spirit of the appeal."

According to Miss Kilpatrick, the Chinese piece is especially missed. It is a brass incense burner which was presented to the Union by a graduate who brought it with her from China and had it fittingly engraved. Both articles have a value to the Union far in advance of their actual intrinsic worth.

A PRICE OF CODIFICATION

We have been urged to publish editorial comment on the proposed new constitution for student government as embodied in the Jolliffe Report accepted by the Joint Executive last Thursday night and printed in full in Friday's issue of this paper. For the benefit of those who are interested in the discussion of this matter, we direct attention to the fact that full announcements will be made in the news columns of this paper as to the hour and place of the meetings of the two Councils of the S.A.C. at which the constitution will be discussed and which will vote on its rejection, adoption, or modification.

It has been said that the sections dealing with "The Varsity" mark the end of the undergraduate newspaper as a significant and independent note. Upon this aspect alone we feel the necessity to remark at this time.

We would point out that "The Varsity" always has been under the complete control of the student governing body, and that—when ever it comes to a showdown, as it did two years ago,—the S.A.C. has always had complete power to oust the Editor-in-Chief if his statements grew too strong for squeamish stomachs. The fact that the Editor of the future is to be asked to set his signature to certain platitudes by way of contract with the publishing body, we feel in no way materially affects this situation.

The only possible change which we foresee under this head is the complete immunity from editorial criticism which the student governing body will enjoy in the future. Unless the Editor of this paper succeeds in assuming the role of a super-diplomat, the Voice of the Students' Administrative Council of the future is going to resolve itself—so far as the columns of "The Varsity" are concerned—into the Voice of God. The City of Toronto may make mistakes; the Dominion of Canada may blunder; the Fathers of the University may err—but the Students' Administrative Council will remain securely and eternally right. Thus may contracts make trimmers of us all.

REITERATION

Elsewhere on this page we have a letter from "one of the 126" students of Professor Perold's third year pass economists. While we have no doubt that the writer is perfectly sincere and good-tempered in urging that this paper might better have taken its medicine when it was rebuked, instead of waxing sarcastic (sic), we cannot help remarking that the letter is valuable principally as a revelation of the writer's entire failure to comprehend the situation.

In the address presented to Professor Perold last Thursday allusions were made to "absurd" and "unwarranted" criticisms which this paper had made of that Professor's mode of lecturing. We reiterate that this paper at no time made any criticisms of Mr. Perold and that it was exceedingly unfair, to say the least, to make representations to that gentleman that the undergraduate newspaper had done anything of the kind.

We labour this point, because we feel it important that the popular mind learn to recognize clearly the very sharp difference between news writing, which merely states facts, and editorial writing, which attempts to evaluate them.

The writer of to-day's letter alludes to this publication as having been unjust both to the class and to the professor. If any injustice has been done, we maintain that we have been the victims. We have been cast as the villain in a piece of which we had thought ourselves the spectators.

NEW FEATURES

As an experiment, "The Varsity" has decided to discontinue the form of daily humorous essay known as the Back Page Feature, from now until the end of the current publishing year. Considerable criticism has been levelled at this particular feature of late. Many friends of this paper have felt that the spontaneity which had formerly marked the Back Page Feature, and which had been its chief claim to the reader's attention, had largely disappeared with the decrease in the number of able writers of the humorous feature; that the stress placed upon the able few was resulting in a lack of subtlety.

Substitutes for the old type of Back Page Feature will not, however, be lacking. Beginning with to-day's issue, Monday will present the column, Academia, which is a revival of last year's Collegiana, and which this year will be conducted by our Exchange Editor, K. J. Erwin. Wednesday will be featured by a department to be known as The New Puerilia, and edited under

Art, Music and Drama

Friday Afternoon Recital

Miss Joy Fawcett, soprano and pianist, was the artist at the Friday afternoon recital in the Hart House Music Room. Simplicity, flexibility, ease and absence of artifice in Miss Fawcett's singing was nowhere more apparent than in the last group of songs. The quaint, effervescent humour expressed in the fresh and tuneful descriptions of nature by contemporary composers was well received by the audience. Henschel's "Spring" and La Forge's well known "Mocking Bird", each full of vital and essentially intimate melodies, were skilfully rendered in Miss Fawcett's fine soprano voice. "The Wind in the South", by Scott, was an elusive song that faintly reflected some metaphysical trend of thought. In contrast, the unexpected brevity of "The Three Little Chestnuts", was decidedly humorous.

The naive and effective music of Haydn's "With Verdure Clad", was interesting and had adequate accompaniment. Likewise, a coherently treated accompaniment figured in the Mozart number, "Voi Che Sapete", Thomas' "Je Suis Titania", so that Miss Fawcett was able to give the necessary prominence to the recitative qualities.

Miss Fawcett made an admirable selection in "Widmung", by Franz for her second group. Once again, the subjective moods that almost every number on the program possessed were well done, and once again, the accompaniment, composed of melodically flowing parts in a somewhat contrapuntal treatment, fell into line. Chaminade's "L'Ete", and a number by de Fesch perhaps did not demand such a conspicuous dramatic sincerity as was given them.

Miss Fawcett quite surprised her audience when for her third group she played Moszkowski's "Caprice Espagnol". Capricious rhythms and rubato style voiced themselves properly commencing with harmless little staccatos and developing through leaping mazurkas to a somewhat stirring polonaise.

—J.H.Y.

Organ Recital

The second recital by guest organists will be played by Harvey Robb, a graduate of this university, and the well known artist of the Royal York Hotel.

Mr. Robb's musicianship needs no comment and the attractiveness of his programs always warrants large audiences.

The feature of the program will be the magnificent sonata by Reubke, the young Belgian whose early death deprived the world of one of its most promising composers. One rarely hears this work for the simple reason that its difficulty is such that very few organists can meet its technical demands.

An interesting number will be the Prelude, Passacaglia and Fugue dedicated to Mr. Robb by F. J. Horwood, Mus.Doc., and now to receive its first public performance. Dr. Horwood is one of the first students to receive the degree of Doctor of Music by examination in the University of Toronto. He bases his work on fine classical lines, a Handelian influence appearing occasionally, and makes a real contribution to the literature of the organ.

The remainder of the program will include numbers by Debussy, Boellman, Tschalkowsky and the modern American composer, Joseph Clokey.

Drama in French

Two little dramas by Henri Lavedan, who made himself famous in 1888 by his "Quarts d'heure", will be presented by Dorothy Livesay at a meeting of the Trinity French Society on Tuesday evening at 7.30. The plays, "Ou Vais-Tu Tantot?" and "Double Regime", are family comedies and though once derided as "tag ends", are marked by subtle analysis of character and situation.

The two men's roles will be taken by Professor R. K. Hicks and Ross Parmenter. Several girls who have played very little hitherto will take part.

The rippling waters of the pool reflecting the coloured spotlights, gave an ever changing sunrise scene upon the further wall of the natatorium.

The "sit down" chicken salad supper with Hart House catering at its best, which was a feature of the evening, was served in both the Great Hall and in the Faculty dining room.

Among the ladies it was observed that shoulders are coming out. The new gowns with simple shoulder straps or none at all, were much in evidence.

Correspondence

"One of 126"

The Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

It is undoubtedly true that "The Varsity" is a much-maligned paper, but I can see little or no reason for the scathing editorial of Thursday's issue, insofar as it concerns Mr. Perold and his class.

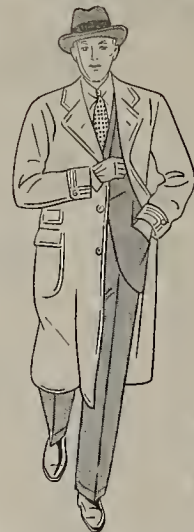

Mr. Perold, by his own admission, was not offended by our petition, but merely by the unjust account in "The Varsity" of his "laying it aside." "The Varsity", like all good newspapers, wished to publish the news while it was "hot". But in this case, that worthy sheet put its foot into it, if I may be permitted the colloquialism. Here are the circumstances.

Our petition was handed to Mr. Perold at the end of a lecture, when at least half the class had already left the room. Hence he had no opportunity to read it.

the initials, "A.E.F.A." In this column we shall endeavour to present the week's crop of fatuous remarks from our leading intellects. Friday, as has been the case from the opening of the present term, will offer The Table Round, under the guidance of the Feature Editor, G. G. Brooks. Tuesdays and Thursdays will be left in the lap of the gods and the Feature Editor. It is intended to revive the column, Student Verse, and to print contributions of verse under this heading when suitable material is available. The Table Round may also run on one of the alternate days upon occasion. Whenever a sufficiently outstanding contribution of the old Back Page Feature type has been submitted, it will be printed.

It is hoped that a revival in the interest and attention directed toward the back page will result from the current innovations.

INTERCOLLEGIATE FOOTBALL UNION ADOPTS THE FORWARD PASS

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

The Varsity hockey outfit made a disappointing showing in their first game against Silverwoods on Saturday night. Great things were expected of the Blue team this year, but the Silverwoods were just too good. However, there are plenty of games to be played and Varsity will have a great chance to redeem themselves.

One of the most encouraging things about the game on Saturday was the excellent showing of Betsy Burruss in goal for Varsity. She made some remarkable saves, especially in the second period, when Silverwoods were attacking strongly. She had no chance on the three goals which were scored on her, and with a little more support should prove one of the strongest factors in the team's defence.

There were three interfaculty hockey games scheduled for Friday night, and none of them were played. In one case, there seems to be no reason why a win by default should not be chalked up, since the St. Michael's team were on the spot with a referee, and the Senior U.C. outfit did not show up. It is too bad that so many games have had to be postponed, because that will mean lengthening the season unduly.

A meeting of representatives from five faculties will be held on Tuesday afternoon to attempt to arrange a schedule for an interfaculty badminton tournament. St. Michael's, St. Hilda's, University College, Victoria, and Household Science will be represented, and it is hoped that satisfactory arrangements can be made.

Baseball seems to be dying a natural death as a competitive sport among the colleges and badminton will probably take its place. There are a great many girls interested in this sport, and there seems to be no good reason why badminton should not be just as well organized as the basketball and hockey clubs are at present.

HALF-TIME COUNT 12-11

McMaster University vanquished Varsity in an intermediate intercollegiate basketball fixture at Hart House Saturday night the final score being 43 to 24. The game was a rather listless affair with McMaster completely dominating the play for the most part.

In the first period Varsity had considerable difficulty in penetrating the Hamiltonians' defence and had to make most of their shots from long range. The count at half time was 12 to 11 against the Blue and White. In the second session McMaster proceeded to pile up a lead of ten points before Varsity could get their bearings.

SENIOR COURT MEN LOSE FIRST GAME

Red and White Triumph Over Blue Quintette by 40 to 29

MCGILL DEFENCE STRONG

By Willie Ann Luckett

Despite an exciting last period rally which netted them 22 points, University of Toronto's senior basketball squad dropped their first home game in the intercollegiate series to McGill by a score of 40 to 29 at Hart House on Saturday night. The Redmen had a distinct edge all through except for a few minutes in the second half when a change at centre gave Varsity the advantage of the jump. McGill were more consistently effective in their signal plays, scoring several neat shots from close in. The Varsity forwards resorted to long shots early in the game, and most of their points were made from centre.

Don Young opened the scoring for McGill when he netted one point after being fouled by Collins. A whirlwind attack by the Redmen carried the score to 11 to 0 before Varsity took a minute out. McGill came back strongly and more than half the period was over before McCallum was the first scorer for Varsity, going in fast to count on a rebound from a long shot. Varsity plays were not working and they were forced to shoot from centre while the McGill forwards penetrated the Blue defence line repeatedly to run up a score of 22 to 7 at half time.

The initial part of the second period was a repetition of the first with Weber and Moore counting for McGill. O'Leary for Varsity had hard luck on several close-in shots and Varsity threw away several nice chances by careless passing. With about 8 minutes of the period gone, Varsity substituted, sending Sakler to centre, McCallum and Cock to the defence, and Hynes and Sniderman at Forward. This combination proved more effective, and the Blue team slowly reduced the Redmen's lead. Hynes and McCallum tallied five times on beautiful long shots, and with the score 32 to 21 McGill took a minute out. The Blue team came back strong and long shots by Sakler and Sniderman put the count at 33 to 27. McCallum was disqualified for four fouls and O'Leary went back to centre, with Riggs on the forward line. McGill pressed hard, and made sure of the game, Weber and Small scoring from signal plays.

McGill (40)—Small (7), Falkner (5), forwards; Young (7), centre; Rice (9), Calhoun (4), guards; Weber (2), Moore (4), subs.

ings. The Blues then settled down, but were never able to threaten the opposition's lead.

Both Reynolds and Bodie played stellar games for McMaster, accounting for ten points each. Burns and Pasternak were outstanding for Varsity.

Varsity—Forwards, Carr and Butters; centre, Pasternak; guards, Scott and Coles; spares, Sullivan and Burns.

McMaster—Forwards, Reynolds and Bodie; centre, Groom; guards, Dilworth and Whidden; spare, King.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By A. C. C.

The intercollegiate football union adopted the forward pass at its annual meeting in Montreal, Saturday. According to Press reports, details regarding the forward pass have not been decided upon and will be worked out at a later date. Despatches state that the Toronto delegation were opposed to the adoption of the forward pass, but the grounds on which they raised their objections are not known. Now that the intercollegiate union has accepted the innovation to Canadian football, the spectacular play will be seen on all Canadian fields next fall. The dream of a decade has now become a reality. It is thought in many circles that the new play will make the game more open and more entertaining from a spectator's point of view. It remains to be seen whether the new pass will accomplish all that its advocates claim for it under the existing three-yard interference rule.

A final record of the leading goal scorers in the Big Four junior O.H.A. group shows two Varsity players, May and Hendry, at the top of the heap. Jackie May finished in first place with five goals and seven assists to his credit, giving him a total of twelve points. Hendry followed with 10 goals and one assist. McPherson, the third member of this flashy trio, finished well up along the league's sharpshooters. Needless to say, these three were the back-bone of the junior team. Had the defence stood up as well, Marlborough and Toronto Canoe Club might not be meeting in the playoffs for the group title. At that the Blues performed creditably and the two games that went against them through disputed goals forced them out of the running. They had a tough season and deserve plenty of credit.

The most effective combination that Coach McCutcheon could place on the floor against the champion McGill quintet Saturday night was Cock and McCallum, guards, Sakler at centre, and Sniderman and Hynes, forwards. Sakler outjumped Moore who relieved Don Young and even extended Young at the pivot position. And Hynes caught our eye by the way in which he secured the ball on the tip off. During the second half when Varsity staged a belated rally, his marksmanship was a big factor.

Run Up Three-Goal Margin in Fixture Played Saturday Morning

Knox College hockeyists defeated Wycliffe 3-0, in an interfaculty game played Saturday morning. The Knox sextette had a decided advantage in team play plus an excellent goal keeper, and this was enough to make the difference in the score.

Shortly after the start of the game, Cuthbertson took a pass from Briggs at centre, to start the scoring for Knox. The remainder of the first session went without further scoring, although Knox had an advantage in the play. Peglar, in the Wycliffe goal, gave a fine display of net-minding in the second period to keep the Knox team from scoring. In the final stanza the Knox forward line did some fine work and were rewarded when Orns slipped one past Peglar. Some minutes later Davidson made a rush which beat the Wycliffe defence and scored the final counter of the game.

Knox College—Goal, Weir; defence, Baulch and Davidson; centre, Briggs; wings, Cuthbertson and Orns; subs, Castor, Hamilton and Parkin.

Wycliffe College—Goal, Peglar; defence, Morrissey and Perkins; centre, Wood; wings, Ruche and Fairweather; subs, Zimmerman and Boon.

Meds led from the start and at half time the score was 17-8. In the second half the losers put on a better offence and kept on even terms. Kissel, Heller, Hurvitz and Garbe were best for the victors, and Pfanner and Horton for the losers.

Varsity women's intercollegiate hockey team lost the first game in the city league to Silverwoods by a score of 3 to 0, at Varsity Arena on Saturday night. Silverwoods had the edge all through, and their combination was much superior to the Blue team's, which depended mostly on individual rushes as their threat.

Kay White and Al Donaldson counted first for Silverwoods, after only five minutes of play in the first period. The rest of the stanza was scoreless and only hard luck kept Betty Carter off the score sheet, when she was right on top of Helen Richards, in goal for Silverwoods. The second period was also scoreless with Silverwoods having the better of the play. Fran Crooks, for Varsity, made several nice rushes, and missed the open net, after drawing the goalie to one side.

Varsity had a great chance in the third stanza when Kay White was benched for tripping, but Silverwoods turned the trick, and when Nellie Steele and Marj. Porter combined for Silverwood's second tally, Dot Raffey added the last on a solo rush, and a long shot which completely fooled the Varsity goalie.

Silverwoods—Goal, Helen Richards; defence, Connie Hennessey, Vida Gowland; centre, Kay White; wings, Dot Raffey, Al Donaldson; subs, Mrs. Ferguson, Marj. Porter, Nellie Steele, Ruttier, Sarah McCausland.

Senior Vic—Goal, Cida Kelly; forwards, Billy Jensen, Billy Fowler, Daisy Quance; defence, Eunice Noble, Ed McKillop; subs, Mabel Shaffer, Dorothy MacDonald, Mary Thom and Ann Scott.

Bill Stewart, at centre for the losers, was Varsity's most effective player, scoring both his team's goals. He should have had another, but Davey cut him down as he advanced in on the Marlboro cage. Don Smillie was a tireless worker, both on the defence and on rushes down the ice. He gave Harris plenty of hard shots to handle and was deserving of at least a goal. He was the mainstay of the defence, Dewar having an off night. The latter proved no problem for the speedy Dukes, and also had no success on his sorties down the ice. Harley and Lenahan worked hard and checked back with a will. Ames, in goal, certainly looked bad on a couple of shots, but apart from these he gave a great exhibition of net minding, getting in front of shots that were labelled goals.

Hackett opened the scoring for the Dukes when he followed in fast and picked up the rebound from Underwood's shot on Ames. Stewart was doing time for tripping when that goal was scored. The Gracie-Thoms combination was successful a minute later, the latter taking credit for the counter. Stewart rounded the net for Varsity's point in the middle canto on a pretty piece of individual work. Hackett scored another on a long shot in the third and then Radke made Deportunity to express his opinion on the petition to the class. The following day "The Varsity" published an account which, by implication at least, stated that the petition had been refused. Mr. Perold acceded in part to the request of the petition. Had "The Varsity" been as forehanded in printing this bit of news as it was in printing that of the previous day, all this trouble would have been avoided. On this ground, then, sir, I think you must admit that "The Varsity" was really at fault and should have taken its medicine without the sarcastic editorial comment of Thursday's issue, which is manifestly unjust both to Mr. Perold and the third year class in Pass Economics.

"Few of the students realize what a fundamental change is to be made in this university by the introduction of the new system," continued Dr. Wallace. "A great drop will undoubtedly occur in the first year registration next year. Whether the registration in the future will be affected it is hard to say. What will be permanent, I believe, and sincerely hope, is that the great number of students who at present drop out at the end of first year pass, and who should never have come to the university at all, will no longer come to put in a year 'because they don't know what else to do' when they have finished Junior Matriculation."

ENGLISHMEN VIEW CANADA IN LIGHT OF UNITED STATES

Professor Havelock Denies Existence of Hospitable Relations Overseas

MCGILL ALONE RECOGNIZED

Fewer Canadians Attend Cambridge than Oxford Due to Scholarships

"Miss Eve Powell's statement that the English people are so fond of Canadians that they almost ask you to live with them, is greatly exaggerated," Professor E. A. Havelock told "The Varsity". "Until recent years and especially since the Empire Trade negotiations, few people have made any distinction between Canada and the United States. If there is any difference of treatment of students from these two countries it is because the American rushes in with a lot of noise and the Canadian slips quietly into English ways," said Professor Havelock. He admitted that the English have a soft spot in their hearts for Canadians, but says they cannot be easily distinguished from Americans. "McGill is the only Canadian uni-

Chinese Incense Burner Is Returned To Union

At 1.00 a.m. this morning, the Chinese incense burner which was removed from the Women's Union at a class party two weeks ago, and which "The Varsity" urged editorially the immediate return, was returned to the Union.

When questioned by "The Varsity", Miss Kilpatrick, Dean of U.C. women, stated that when summoned to the door, she found the valuable piece reposing upon the step. "I was unable to perceive anyone except a head peering from behind a fence," she said, expressing her thanks that engraved article had not been injured. There are still, however, some articles that have not been returned.

COLLEGE MARRIAGE UNPOPULAR AT VIC

Humorous Resolution is Defeated at Debate After Lengthy Battle

MARRIED LIFE TOO DEAR

By the verdict of the Student Parliament, undergraduate engagements and marriages are distinctly out of favour at Victoria College. By a standing vote the government was overwhelmingly defeated last night in a motion: "That this house deplores the small number of engagements and marriages among undergraduates."

The question was for the most part treated humorously, few serious arguments being put forward. The chief points for the affirmative were that the educated classes should produce more children than they do, and that university students are at the age when they are best able to reproduce fine children; that the cost to men of entertaining co-eds would decrease; and that marriage would have a settling effect.

The negative claimed that marriage and married life were too expensive for the undergraduate purse; that men should not marry till they have proved their ability to support a wife by their own earnings; that marriage would interfere with studies, and children would cut short an academic career; that university women are much too expensive even before marriage; and that marriage would have an unsettling effect.

The speakers on the paper were H. Rowland, Miss A. Anderson, Miss A. MacKinnon and Miss M. Diehl. J. Bonham, N. Fry, Miss R. Sparling, Miss M. Haugh, H. S. Day, K. Cash, C. L. Cobourn and Earl Lautenslager were among the other speakers.

Little Pal of Charles House Passes, Midnight Interment Into Cold Snow

Charles House, Victoria College men's residence, is in deep mourning to-day, and all flags throughout the campus have been ordered at half-mast.

Shortly after eleven o'clock last night, a sad death occurred in one of the upper rooms, and so to-day all the habits of the famous Vic lodging place are grieving over the bereavements sustained by two of their fellows.

Sharp on the stroke of midnight a procession of kimono clad figures carrying lighted candles, filed out of the house, and proceeded sadly

COLLEGE MATTERS COME BEFORE S.A.C.

Few Concerned About Constitutional Changes in Student Government

SECTIONALISM SCORED

"The lack of interest in the S.A.C. is due to the fact that each college and faculty has its own government, its own interests, attitude and activities," stated Miss A. E. M. Parkes, the women's secretary of the S.A.C., when interviewed by "The Varsity", on the subject of the new constitution, about which neither the students nor the professors seem to know or care anything. "Nevertheless the S.A.C. is undoubtedly useful. It maintains two secretaries, a men's and a women's who are everything from a dealer in second hand books to an information bureau. They look after tickets, excursions, lost and found articles, and pretty nearly everything."

In spite of this, the general opinion is that the S.A.C. is an encumbrance of the earth, a parasite, and that the new constitution will make little difference to its status. One student remarked (Continued on Page 4)

FRATERNITIES ORDERED ABOLISHED AT QUEEN'S

Ruling of Alma Mater Society Forbids Founding of Fraternal Clubs

No fraternities or sororities must be begun at Queen's. Fraternities and sororities already established there must discontinue. Such is the ruling of the Alma Mater Society at the Limestone U.

A motion "that a clause be embodied in the A.M.S. constitution, forbidding the formation of fraternities and sororities composed of members of the A.M.S. within the university, and that amendment of the various faculty societies, including Levana. Further, that sororities and fraternities already formed be given immediate notice to disband," was passed by the A.M.S. executive at the last meeting. There was but one dissenting vote.

Further motion was passed "That Athol Kenny discuss the matter with other members of his organization and that permission of the A.M.S. executive to occupy the house already leased be granted upon assurance of said organization that its purpose is not the formation of a fraternity present or future."

University Faculties Celebrate Superintendent's Achievements

Decade of Service by Colonel LePan is Traced in Illuminated Sketch

MASSEY PROPOSES TOAST
Representatives of Every Department Attend Banquet in Great Hall

A dinner was held in the Great Hall of Hart House last night in honour of Lieutenant-Colonel A. D. LePan, the Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds in the University of Toronto. The many friends of Mr. LePan in the various departments of the university who have been associated with him in the construction of new buildings desired to show their appreciation of his work.

The physical development of the university during the past few years has been phenomenal and to illustrate the large number of buildings, which have been erected during the ten years in which Mr. LePan has been Superintendent the architects associated with Mr. LePan, designed an illuminated sketch which formed the cover of the menu and showed each of these buildings. Dr. A. Primrose acted as the chairman at the dinner and presented the sketch to Mr. LePan, observing that it would act as a reminder of the evening when his friends gathered in the Great Hall to show their appreciation of his services. All those present at the dinner signed their names on the back of the sketch. (Continued on Page 2)

"Varsity" News Staff Is To Meet To-morrow

A brief meeting of all men on the news staff of "The Varsity" will be held in the office in Hart House at 1.00 p.m. to-morrow. Important matters are to be discussed, and all news reporters are expected to attend.

CANDLE IS STOLEN FROM WYMLWOOD

Articles Seldom Stolen from Women's Residences Except Occasional Coat

NO THEFTS AT ST. HILOA'S

"Yes, we have missed an article from Wymilwood lately," said Miss Addison in response to "The Varsity's" query. "It was a candle." She had no theory as to why such a thing had been taken. The Victoria dean told of a leave book taken from the residence seven or eight years ago. "It was just a lark, I suppose," she added, "but we called the executive of the association who had held the party and they bought us a new one. The boys destroyed the old one."

Things are very seldom taken from either Annesley or Wymilwood. Occasionally during a time of confusion such as when students are leaving in the spring, outsiders take advantage and come in. A coat or two has been lost in that way. Once in a long while there might also be a small loss of money.

Miss Cartwright of St. Hilda's knew of nothing that had been lost in recent years during parties. "Some years ago," she said, "when we were in Trinity Park, strangers entered on a few occasions and took small things, but here we have had no trouble." She thought that the size of St. Hilda's affairs eliminated the possibility of these petty thefts which she attributed to the craze for souvenirs.

Hector Charlesworth To Address U.C. Women

He is the author of numerous books of verse and several dramas, the most outstanding of which is "The Golem", which is ranked by authorities (Continued on Page 4)

GRADUATE BUREAU OFFERS GOOD JOBS

Salaried Vocational Advisor is Suggestion Made by Miss Davidson

BUREAU SELF-SUPPORTING

"A graduate of any university anywhere may seek such a position in Canada through us, and a graduate of any Canadian university may register here for a position in any part of the world," explained Miss True Davidson, of the Vocational Bureau, 224 Bloor West, to "The Varsity" yesterday. This office is self-supporting, a unique feature, and its source of revenues is enrollment fees. Hence its continued existence is precarious. "I am convinced that the real answer to this question is the installment in every university of a full time, salaried vocational adviser," declared Miss Davidson. "There are two needs (Continued on Page 4)

HOW THE MALE PICKS THE FRAIL

To-day's quest for the Perfect Female deals with kindred subjects, Charm and Disposition. For the benefit of those who don't know yet what it's all about, this is the second of five lists of twenty questions each, which are being run in the five issues of "The Varsity" this week. Any male in the university may mark the hundred questions for any university female, giving a minimum of zero and a maximum of ten for each question. The marked lists are to be handed in to "The Varsity" at the end of the contest. The female with the highest total score from any one male, and the male who marks the highest score, will be awarded prizes already named.

CHARM

1. How pleasant is her voice?
2. How courteous is she to people she may not like?
3. How good is her sense of humor?
4. How well can she control her temper?
5. Is she a good hostess? Can she make her guests feel at home and at ease?

DISPOSITION

1. How free is she from jealousy?
2. How free is she from petty fault-finding and nagging?
3. How even is her temper?
4. How well can she take a joke on herself?
5. How well does she behave when she can't have her own way?

BRULE LAKE PLAN INCLUDES VARSITY REGATTA COURSE

Alderman Hamilton Outlines Scheme Now Being Considered by Commissions

STEWART POSTPONES IOEA

Controllers Non-Committal on Question that Previously Meant Defeat for Many

Whether the University of Toronto Rowing Club will be able to put a boat-house on a Brule Lake regatta course is still an indefinite problem.

The Brule Lake project has not yet been politically shelved, is the opinion of most of the men concerned, when interviewed by "The Varsity" yesterday. The proposition of a new and adequate regatta course for Toronto was first brought up last February. At that time the city council authorized a committee of engineers to make a report on the question. This report was unanimously accepted by the council, and funds voted for the carrying out of the proposal.

Towards the end of last year the council decided to hold it up for further consideration, and since then very little has been heard of the plan. It was Mayor Stewart's platform to hold up the project until next year, and it is likely that very little will be done (Continued on page 3)

DEGREE CONFERRED—1926

McGill authorities are awaiting the appointment of a new Governor-General to fill the post of university "Visitor", a post left vacant with the departure of His Excellency Lord Willingdon to become Viceroy of India.

What is expected to be the major function of the present year at McGill will be the conferring of an honorary degree upon the new Governor-General at some convenient time, such as the Spring Convocation, after his appointment.

It is recalled by McGill officials that Lord Willingdon's first public address made in Canada after his appointment was the delivering of the Annual (Continued on page 3)

WILDERNESS

Speaking recently at Queen's University, Gilbert Jackson, Toronto Economics don, declared that he envied the external relations of Queen's with the city of Kingston. The press and people of the Limestone City, according to Professor Jackson, are proud of Queen's and regard it as an asset. When he thinks of the attitude of the Toronto newspapers to the University, however, he is "reminded of many years ago, when a voice cried in the wilderness in a land beyond Jordan. To-day, Toronto, in its newspapers, has four voices 'crying in the wilderness and they will not be comforted.'"

Short months ago, had we been commenting editorially on these remarks, we might have been tempted to point out that the situation between campus and city here is not to be regarded merely as the price paid for the location of a university in a large centre, but that the very diversity of opinion existing in Professor Jackson's own locus operandi is indication of the extent to which intellectual activity is stimulated in more populous areas. Queen's, we might have pointed out snugly, is essentially a small university of small town students located happily in the stolid calm of a small town. All, we might have assured our readers, goes merry as a stagnant pool. A spirit of service club auto-hypnosis prevails.

In Toronto, we might have urged, we have the unrestricted clash of minds; we have mental drive, force, and the healthy tumult of the unrestricted interchange of ideas. We don't want the unanimity of the graveyard, we might have thundered. We prefer our own seething cauldron, even if it does bubble forth toil and trouble at times.

Picture the howls of derisive delight which would arise from the Thousand Islands region if we voiced any such sentiments to-day!

We have our voices, true enough, but they are indeed crying in a wilderness . . . and a wilderness which strangely resembles—if we may mix our Biblical metaphors—a valley of dry bones.

To-day our proudest boast, be it known, is that the University of Toronto is the university which contains professors who like to declare that tar and feathers is the proper treatment for dons who dare to assert their rights as private citizens. The University of Toronto, be it published to the ends of the earth, is the university in an aspiring Anglo-American city of three quarters of a million souls three of whose four daily newspapers and a large percentage of whose citizens brand as preachers of sedition and perverters of the young a group of the most vigorous-minded professors because they dare to declare the radical doctrine that the rights of free speech and free assembly are a British heritage and the cornerstone of democracy.

COMMENT

Under the head, "Upsetting The Apple Cart", Professor Gilbert Norwood contends—in an article in last week's Saturday Night, questioning the authorship of the current alleged Shavian opus—that there are "hundreds of us who could have written The Apple Cart lying in a hammock."

Might we suggest upsetting the hammock?

FACULTIES FETE LEPAN

Sir Robert Falconer spoke in appreciative terms of Mr. LePan's work in the university. The Hon. Vincent Massey, who was formerly chairman of the Property Committee and therefore closely associated with Mr. LePan, proposed the health of the guest. Mr. LePan, who received an ovation on rising to reply to the toast, expressed his thanks to all present and dealt with the physical growth of the university.

One hundred and fifty persons drawn from faculty members in every part of the university attended the dinner among whom were the heads of the various departments under Mr. LePan's direction. The evening ended by Mr. J. Campbell McInnes, accompanied by Professor H. R. Kemp, singing a group of folk-songs.

HEAVY SELLING OF TICKETS

"The Gondoliers" is one of the best Gilbert and Sullivan light operas," Harold W. Stafford, fourth year Victoria and president of the society, told "The Varsity" last night. He was confident that this year's presentation would overshoot the high mark that "The Pirates of Penzance" set last year. "Gilbert and Sullivan is very popular at universities," he said. "Our leading lights are people of experience," he said, "Cam Graham, Jean Evans, Betty Oram and Gord Maxwell have been three or four years with the society. They are working under the direction of Thos. J. Crawford. "The Gondoliers" will play Hart House from February 7 to 12, with a matinee on Saturday afternoon, February 7.

Art, Music and Drama

The Apple Cart

Is The Apple Cart just a verbal vaudeville show or is it a noble and sympathetically humorous attempt to see beyond the forms and follies and into the real nature of government?

Has Bernard Shaw in his old age collected into one place all the smart cracks about America, woman, kings, bureaucracy, and progress, and depended on his reputation gained through forty years of intelligent chaff to see him through once more; or has he to crown his brilliant philosophic career, poured into The Apple Cart all the richest cream skimmed from three score years of thought and experience?

The answer depends on whether or not you are a properly inoculated Shavian.

The Apple Cart is without any doubt one of the very worst plays ever presented upon the stage. There is no intelligible plot, no development of character, no recognizable atmosphere. It is a hodge-podge of conversational propaganda linked around two hypothetical incidents, and emphasized with a little slap-stick comedy. As drama it is pure bunk.

Nevertheless we have no doubt that victims of the Shavian complex will find The Apple Cart amusing and enlightening upon the stage, just as they appreciate Amos and Andy over the radio or Will Rogers in their favourite journal.

Properly sugar-coated with an imaginative setting, fine clothes and fantastic happenings, there are thousands of fine people who slowly with glamorous rapture will suck the sweet exterior and then carelessly spit out the bitter medicine—if there is any bitter medicine—beneath.

As it will be impossible to dwell among cultured persons during the next three weeks without discussing cabinet ministers, royal domesticity, the election of a king to parliament, and the influence of big business on government, it is advisable that you should see The Apple Cart at once in order to become acquainted with the new vocabulary it will set loose in Toronto.

Only the pen of a super-critic could deal with the production of The Apple Cart offered by Messrs. Jones and Colborne at the Royal Alexandra Theatre. Had they opened in New York, American columnists would undoubtedly have seized the opportunity to expand upon the subject.

The Little Playhouse

Last night the Little Playhouse opened its 1931 season with the premieres of three short plays written by Toronto authors.

The first play, One Chance in a Million, by Florence Blaisdel, was a finished production of a war episode which a French woman and a German soldier were thrown together for a brief fifteen minutes, mere flies in the wheels of time. The stage business was effective and the cast remarkably well chosen. Pat Cleland as the French woman was admirable. Dickson-Kenwin, himself, took the part of the German.

Fraumie, the second play, by Rica MacLean Farquharson, was light comedy with well handled technique, simple and very effective. It aims to show the psychology of parents with a gay young daughter who has a passion for modernistic furniture. The acting was not quite up to the standard of the first play, though Fred Fisher did rather well as the father.

The last of the three, Open Doors, by Lois Reynolds, a graduate of last year's class at Victoria College, seemed to lack the finish of the other two plays. A two-scene drama on the immigration problem—it was almost too melodramatic. The cast was on the whole, poor, and the stage effects not good. However, Pat Cleland and Lloyd Summerville played the melodrama to the limit and acted well in the roles given to them.

With the Theatres

For the benefit of our readers, pictures are graded as follows in this column: Average (0), below average (-1) or (-2), above average (1) or (2).

Imperial.

Scandal Sheet. (-).—George Bancroft, Kay Francis and Clive Brook—real drama in which Bancroft is said to out-Bancroft himself. A newspaperman who sacrifices his friends, his wife and himself to his profession. News is news, whatever the cost, is his creed. Action is swift, atmosphere perfect, and a rather full cast is good throughout. Besides it is a three-star production. The shorts are fair, and vaudeville is above average, with one especially original production. Loew's.

DuBarry, Woman of Passion. (0).—An unhistorical drama of Louis XVI spoiled by too obvious inaccuracies and poor acting. Some spectacular court scenes and rather fine acting by Norma Talmadge save the picture from the lower depths. William Farnum is back on the screen and gives to the role of the king necessary strength and sense of jealous cruelty. Conrad Nagel appears in spasms and is a good hero.

Shea's.

Brothers. (1-).—Bert Lytell plays the double role of orphan brothers brought up in contrasting environments. He is a smooth performer; and Maurice Black and Frank McCormack make interesting criminal types. The story is very improbable and always seems so; but rather appealing—especially the court room climax and the trick finale. Dorothy Sebastian just smiles and looks pretty. Vaudeville: thought it was dull but others laughed.

Tivoli.

Kismet. (1-).—Except for Otis Skinner, this million dollar production falls rather flat. He alone among the leads preserves the oriental richness of gesture and speech throughout the play. His portrayal of Hajj, the rascally beggar, who in one mad day sacrifices

JR. S.P.S. DOWNS O.C.E. 22-15 IN INTERFACULTY CAGE GAME

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

After all arrangements had been made for the intercollegiate basketball team to play a game with the Hamilton Normal School Grads at U.T.S. on Friday night, the Hamilton outfit has now written to say that it will be impossible for them to come on that date. They would like to have it postponed till the 20th of February, which is just one week before the intercollegiate tournament at Queen's.

Since both the Varsity teams are busy right now with the city league it is perhaps just as well that this game be played later. The Normal squad showed great form against the intermediates in Hamilton, and the seniors will have to improve their defensive system if they expect to make much headway against the sharpshooters from Hamilton.

The two Varsity teams will clash for the first time on Wednesday of this week. Although the players on both outfits practiced together for a short time at the beginning of the season, they have not met for weeks. Although the intermediates will be strengthened by the addition of Betty Thomas for this game only, they will not likely be as strong as the seniors. However, rivalry between these two Blue squads is always very keen, and the game should be a red hot struggle.

Household Science are holding their swimming meet on Wednesday night of this week in the L.M. pool. This meet will make the third faculty meet held this year, with the U.C. event still to take place. The date for the interfaculty has been definitely set for the 4th of March.

The intercollegiate hockey team will come up against the strong Aura Lee outfit in the second game of the city league to-night when they clash at 7 o'clock at the Blue Arena. Although Varsity lost out to Silverwoods in the initial struggle, they have profited by their mistakes in the first game, and are out to avenge themselves to-night.

St. Hilda's made it two straight against St. Mike's in the interfaculty series yesterday afternoon when they trounced the Double Blue outfit 1 to 0. The game was very sloppy and the St. Mike's team showed lack of practice, while the Saints' forward line was working extremely well, and their defence was air-tight.

Queen's have not yet notified Varsity as to the date for their intercollegiate hockey fixture in Kingston. It is likely that the game will be set

SCHOOL TRIMS O.C.E. IN BASKETBALL GAME

SCORE 22-15 FOR SCHOOL

Junior School defeated O.C.E. 22-15 in the roughest game of basketball that has yet been played in the interfaculty series, last night in the little gym at Hart House. Except for the last few minutes in which Jr. S.P.S. showed some good team work, the game was a poor exhibition of basketball. Twenty-five fouls were called during the game and only twelve baskets scored.

School led all the way and were ahead 11-8 at half time. Waldon and Lichty for School, Barton and Bowman for the teachers, were the pick of the contenders.

Junior School (22) — Waldon, Lichty, Cahoon, Tenenbaum, Wood, Wong, Wilkinson, Cooperman, Hagerman.

O.C.E. (15)—Barton, Foyer, Hull, Watkins, Bowman, Stephens, Brown, Davies.

SMITH SEEKS TO REPEAT PREVIOUS TRACK GAINS

Standish, Eaton and Connolly Are Powerful Threats in 440 Trip

For the third week in succession Don Smith seeks victory along the oval track at Hart House when he will attempt to repeat his successes of the two previous starts at the Indoor Track Meet, which will be held to-morrow evening at 5.15. But it is doubtful if Don will succeed in this attempt to win the 440 yard crown, as he will be at a disadvantage in the shorter run and will be up against Ralph Standish, well-known quarter-miler, Russ Eaton, School frosh who is going great guns just at present, and Walter Connolly another School man whose speed is well known.

In the one mile walk it is expected that Bert Goulding will repeat his victory of last fall, while Bob Dennis is expected to come through with a win in the pole vault. The interfaculty standing for the two meets so far run off finds U.C. leading with 19 points, Dents and School tied for second with 8 points, and Meds with 1 point.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By T. A. F.

One of the best sporting events of the year is slated for to-morrow night when the senior interfaculty assault opens a two-night show in Hart House. When you consider that downtown fight fans pay anything up to five dollars for the "privilege" of seeing half a dozen bouts in which professionals push each other around the ring, or else watch a couple of 250 pounders go through the motions in a "raslin" (apologies to Lou Marsh) match, the Varsity show is worth three times the price of admission. And this year's fistiana will be better than ever. Most of last season's men are back and battling for places on the team for the intercollegiate assault. It is almost impossible to pick a winner in any one class, so closely are the boys matched.

There may be better goal-keepers in the O.H.A. than "Doc" Ames who takes care of the nets for the Blue seniors, but if there are we haven't seen them yet. The opposing attackers have been having considerable trouble all season in defeating Red Porter's men, only small scores being registered against us in every league game but the last one. A good deal of the credit goes, of course, to the persistent backchecking of some of the forwards, and the defence also comes in for a certain amount of the kudos. But the lion's share must be given, in our opinion, to the ex-Newmarket star in the "T" nets. Unlike many star twine-guardians, Ames seldom has an off night and his work is consistently steady, even spectacular at times. In the last two seasons we haven't seen the Doc weaken on more than half a dozen shots which is something that cannot be said even of the great "Stuffy" Mueller, who is rated by most the best in amateur company.

So the Intercollegiate Football Union has decided to fall in line with the rest of the major loops and adopt the Canadian edition of the inside pass. The idea appears to be to open up the game and give the weaker teams a chance against the stronger ones. Too bad we couldn't have used the pass against Queen's on November the 8th last. The forward pass may be all right but it is possible to overestimate its potentialities. For one thing the zone of interference is at present too small for the successful completion of many passes. Even in U.S. football with unlimited interference the percentage of completed passes is not as large as would be imagined. Then again, under Canadian rules it is possible to evolve a defence against the play which is almost perfect. We had this system shown to us by one of the leading coaches in Canada whose team when on a tour out West last fall, broke up most of the opposition's passes before they could get started and the Westerners are supposed to be experts at tossing the onsides. We would back any team of average tacklers using this play against nine passes out of ten. However, the play should undoubtedly open up the game and it certainly needs opening up. There was too much of the old "two bucks and a kick" football shown last year, with the emphasis on the kick.

DENTS DEFEAT S.P.S. IN FAST BASEBALL GAME

Dents defeated School in a closely fought baseball game last night at the big gym when they blanked S.P.S., while they put across 3 runs themselves. The game was well played, with each run being well earned.

Dents—Mason, Horton, Gardiner, Golden, Mitchell, Backus, Hackett, Brett and Bancroft.

School—Ballahey, Jewett, Boon, Wilson, Carmichael, Proudfoot, Jansen, Moeser and Campbell.

MEDS LOSE 2-0 TO U.C. ICEMEN

Evans Stars for College Team, Scoring Both Goals in Last Two Periods

FIRST VICTORY FOR U.C.

Senior U.C. blanked Senior Meds yesterday afternoon by 2 goals to 0 in an interfaculty hockey fixture. They scored their counters in the second and third periods. This is the first win for the men of Red and White.

Evans scored both goals, getting his first with a nice shot from the corner and the other from centre ice.

Evans, Wilky and Loffree were the best for the winners. Keith, Graham and McLeod stood out for Meds.

Senior U.C.—Loffree, Ward, Cook, Robinette, Evans, Wiley and Anderson.

FORESTERS HAVE DUTY OF PUBLIC EDUCATION

Canadian Timber Must Receive Scientific Management Says Wilson

"Canada's prosperity in future will depend on her forests and it is the duty of every forester to do his bit towards educating the public to the fact that we must handle our forests on a scientific basis. This was the statement of Mr. Elwood Wilson, chief forester of the Laurentide Pulp and Paper Co., speaking at the Foresters' Club annual banquet in Hart House.

Canada's spruce forests upon which our pulp and paper industry depends are unsurpassed by those in any other country, with the possible exception of Russia. We have a great advantage over that country, however, in that our rivers flow south while Siberian rivers flow north. Our water-power is immense.

We cannot have agricultural progress without forestry progress. Canada is a northern country and wood will always be a necessity.

A few years ago there were no technically trained foresters in the employment of private companies. To-day all the large companies have forestry graduates in charge of their woodlands departments.

Mr. L. E. Simpson, president of the club, acted as chairman, and Dr. C. D. Howe, dean of the faculty introduced the speaker.

UNIFORMS UNBECOMING TO BALLROOM FUNCTION

The Military Ball of the C.O.T.C. held in Hart House last Friday evening differed from regular military functions inasmuch as no military dress or regalia was worn except by a few special guests.

Reasons for this as learned at staff headquarters were that since officers were only members by the year, uniforms are not enforced at all. Also the uniforms of the students are grey, working outfits which are quite impossible for a crowded ballroom and quite uncomfortable for dancing. It would be a great matter of expense to obtain special dress for the ball. "The Varsity" was unable to find out definitely whether uniforms along military style will be worn at next year's dance but it was considered very unlikely.

INTERCOLLEGIATE TEAM IS PICKED FROM SR. ASSAULT

Large Entries Give Promise of Mighty Tussles by Competing Faculties

O.A.C. NOW CHAMPIONS

Rapsey and Wilton, Tough Boxers; Smith and Newell, Wrestling Men

Whether Varsity will have a strong team in the intercollegiate assault or not this year will be decided to-morrow and Thursday in Hart House when the annual senior assault takes place. The team to represent Toronto in the meet will be chosen from the winners of this tournament and indications point to some excellent bouts in the wrestling, boxing and fencing classes.

The entry list is exceptionally large this year and the draw for the bouts will be made to-day. Not only is the entry list larger than usual, but the quality promises to be the best in some years and one of the home faculties will have an excellent chance to take the championship now held by the Ontario Agricultural College. With a place on the intercollegiate team at stake every man will be in the ring to give his best and spectators will be assured of some high class bouts on the program. In the junior interfaculty assault the competitors showed a willingness to mix things up and this will probably be the case in the senior as well.

In the 112 pound boxing, Fields, who is an intercollegiate boxer, and MacKay, a fast man will battle for supremacy. Both have been showing good form in workouts and should put up some fine scraps. Teddy Fell, the intercollegiate champion of the 126 pound boxers, appears to be headed for another title, but will meet with some strong opposition before he is through. Fell is a hard hitter, is fast on his feet and can stand plenty of punishment.

The 135 pound class brings together several promising fighters, among them being Magner and Stone, both having the ability to keep cool under fire. McCarty is an experienced boxer and shows good form. Jack Rapsey seems to be the class of the 145 class. Murray Wilton, intercollegiate and former U.C.C. champion, seems to be the best of the 156 pound class.

He has plenty of experience, has a strong right and possesses amazing speed. The wrestlers will not lack experience and hard fighting in their bouts. Brownlee, in the 112 pound and Robertson in the 118 pound group, are both intercollegiate wrestlers with much experience. Bannister, strong and tricky wrestler, will have plenty on his hands in the 145 class when he stacks up against Acher and Hymen, both novices with ability. Eaton, in the 145 pound group, is a sensational newcomer, and showed plenty in the previous assaults this year.

Doug Smith, crafty, slow and steady, is the intercollegiate champion of the 158 pounders, and bids fair to repeat this year in the same class. Newell, in the heavy class, is a determined wrestler and although no fast or tricky, can hold his own with any opponent.

about it this year. "As far as I can see, the matter has been passed and therefore will be put through," said Alderman Hamilton. "At present a commission consisting of the works commissioner, the parks commissioner and the city solicitor are at work on the plan. Before any work can be begun, the council must sign an agreement with the government that any damage resulting from an overflow will be paid for by the city."

When Alderman Hamilton was asked if alternative plans, such as the Island and beaches, might go through, he replied, "The Island project is impractical. When the Toronto Ball

Atlantic coast lobster fishermen fared well in 1930 in catch but not so well in prices. Nova Scotia fishermen landed a record catch of 530,000 pounds, of which 126,000 pounds were shipped in shell while 2,024 cases of canned lobster were packed.

Boxing on snowshoes will be one of the novelties at the Banff Winter Carnival opening February 7, marking another point in the great battle for popularity honors between snowshoes and skis. George Sutherland, Alberta fly-weight champion 1926 will be in charge of the bouts.

Roaring down from Edmonton through the Bow River Gap through which 50 years ago the first C.P.R. survey party made its laborious passage, airplanes bearing aquatic stars will steer for Banff where their passengers will take part in the open-air swimming and diving events, unique in winter sports, in the hot springs at the Banff Winter Carnival on February 9.

Toronto and Ontario recently honored their Grand Old Man of railroading, William Fulton, assistant general passenger agent for the Canadian Pacific Railway at Toronto, who had completed 40 years' service with the company. He was a guest of honor at the Royal York Hotel at a banquet given in his honor by his fellow-officers of the company to celebrate the occasion.

Letters pour into the radio department of the Canadian Pacific Railway daily in connection with the "Melody Mike" feature every Monday night. One lady, writing from Vulcan, Alta., says in part:—"There were six in my home listening to the broadcast and I know of at least a dozen other ladies that were tuned in. I am writing to you to say how much we enjoyed 'our broadcast.'"

Postal history repeated itself February 2, when an air mail notice between Winnipeg and Pembina, North Dakota, on the international boundary, was put into effect by the Canadian Postal Department. Pembina was linked up with Winnipeg, then Port Garry, in 1857 through the United States mail service. The prairie airmail postal service will be expanded by the Federal Government in the near future.

At the fifth corn show held recently under the auspices of the Saskatchewan Corn Growers' Association, one of the finest exhibits of corn in the history of Western Canada was on display. The show was held in preparation for the World's Grain Exhibition to be held at Regina in 1932, and many entries in the corn classes of the latter may be expected from the farmers of Western Canada. A total of $19,000 is being offered in cash prizes in the different classes for corn.

Snowshoes from many parts of Canada and the United States gathered at Queen City at the end of January to participate in the 18-mile Snowshoes Marathon and International Championship Races. The Mayor of Quebec held a reception for the ladies' clubs at the Chateau Frontenac where a Canadian supper was later served to the visitors. The Chateau Frontenac was also headquarters of the official club throughout the convention, which included ice canoe races on the St. Lawrence and exhibitions on Dufferin Terrace.

Club had its stadium there they were forced to move across the Bay because the Island couldn't hold over fifteen thousand people; thus you can imagine what would be the case if a hundred thousand people wanted to see a boat race. As for the Beaches, I, myself, don't think the idea is a very bad one.

The three controllers interviewed were reluctant to commit themselves to any definite opinion. Controller Hacker stated that since he had been out of the city council last year he couldn't very well say what was to happen. Controller Ramden put the very non-committal "I don't know" to every question that was asked, while Controller Robbins said that as far as he himself was concerned, the matter was entirely dropped. It was impossible to get in touch with either Mayor Stewart or Controller Simpson. City Clerk Somers thought that the reason the plan had not yet been brought up in council was the fact that all those who had advocated it had been defeated in the recent elections, and that so far nobody had been sufficiently anxious to bring it up again.

marked that the only return we get for our S.A.C. fee is "The Varsity", which is a doubtful blessing, and, as the new constitution does not seem to greatly affect the undergraduate newspaper, it can make little difference to the student body as a whole. Another thought it a good idea to have a joint men's and women's council, so long as there was equal representation.

Dorothy Porter, III U.C.: "The university is too big. The division into colleges tends to create petty jealousies. What love is lost between Vic and U.C.? As for Trinity it seems quite apart from the rest of the university. I feel no interest in either the S.A.C. or its new constitution, although I am interested in the W.U.A."

Professor DeChamp, when interviewed, said: "I have not yet read the constitution thoroughly, but I am certainly interested in it. In fact, I have put the paper aside to read it when I have more time."

theories with "The Dybbuk" as a world classic.

His address consisted of an appeal to the Jewish student youth of Canada and the United States to return to the culture of their fathers and to take a greater interest in Yiddish cultural problems and Jewish literature and affairs. He stressed the fact that to exist a race must have a culture of its own, and that on no account should a race accept another race's culture without first being well acquainted with its own. He showed that the greatest reason for other nations ridiculing Jews was because they were so ready to forget their own culture and attempt to mould themselves into another type.

He made a plea for the acceptance of the language which is active in the daily life of the people and that is the language of the mighty literature of the Jews, telling of the return of the Russian students to the use of the Yiddish language.

Mr. Katzenelenbogen, distinguished poet who has taken up residence with the local Jewish community, also addressed the gathering, endorsing Mr. Laycock's appeal. Following the addresses a question period was held.

which every university student feels and which our Canadian universities are failing to supply. Both of these could be met by the appointment of a vocational adviser."

The first of these needs is aid in the selection of studies and extra-curricular activities in the light of the future life of the student. Much unemployment of college graduates would be avoided, according to Miss Davidson, by preventing students incapable of handling or co-operating with people from blindly training for and entering occupations where such human relationships are fundamental. Again, it is most unfortunate that a student planning to enter journalism should never have thought of working for the college paper. Or what point is there in a girl earning her fees behind a counter unless she plans to enter the merchandising field later? The function of a vocational adviser is obvious.

"The other side of the usefulness of such an individual is in the directing of personality development," explained Miss Davidson. "Every student takes for granted the eccentricities of his fellows. But those very

The Matter Pending is the College Marriage; There's No Defending The Baby Carriage

By C. L. C.

Victoria College does not yearn for more undergraduate marriages. Be careful, Vic. Accept no substitutes! O—O

The women were out in force, but the men formed a compact phalanx of negative votes which resisted all their efforts.

O—O
Henry Rowland deplored that, "with marriage just a distant vision, college undergraduates can have no love affairs—not what you'd really call love affairs." Words from the wise.

C—C
And again, "Where would we all be, Mr. Speaker, if it hadn't been for our mothers?" But the Speaker refused to pursue the question further.

O—O
Miss Anderson stands by her principles, no matter who suffers.

O—O
Sparks from the grindstone:
O—O

"Women should be married, as marriage is as essential to a home as a can-opener."

O—O
"Love doesn't make the world go round; it only makes us dizzy, and everything seems to be going round."

O—O
"When a woman enters marriage she exchanges the attentions of all the men of her acquaintance for the attention of one."

O—O
Brother Bonham drew on philosophy, mathematics and Bernard Shaw to prove that if he had had more time he might have proved something.

O—O
Mr. Fry should meet Isabel Jordan. He would like to be engaged, but apparently doesn't know how.

O—O
Annesley Hall is to be made an apartment house for married couples, and Burwash is to give up poker for pink teas. Will wonders never cease?

O—O
Courses in home-making, house-keeping and child-training are advocated for men. O Death, where is thy sting?

NO BRAINS AT ALL SUMS UP WISHES OF ONE BRAVE MAN

Proverbs Quoted to Prove Futility of Searching for

"NON-PERFECT" IS DESIRED

Others Object to Answering Dumb Questions About Dumb Subjects

The search after a Perfect Female is not a novel idea. In the far-off days of Solomon sprang the everlasting question: "Who can find a virtuous woman? For her price is far above rubies." Here is the answer for the perplexed male: "She riseth up while it is yet night and giveth meat to her household . . . She seeketh wool and flax and worketh willingly . . . etc." (For further information see Proverbs XXXI.)

After vigorous inquiry, "The Varsity" found most modern males to be strong in the opinion that Perfect Females are scarce, that they don't know any, and prefer not to! The fairer sex seem to feel the same way. Few wish to be perfect. Fewer wish to be known publicly as such. One remarked threateningly: "I would choke to death in cold blood anyone who dared to call me perfect!"

A daring youth volunteered the statement: "Perfect females aren't nice. I like them non-perfect—they are more interesting and exciting." Which proves that there is such a

STUENTS IN FAVOUR

"Fraternalism are one thing at this university that should be abolished," said Professor J. Satterly in reference to the article appearing in yesterday's "Varsity" concerning the abolishment of fraternities and sororities at Queen's University.

"Such organizations bring about the formation of cliques," he continued. "They prevent students not in them from knowing those who are, lessening university acquaintances. I understand that there are no fraternities at Trinity or Victoria Colleges, and they are to be congratulated. If I had my way fraternities would be wiped out. I know little about them, but my general idea is that they are bad."

Officers of fraternities at the University of Toronto had little to say about the situation at Queen's. Several had not read the article in question and did not wish to be quoted. Several students, non-members of fraternities, said they thought they were of value to members, especially those who did not live in the city.

LIFE IS NO IDIOT'S TALE EMPHASIZES DR. MICKLEM

Seek Religion in Everyday Experiences is Advice of Queen's Theologian

"Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, for he hath visited and redeemed His people," was the text of the sermon delivered in Victoria College Chapel Sunday morning by Professor Nathaniel Micklem, President of Queen's University Theological College.

"Is religious experience a special kind of experience coming from God?" Professor Micklem asked. "There are three worlds—the physical, aesthetic and the religious. When in search for religion, look for it in ordinary experiences."

Professor Micklem pointed out that with different people religious feeling varies in intensity and quality, since religion is an attitude of mind. The Christian attitude to God is one of faith and trust, to man is one of genuine brotherly affection, and to life is one of acceptance.

"Life is not a tale told by an idiot," it was emphasized, "and Christian experience is one of God, coming to men as they face life with its joy and sorrow, beauty and ugliness, with faith and trust. This experience is a mystery, but if it is beautiful and good, it is not true and real?"

"Christ or atheism; Christ or bolshevism for India? That is the question that Christian missionaries are called upon to answer," declared Rev. Perry Horton to T.I.C.C.U. at Wymilwood yesterday in an address on "The Ceylon and India General Mission."

"India has come to the parting of the ways and her people are rapidly losing faith in the old mythology and gods and they are ready to accept new beliefs," continued Mr. Horton. "The responsibility of giving India a new belief rests on the church of the west. The church has yet to realize the extent of this responsibility and the fact that heart, unlimited energy and brain are needed to cope with the situation."

Miss Davidson, the head of the Vocational Bureau, advocates a Vocational Adviser for students, to help them pick out summer jobs and permanent professions. Of the students interviewed by "The Varsity" on this subject, all except two agreed that the idea is a good one. The majority of them also stated that their summer jobs were of great use in their future work.

Sydney Scher, III Meds: An excellent idea. I worked as a speller on a sight-seeing bus last summer. On this job I picked up a great deal of knowledge about other cities and countries and made a large number of acquaintances, all of which will prove of great benefit in the future.

Art Leary, I S.P.S.: At S.P.S. there is a professor who advises the students what jobs would be most useful to them and efforts are made to secure them for the undergraduates during their summers. I am in Engineering and was advised to get a job with a construction gang, electrifying districts. This position, which will be of very great benefit in my career, I hope to be able to secure. It will also count towards the shop work which I must accomplish to get my degree.

Sydney Caplan, I Meds: It is an excellent idea. I need a summer job and it would help me to get one.

Jack Hamilton, I Law: As far as I am concerned it would be a waste of money to maintain such a bureau. I work with the playgrounds during the summer and all year. While this task has no direct connection with the profession of law, it will nevertheless prove very beneficial in teaching me how to handle people to the best effect.

The other objector to the idea stated his views very definitely and clearly, but preferred to remain anonymous. He opposed the scheme because "the adviser would be inspired with the red Bolshevism of Moscow to corrupt

This trip was ordered for the president by his physician when Sir Robert resumed his duties last October after a protracted period of illness. It is hoped that the two-month sojourn will restore him to full vigour.

YIDDISH CULTURE IS DECADENT ART

'Jews do not Know Yiddish and Clannishness'

MR. LAYVICK SPEAKS

Is it feasible to attempt to stimulate Yiddish culture among the Canadian Jewish youth? Mr. Layvick, who addressed the Student League for Yiddish Culture on Saturday, thought that it was. Students, both Jewish and Christian, seem to disagree.

"Yiddish culture would necessitate a knowledge of the Yiddish language and Jews don't know Yiddish," quoth Gordon Shillings, I Pol. Sci. "It would be a decided obstacle to Yiddish culture. The development of Yiddish culture in a small town like Toronto, where there are few Jews, would develop clannishness, more accentuated than at present and would prove a great hindrance in the assimilation of the Jewish people in the Canadian melting pot."

EGYPTIAN STORY OF WHEAT HELD TO BE POSSIBLE

Wheat Retains Fertility for Indefinite Period, Affirms
Western Authority

Montreal Que. — Condition rather than age is the essential feature of seed wheat and therefore the recent stories from Egypt of the sprouting of grain discovered in the tombs of the kings who died thousands of years ago are not so far-fetched as they might appear, according to Herman Trelle of Wembley, Peace River District, well-known grain expert and twice winner of the world's wheat championship at Chicago's International Livestock Fair.

Questioned further as to the Egyptian grain tales, Mr. Trelle stated that the only way to prove or disprove the claims of fertility for antique wheat would be to get some seeds and test them. "Dryness is the great thing with wheat," he explained. "I have been quite successful with seed wheat harvested in 1902 and planted in 1928. The Egyptian claim is quite possible, allowing the requisite conditions for preservation of the seed. And after all, wheat has not really changed since its first use by men. We have altered shape and arrangement of grains, but the only real changes have been protein variations."

Mr. Trelle, who took part of his education in Westphalia, is of Alsatian extraction and his great-grandfather was a soldier of Napoleon's forces during the famous retreat from Moscow in 1812.

KEEN DEBATING FEATURES TILTS AT BIOLOGY CLUB

Resolved that Heredity is a
More Potent Factor than Environment

NEGATIVE WINS SUPPORT

Apes, Ants, Abe Lincoln and Einstein All Used as Examples

"Man is greater than the ape because he has mastered his environment," stated V. Wilby, leader of the affirmative in the debate "Resolved that heredity is a more potent factor in shaping human life and character than environment", at the meeting of the Biology Club at Annesley Hall last night. Mr. Wilby claimed that it was not environment but heredity which produced great men such as Lincoln and Einstein.

B. Hamly, the leader of the negative, using the ant as an example, said that in case of a change of environment the ant must change its hereditary instincts in order to survive. J. Oughton second speaker for the affirmative, stated that men are not born equal, and to prove his stand went into the statistics about twins.

The negative supporter, S. Savage, brought out the point that the prolongation of the period of adolescence in man increases the importance of environment and education in the forming of character.

After a short discussion, a vote was taken in which the negative side received the most support.

ONLY EIGHT UNIVERSITIES STATES COLUMBIA'S HEAD

Educational Nomenclature is

Schools

New York — There are eight real universities in the United States said Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University, in an address recently.

"It is difficult as time goes on, to get any straight thinking on higher education and the colleges and universities," he told the Associate Alumnae of Barnard College during their annual luncheon at the Hotel Pennsylvania. "There is more nonsense expressed on these subjects than on any others, except perhaps the tariff and war debts."

He said that this "nonsense" arose largely from the loose use of the terms college and university.

Fleshy Damsels Find Narrow Path Difficult

Four young damsels of the university have already greatly diminished their chances of winning the Perfect Female Contest. At noon yesterday they were seen by a number of students trying to make their way through a thin open space in the fence between the Press Building and the Chemistry Building. Matters became greatly complicated, especially when one of the young ladies, rather plump in nature, seemed to have become wedged tight in this new passageway, but before any of the onlookers could rush to her assistance, she had escaped this deadly trap. Amid scathing aspersions and some sarcastic remarks, the four young co-eds, blushing vividly their way past the Baldwin House towards the Women's Union. But it may be that they are to be excused for this slight adventure, as rumour has it that the above mentioned are of the freshest species.

ON TAKING NOTES

Burns' "chief among us takin' notes" at least had a definite purpose for his note-taking; he was one of the snooping tribe of reporters, whose harvest may be so much the richer the more pointless and stupid the verbatim report. But, except for an eccentric and comparatively small group who have the virulent "Varsity" complex, students of the University of Toronto are not of this ilk. Then why notes?

In any large class may be seen earnest damsels and grave youths, furrowed of brow and flying of pen, catching the pearly words of wisdom dripping from learned lips—often by route of the paper. Scattered amongst them are the epicureans, who occasionally, with an expression of nice discrimination, decorate the virgin page with a choice mot. A few abstemious individuals sit with arms folded, an aloof superiority radiating from their critical gaze; they may have lost their note-books or forgotten to fill their pens, but for the nonce they are the elite. There may even be some solitary being, replete with pen and paper, who takes no notes at all—that is, there may be.

Then, the oracle suspending operations until the next lecture, the earnest students wend their way homeward, and pore devotedly for many a nocturnal hour over the distilled wisdom in their big, black note-books. The epicureans ponder long over their ultra-distilled brand, pursuing the flowing streams of thought of which it is the well-spring. And what of the aloof few?—They stride home and copy notes with diligent toil and care!

Perhaps! If not, why notes? Whither notes? Why this mar- rying of clean, white, shiny paper? Ah! Eureka! At the ghastly hour betwixt April and May, as the midnight chimes are knelling, there sit the wild-eyed students! The earnest, the epicurean, the aloof—there they all are—writhing amongst stacks of notes, and mumbling to themselves. What use now the hefty library tomes? What price now the dear delights of plumbing philosophic streams? What pleasure now the lofty heights of calm hauteur? To notes—allons!

Despite all that has been done there are one hundred million more people now than when Carey started work in India in 1793. As the population increased the number of missionaries sent out has remained stationary. At present there are 500 native states untouched by Christian influence. That means that there is a responsibility for evangelical work in a wide territory."

Art, Music and Drama

Organ Recital

The new series of organ recitals is proving a real success. The audiences are large and enthusiastic and the variety of performers on the same organ reveals widely different personalities and playing characteristics.

One thing about Mr. Robb's programs which enhances their value is the fact that almost every phase of musical taste gets something out of them. The feature of the day was the remarkable production of Reubke, the Sonata in C minor, opening suddenly with the enunciation of a morose but plaintive theme, the number traverses a variety of moods with the theme never far away and through a torrent of technical tours de force and impassioned vigour, culminates in a magnificent peroration, the new Tuba coming through with great effectiveness. The number was heartily appreciated and Mr. Robb is to be congratulated on his excellent rendition.

Dr. Horwood's Prelude, Passacaglia and Fugue, which received its premiere yesterday is good solid writing in a most respectable and conservative style. The two subjects are good and the variations in the passacaglia assume pianistic proportions at times.

A piquante dance by Boellmann was cleverly registered and cleanly played. Dripping Spring, by Clokey, and The Dance of the Reed Flutes, from the Nutcracker Suite, were quite pleasing. —R.A.McE.

Re Debates Committee

Editor "The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

It is all very well to talk about the lack of interest in debates, and to complain of the small attendance, etc. I wonder if it has ever occurred to the Debates Committee that possibly the time at which the debates are held is a prominent factor. The debates, I believe, are usually held about 7.30 in the evening in mid-week. Why not, then, have the debates run under the same system as are the Sunday evening concerts; that, have the debate on Sunday evening and issue tickets as in the case of the concerts. I am sure that at the very least there would probably be a material increase in attendance.

Yours, etc.,

W.R., II U.C.

Debates Again

Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

On Friday, January 30, you ran an article dealing with the lack of interest in debates, and gave diverse opinions on the matter, without suggesting cause or remedy. Why are debates held at all? If humorous entertainment (as suggested by a first year U.C. student), is the object, they are pretty weak. If it is intended that the debates should merely develop public speaking ability, then the institution is masquerading under a false title. If the debating floor is to be a clearing house for statistics, then crowds cannot be expected to attend. Are the debates intended to be an exchange of ideas relating to a definite subject, decided beforehand, and kept more or less strictly to that subject?

Reporting the last debate at Victoria, you made the following statement: "E. B. Jolliffe scored heavily on the pronunciation of 'annihilation'." As an isolated pleasantry, this is all right. But when whole debates consist of such non-important details, can you blame any intelligent person who attends to hear other views than his he provides. In promoting the Imperial Oil Symphony Concert the trustees have personally assumed the entire burden. Furthermore, believing that university students should be given particular opportunities to hear good music, Dr. T. J. MacKeehan, one of the trustees of Massey Hall and chairman of the Hart House Music Committee, has arranged that students may buy 50c seats for 25c and $1.00 seats for 65c, facilitating purchase by having a supply at the Hart House Theatre box office.

Dr. MacKeehan writes: "Should this venture prove successful we shall continue our policy and present further concerts. We shall be very much interested to see to what extent students avail themselves of this opportunity."

It is to be hoped that the experiment is justified.

St. Hilda's Literary Society

The Juniors of St. Hilda's deserve credit for their choice and presentation of their year play, Fortunato, by Seraphin and Joaquin Quintero. The play is a variation on the theme that the wicked flourish like a green bay tree, though righteousness triumphs in the end.

Barbara Scadding gave the best performance of the evening by a humorous and finished interpretation of Monica, a domestic of dubious intelligence. Frances Crooks, as the beggar in the title role, was convincing; likewise Cynthia Walker as Araminta. The rest of the cast was adequate, although prompting tended to be conspicuous in some of the minor roles. The setting, ambitious in design and successful in effect, contributed greatly to the success of the evening. —L.M.

SENIOR ASSAULT-AT-ARMS COMMENCES TO-NIGHT AT HART HOUSE

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

Varsity fans were rather disappointed by the showing made by the Blue team against Aura Lee last night. After having secured a three goal lead, they were not able to stand up under the attack of the strong Aura Lee outfit, and the best they could do was to hold them to a 3-all tie.

However, the game was one of the best seen here in years, and the Varsity team showed great improvement over their showing last Saturday against Silverwoods. The work of Betsy Burruss in goal was again one of the outstanding features of the game, and it was principally due to her good work that Varsity were able to pull out a tie.

Another hockey game was postponed last night, when the Household Science-Junior U.C. struggle did not come off owing to soft ice.

The Household Science swimming meet takes place to-night at the L.M. pool. This makes the third of a series of faculty swimming meets, and interest in them is very keen. The date for the U.C. meet has not yet been set, but it will probably take place during the middle of next week. There

O.C.E. SWAMPS FORESTRY IN INTERFACULTY BALL

Overwhelm Wood-cutters with Heavy Slugging and Smart Pitching

O.C.E. swamped Forestry at baseball yesterday afternoon to the tune of 17 to 6. The O.C.E. line-up was strong throughout with plenty of heavy hitters and a smart pitcher, who kept the Foresters off the bases for the best part of the game.

Forestry—Howard, Sewell, Uren, Brisley, Choate, Acheson, Townson, Wilson, Jackson.

is really no great hurry, since the interfaculty event does not come off until the first week in March.

At a meeting of representatives of the different faculties and colleges held yesterday to arrange for an interfaculty badminton tournament, it was decided to hold it around the middle of this month. Not all the girls were able to be at the meeting, but plans for the tournament are going ahead apace.

Varsity seniors and Varsity intermediates will meet to-night in the second game of the city league basketball. Both cage teams have been practicing hard, and the result of the game will be watched with great interest. It is scheduled to start at 6 o'clock at U.T.S.

The intercollegiate hockey team will go to Queen's on the 20th of this month, according to a telegram received by Miss Parkes to-day. That date seems to be the only one available in Kingston, though there are always objections to a Friday night.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By De C. H. R.

To-night the interfaculty senior assault-at-arms preliminaries get under way at Hart House. From advance reports we are led to believe that action will be there plenty, too, as competition is particularly keen this year. A place on the intercollegiate B.W. and F. team is not to be taken too lightly, even though the intercollegiate assault-at-arms is to be held within our own familiar walls this year. The junior interfaculty tournament provided some brisk battles, and to-night should show that the senior assault will not be a slow affair either.

O.A.C. has sent eleven men to make the usual determined bid for the Davidson Cup, which has been won by that faculty for the past two years. The men of S.P.S. are striving to maintain their often-advertised manly qualities with a heavy entry in the fistic and grappling encounters. In most classes the entries are well-matched, so that close decision should be the rule in the tournament this year. At any rate it is worth watching, and we don't intend to pass this assault-at-arms up.

The big Blue hockey team has a slim chance to finish in the playoffs of the senior "A" group, and they will strengthen their position if they come through with a win to-night, when they meet the Nationals in the arena on Mutual Street. Coach Porter's boys have played flashy hockey in some of their fixtures, and we hope to see them upset their rivals by a victory in this game.

The athletic directorate of this university is to be congratulated upon its choice of a representative to send to the indoor track meet sponsored by the Millrose Athletic Club, which is to be held in New York City this Saturday. Ralph Adams, popular both in university and dominion track circles, and recognized as one of the foremost sprinters of our Dominion, has been chosen to carry the Blue and White colours at this famous indoor meet. Adams is a double-blue, one who has won two events in intercollegiate track competition for the U. of T. He is also one of the track stars of the University of Toronto who represented Canada at the last Olympic games. Captain of our track team and Olympic team member, he is worthy of the honour conferred on him by the athletic directorate. May he bring further honour to the Blue and White in the coming international indoor track meet!

Applications for the position of managers of the Varsity Rugby Teams will be received at the Athletic Office, Hart House, until Friday of this week. Anyone wishing to apply must do so in writing to the Secretary of the Rugby Club, stating Faculty and year and previous experience, if any.

Betsy Burruss Turns in Great Effort in Blue Goal to Save Game

Fighting an uphill battle against a three goal lead scored by Varsity's intercollegiate hockey outfit in the first period and the early part of the second, Aura Lee earned a tie at 3-3 in the second game of the city league series at the Blue Arena last night. Aura Lee had the better of the play all through, even in the first stanza, when Varsity scored two goals.

Varsity tallied first after only two minutes of play in the first period, on a nice rush by Frances Crooks, stellar Blue defence player. After that play centred mostly around the Blue defence area, with a few brilliant rushes by Betty Carter and Frances Crooks. Dot Starr, Blue wing, made it 2 to 0 when she took a pass from Fran Crooks, who had taken the puck through the whole Aura Lee squad. (Continued on Page 4)

GAME AT MUTUAL STREET

It's a case of do or die for both Varsity and the Sea Fleas in their game at the Arena Gardens to-night. A defeat for the Blues removes their slim mathematical chance of finishing in the playoffs. The Fleas also must come across with a victory if they want to keep up with Marlboros and Hamilton in the battle for second place in the O.H.A. senior race. There is a possibility of the three teams finishing the regular season in a deadlock for the runner-up position to the (Continued on page 4) thing as perfection—a fact that seemed rather dubious at first!

Of course, ideas of perfection vary. Qualifications, donated by some of the more enthusiastic male students, include wealth (usually ranked first), good looks and character (left delightfully vague). In most minds, flawless females are not to be found in the university at all, but occasionally elsewhere. Compared with Perfect Males, they are in the majority, but "through circumstances rather than choice".

A certain poet describes his ideal woman as "Not fluffy or stuffy, not tiny or tall, but fluffy, just fluffy, with no brains at all." Here follows the opinion that finally abolished any thoughts of further investigations in the matter:

"My idea of a Perfect Female is one who refrains from rousing me out of a warm bed at 11.30 p.m. to answer some dumb question about a dumb subject!"

Varsity started off strong in the second period, and notched their third tally when Dot Starr banged the puck in the net from a scramble in front of the goal. Aura Lee pressed hard for the remainder of the period, and their efforts were rewarded when Janet Allen drove one past Betsy Burruss in goal. Betty Carter was benched for tripping and Fran Crooks went to centre. Varsity lost a great chance to count when the Aura Lee goalie made a great save on a shot by Margot Thomson.

Billy Mackenzie opened the scoring in the third period on a pass from Skippy Hilliard. Except for a few individual rushes Aura Lee had the edge on the play all through this period, and they were playing four men up in an effort to tie it up. Some smart defence work kept the Aura Lee team off for most of the period, but Betty Barr tied it up on a rebound from her own shot, when Varsity failed to clear.

Dot Starr was particularly outstanding for Varsity and accounted for two of her team's goals, besides checking consistently well all through. Fran Crooks and Betty Carter turned in great games, and Adele Statten was good on defence. For Aura Lee, the work of Billy Mackenzie was best, with Janet Allen and Betty Barr backing her up well. Betsy Burruss, in goal for the Blue team, turned in a great effort, and it was due to her great work that Varsity were able to stave off defeat in the last period.

Trinity French Dramatics

A new variety of play was presented at the Trinity French Dramatic Society Tuesday evening, when two short psychological dramas of family life were given: On Va-t-On Tantot and Double Regime, by Henri Lavedan.

The first deals with a father's problem of what to do with his five demure daughters on a Sunday afternoon. The second is simply the case of "Jack Spratt could eat no fat. His wife could eat no lean". But instead of licking the platter they squabbled.

These plays were presented by Dorothy Livesay. Those taking part were: Professor Hicks, Ross Parmenter, Louise MacMillan, Barbara Borbridge, Ruth Harrison, Mary Cassidy, Naomi Slater, Rosamond Berry and Dorothy Livesay.

No modern philosopher has been more widely or more grossly misunderstood than Friedrich Nietzsche

The popular imagination, fixing on such scare-words as "the blonde beast", "the Anti-Christ" or "the Superman", has created for itself a grotesque and terrifying monster, whose contemplation sends shivers down the back. "Nietzsche is a pessimist; Nietzsche hated the war..." these statements and many others like them are heard on all sides. "Under Cypresses", by Selwyn Dewdney, is an attempt to correct this impression and to give a sympathetic interpretation of the life of Nietzsche. The one-time philosopher and poet is shown in the last stages of his illness a few months before his death, while shadows from a dimly-remembered past still flicker before his pining consciousness.

Mr. Dewdney is interpreting the part of Nietzsche. Other members of the cast are Miss Helen Zavitz, Miss M. E. Watts, Miss Marion Lossing and Mr. Dennis Chitty.

Port Colborne Sailors and every game counts from now on.

The Water Bugs will present their usual fast-skating aggregation of stars for to-night's struggle, with Lough, Mercer, Collins, Ross Paul, Beal and McMullen taking turns on the front line and Bruce Paul and Nugent looking after the defence job in front of Mueller. The last time the two teams clashed the Yacht Club boys had their work cut out to defeat the men of Porter by the odd goal in three. Since then they have shown considerable improvement, having a decision over the mighty Hamilton man-eaters to their credit. However, they will find plenty of trouble in scoring many goals against the Blues to-night. The latter feel they are about due to come across with a win and nothing would suit them better than to upset the dope and take a fall out of their old rivals from the lake front. The game is scheduled for 8.20 to-night at the Mutual Street Arena.

You cannot succeed in pleasing everyone—and greater ones than the various Debates Committees have gone down to failure through not realizing this. A statement of policy from the proper authorities as to whether the debates are intended for instruction, or entertainment, or what not, might clarify the situation, and a stricter control by the Speaker of the House might assure students that they would hear that which they came to hear. With all due respect for the efforts of those who are in charge, and realizing that it is easier to criticize than to correct, I venture that the present debates are half-baked. The seriously inclined ignore them because they are too futile, the seeker after entertainment ignores them because they are not frivolous enough. The ones that attend consist mostly of those who have nothing better to do, and they are neither very numerous nor very enthusiastic.

This is not intended to be merely criticism. It is an invitation to those in charge to stop complaining about lack of interest, and to make some positive move; to provide debates worthy of student support. R.S.V.P.

Yours Truly,

Query Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

Was it quite fair or courteous of Rev. Mr. Moore to designate the utterances of a recent visitor to the university as "positively silly", and to say that the gentleman in question should be "handed over to the scientists"? Mr. Moore holds his own opinions and doubtless gives utterance to them at times. Dr. Brown holds his, and has an equal right to express them. Moreover, countless people cordially agree with Dr. Brown.

Yours truly,
ONLOOKER.

VARIETY OF TREATMENT

Mistake to Attend Lectures Merely for Information to be Gained

"The need of taking notes depends very much on the character of the lecture, and upon there being a book which deals satisfactorily with the subject," stated Professor DeLury, Dean of the Faculty of Arts, when interviewed as to the question of the wisdom of taking notes at lectures.

"Many university subjects admit quite a variety of treatment," he continued, "and the professor may follow along lines followed by himself in his own special investigations. In such cases, attendance on lectures and the taking of notes would be almost a necessity.

"There are other subjects, however, that might very well be worked up without attendance. My opinion is, however, that even there a stimulating course for much. It is a mistake, I think, to attend a lecture merely for the information to be obtained. The matter of great moment is the point of view, the stimulus, and the method of discovery.

"It is a very good idea to have notes in the form of pamphlets to be presented to the class so as to leave the hour open for their development, interpretation and discussion."

When questioned as to the amount of work that a student in moderns is expected to cover outside of the lectures, Professor Jeanneret of University College said that it was hard to estimate. (Continued on page 4)

Serious Note Is Lacking At Toronto

"Students of the University of Toronto lack the serious note which should distinguish them. They do not seem to devote enough of their time to sound and serious reading, in which they differ from European scholars."

This was the opinion expressed by Miss Diana Fyrrh of France, when giving her impressions of Toronto at a recent meeting of the O.C.E. French Club.

Do the people of Toronto really get a shock when a young girl dares to smoke a cigarette? she asked.

"La Dernière Classe", presented by M. L. Chaquette, and skits interpreted by Misses A. Laforth, A. F. Shantz, M. E. Wood, S. Janis and J. Winter, completed the program of the meeting.

Woman The Soul Of Industry Males Contend, Effusively

Male opinion on feminine qualities of sportsmanship and efficiency show conflicting trends. Comments ranged all the way from one youth's statement, "Woman is the soul of industry"; to another's to the effect that a woman shows less fairness in competitive activities and more carelessness in all undertakings than the below-average male.

As for feminine opinion, it refused to judge itself and those "females of the species" who were approached, seemed wary of something in the way of a trap. One freshette overcame her shyness long enough to blurt out, "I think a woman displays more spirit than a man does in sport and therefore she may seem less sportsmanlike; as

PREACHER NEEDS URBAN MIND

Farmers' Minds Are Preoccupied
More Than a Townsmans

CLOSER TO NATURE

"How many of you fellows expect to be rural ministers?" asked Rev. R. H. Armstrong in his discussion of "Rural Problems", held in Victoria College Chapel last evening. There was a plentiful showing of hands, much to Mr. Armstrong's amusement. "Now, there are two vital things which you will have to face; first and foremost, urban-mindedness. I went to a town once to give an address and the chairman even apologized for the circumstances which placed me in a rural field. This is the prejudiced idea in the back of most theologians' heads.

To overcome this attitude, Mr. Armstrong thinks that the only method is to forget all thoughts of organization and seek for the idea that will respond to local circumstances; meet the needs and harness the resources of the rural mind. There should never be any such thing as standing in the ministry. We are out to serve God and these fields must be served.

This fear is gleaned from the listless look on the farmer's face when he is in church. Farmers' minds are preoccupied more than townsmen's. A rumble of thunder, a rustle of wind is enough to change the expression on a farmer's face. They're closer to nature—that is what accounts for the look.

IN TOUCH WITH YOUTH

Famed Writer Talks About Modern Poetry and Writing

By K. J. Erwin

"Do you know the young literary people at the university?" I asked Dr. Charles G. D. Roberts, Canada's most eminent writer, when he granted me an interview for "The Varsity" after his lecture in Victoria yesterday morning. It was in his Emescliffe apartment.

"I keep in touch with all the young people. I know Dorothy Livesay very well. Edgar McGinnis too, of course. I have read Henry Noyes in Nat Benson's book." Dr. Roberts removed the big shell-rimmed glasses that one always links with the image of Canada's foremost poet.

"Do you think they ought to have a medium of expression?"

"In what way?"

"A literary magazine—"

"If well supported and well organized and put on a firm basis, I think it would be admirable if supported by the undergraduates or the very young generation. It would primarily be an organ for the undergraduates and recent graduates. The danger is always that a university magazine is apt to get a superior air and sniff at older writers. It is hard for an undergraduate magazine to avoid laying down the law and sniffing at older people. Humbert Wolfe has said a very good (Continued on Page 4)

WOMEN SELDOM SPEAK FROM FLOOR

To Get Varsity Women to Enter Debate Is Like Pulling Teeth

SUBJECTS ARE TOO DEEP

"Debating is almost defunct at Varsity," declared Catherine Mace, St. Joseph's College. "It is like pulling teeth to get Varsity women to enter a debate." As for the audience, both serious and frivolous-minded: "We have too much else to do," explained Winnie Hughes, 371 U.C.

"There seems to be a fair amount of interest in interfaculty debates when the subject is not too deep and when the girls have not too much else to do," observed Margaret Bonis, IV year St. Hilda's. "There were between fifty and sixty at the last interfaculty debate."

The creation of the Victoria Parliament, according to Marion Haugh, head of the women's debating at Vic, has helped matters there. "There is more interest among women here this year than for some time. The attendance is good, with the co-eds in the majority."

Miss Haugh attributed the high standard attending women's debates to the fact that they seldom speak from the floor, hence all speeches are prepared. The debates committee is at a loss to account for the lack of enthusiasm. It was suggested that all the other university activities either bore connection with studies or future needs, or were shown official recognition in the way of crests. Hence the speakers at the next interfaculty debate to be held next week will thrash out the advisability of providing similar honours for star word-casters. "Don't you want to debate?" the reporter was asked hopefully.

NEW AMENDMENTS VOTED ON BY S.A.C. MEMBERS

Question Discussed Concerning Appointments to Staff of

EDITOR ALLOWED CHOICE

Question of Eligibility of Student Heads of Trinity and Forestry

The new Student Government Constitution passed a quorum of the Men's S.A.C. yesterday with two amendments, one to solve a problem of representation from Trinity and Forestry, the other concerning appointments to the staff of "The Varsity". Seventeen voting members were present during all or part of the discussion.

The latter question was brought up by the editor of "The Varsity", who pointed out that in its proposed form the constitution, in the procedure for appointment of the staff, made no provision whereby the incoming editor would have any voice in the choice of sub-editors, who would form the nucleus of the staff. E. B. Jolliffe, Chairman of the Committee which presented the proposed constitution, agreed that this oversight should be remedied, and he and the editor were appointed a committee to revise Article 10 of the constitution, section 1, sub-section (2). The clause as amended, with the added portions in italics, follows:

"Subsequent to the appointment of the Editor-in-Chief, all other salaried members of The Varsity Staff shall be appointed in the same manner as the Editor-in-Chief, at a time when the incoming Editor-in-Chief shall sit as a member of the Publications Committee."

NURSERY SCHOOLS DO NOT PUNISH

Corporal Punishment Creates
Dislike and Stubbornness
Says Blatz

ABHORRS COD LIVER OIL

"Corporal punishment is unnecessary in the treatment of children," stated Dr. Blatz in his noon-hour lecture at the Union yesterday. "It only creates dislike and stubbornness. We find the better way is to put the offender to play by himself. His naturally social instincts will cause him to want the company of his playmates in a surprisingly short time."

Dr. Blatz described the system of education employed in the nursery schools, where the children are taught nothing but just to get along with other people. There is no interference from the older generation to cause discord, they are kept interested in their work or play, and because they are busy there is no difficulty with them.

"With regard to feeding," continued Dr. Blatz, "it must be regular, it must include the necessary vitamins, but above all, it must be enjoyable. In many homes the evening meal is a court of inquiry of the activities of the day—a period of energetic stalling and of the administration of justice. Let this meal at least be an hour of supreme relaxation and enjoyment. Do not let a child think he is worth individual attention. That's just exactly what he wants, and he'll cut up if he thinks he will get it."

Dr. Blatz abhorred such practices as giving cod-liver oil to the maid or the cat as demonstrating its worth and sending children to bed supperless.

LONGEST OUTSTANDING

Bouts Made Up in Quantity
What They Lacked in Quality

Displaying keen fighting spirit and plenty of science, the contestants in the Interfaculty Senior Assault-at-Arms provided a great show last night in the big gym at Hart House. Nine boxing and thirteen wrestling bouts were contested to decide the men to qualify for the finals to-night.

Sammy Longert (U.C.) and Strachan (S.P.S.) provided the outstanding bout of the evening in the 175 lb. boxing semi-final. Longert received plenty of opposition from the School man, but showed his usual class in earning the decision. Murray Wilton (Trinity) found a hardy opponent in Saunders (O.A.C.), but was clever enough to win bandily. Wilton will soon be in the shape that carried him to the intercollegiate title in the 160 lb. class last year.

Three knockout bouts featured the show. In the 175 class, Wallbridge (S.P.S.) scored a technical knockout over Reynolds (O.A.C.) when the latter was forced to retire in the second round with a dislocated shoulder. Founding left and right hands to the head, Wallbridge had his opponent on the floor twice in the first round for counts. Bonair (O.A.C.) showed superior condition in defeating Hogg (U.C.) by a knockout in the first round. Deeks (U.C.) took the other 147 lb. bout from Flynn (U.C.) in a fast and interesting three rounds. The competition was keen in the 135 lb. (Continued on page 3)

About Early Efforts in Writing

REAGS CARMAN'S POEMS

An interested group of students congregated in Victoria College Chapel Wednesday morning where Rev. Pelham Edgar introduced Dr. Charles G. D. Roberts. "I began to write when eleven years of age," stated Dr. Roberts. "However, I contented myself with writing and then tearing it up. When nearly sixteen I began to save my writings. I'm sorry I have not some of my first efforts now to look at and see what a fool I was. When seventeen an American magazine accepted one of my poems. My success spurred on Lampman, Scott and Carman, members of the group of '61', which began Canadian literature in the broader sense and made it first recognized abroad."

"Carman's method of writing and mine differ greatly. His was the free, spontaneous method. He wrote ferociously and then revised. I wrote slowly, rolling each word under my tongue and polishing each sentence before writing it down. I had a natural impulse to write poetry. However, I decided to write prose, good prose, and to master a pure, simple lucid style."

"Carman's audiences saw him as grave, diffident and apostolic. Yet among his friends he was a red-blooded humorist and always the life of the party. A secret told to him was safer than if not told. Most of his poetry keeps one up on the heights but he also wrote very humorous (Continued on Page 4)

THE GOOD OLD DAYS

The old race of University men has disappeared; in its place there has appeared the modern tea-drinking, squabble-loving undergraduate, if we are to believe the evidence of those qualified to speak, the real old-timers, relics of an earlier generation who occasionally display evidences of their still-latent fire in exclusive press interviews with this publication and others of the daily press.

No longer do virile undergraduates consume their forty beers at the end of a well-spent day, and raise the sounds of revelry and mirth until far into the night. The few sporadic and infrequent bursts of physical energy running wild and free are but the dying embers of a fire that once flared full, shedding a glamour over the seat of learning. Gone are the days when student fights were an everyday occurrence, when furniture was smashed to kindling wood, and wounds healed to the magic application of salt and water.

And so the tale is told.

Worse still, the modern undergraduate is declared to have developed a psychology that is positively detrimental. The minds of the embryo learned move on a distinctly lower level, as compared with those of their predecessors.

Where does the tendency lead? If we are to admit the truth of the statements, we may well wake up to find our little world on the verge of decadence, vitiation and collapse. We cannot see, however, viewing the present day from a limited undergraduate viewpoint, that conditions are essentially worse than in earlier days.

In truth we will venture to say that there were never any good old days. It is doubtful if men were ever any happier, any more contented, than they are at the present time, alleged conditions of unrest to the contrary. Men still toil to earn their daily bread, as they always have done, and still are moved and actuated by the same ideals as they always were. It is only when viewed in retrospect that the past assumes a glamour that is delusive.

To critics of the present day generation, we would advise a closer study of their problem. Let them delve beneath the sophistries of modern youth and seek a more solid basis than their sweeping generalities would indicate. Energies have been diverted from the time-honoured paths, it may be true; in place of the large scale consumption of beer, a myriad of activities faces the undergraduate of to-day; even that old habit may be found to continue to considerable extent if the right quarters are searched.

This is no apology for modern youth; none is needed. If good old-fashioned ribaldry has disappeared, in its place, however, a new and finer culture has swept across the University, and the world.

COMMENT

A revolution was in progress at the meeting of the Men's S.A.C. yesterday afternoon. But no one would have guessed it from the attendance. Seventeen voting members were present, out of a membership of approximately thirty men, to discuss and vote upon the all-important question of the new constitution for student government. Several of the seventeen were members of the Joint Executive and had previously passed upon the Jolliffe Report. Not a representative from S.P.S. put in an appearance.

Art, Music and Drama

St. Joseph's Dramatics

The Rivals, by Sheridan, an old comedy seldom seen in Toronto, will be presented on Thursday evening at eight o'clock in their college auditorium by the St. Joseph's College Dramatic Society.

The play is still amusing, though the old forms and manners which it seems to satirize have passed away. Like most eighteenth century drama, it deals with a highly polite, insincere and somewhat crude society.

This production of The Rivals, will of course, be in the hands of an all-female cast. Fortunately it belongs to a type of play not entirely ill-suited to such a presentation.

Sketch Room

There will probably be considerable diversity of opinion regarding the present exhibition of Contemporary American Art on show in the Hart House Sketch Room. It is an exhibition of a sort that has never before graced (or disgraced) the walls of our local gallery. All we can say is: go and see for yourself.

There are a few pictures about whose merit there can be no doubt. "The Grove", by Walter Palmer, is exceptionally good, probably the best in the exhibit. The shadows on the snow are excellently handled. "Edge of a Clearing", by J. F. Murphy, is also quite delightful. The simplicity of composition and the delicate handling of colour make the canvas outstanding. The three portraits on the north wall are all of a high standard, particularly the self portrait by Thomas Eakins.

If you feel that technique is not an essential in painting or that art, as such, does not require the assistance of mere accuracy of line, you will no doubt find this exhibition much to your liking. There are many canvases in the exhibit which are sadly out of drawing and many in which there is a conspicuous lack of technique, as judged by all orthodox standards.

We cannot refrain from mentioning one or two examples which are particularly annoying to us. The strange lines and horrible gobs of paint make "Odalisque" by John Palmer, positively repulsive, while "Still Life", by Alexander Robinson might be mistaken for an example of child art.

If we compare this exhibition with the first one of this year in the Sketch Room, which was in reality an exhibition of Contemporary Canadian Art most of us will feel that contemporary Canadian artists must have attained a very high standard indeed.

In the little Sketch Room there is a very fine exhibition of the work of eighteenth century landscape artists, including the following: Corot, Millet, Rousseau, Diaz, Troyon, Meissonier, De la Croix, Turner (marines), Courbet and Jongkind. It is well worth seeing.

From the standpoint of the undergraduate probably the most interesting exhibition of the year is that of the work of Hart House members which will appear on the walls of the Sketch Room on the sixteenth of February. Such an exhibition has a local interest such as none of the others can hope to attain. We urge you to make the most of this opportunity afforded by Hart House. In a university which lays claim to high cultural attainments such an exhibition should be an outstanding event. —G.K.M.

CANADIAN ART FINDS WORLD RECOGNITION

"We are beginning to realize that Canadian art is commencing to take its place in the world. Wembley helped us, for there our exhibits were placed before the world," said F. H. Brigden, president of the Ontario Artists' Association in his informal address on Canadian Art to the Victoria Literary Society last night.

"For a full appreciation of art, one must know the biographies of the artist," Mr. Brigden said. His lecture was illustrated with pictures of Canadian artists which have been collected by Mr. Hammond of The Globe. In conclusion the speaker said that the future of art lies in the small picture, done out of doors, and being in the home where the artist would at all times be speaking to us.

The other amendment, which was referred back to the Constitutional Committee for its exact wording, provided for the election of special S.A.C. representatives from Trinity College and the Faculty of Forestry, whose student government heads would not be eligible to sit on the new S.A.C. SMART BOUTS FEATURE ASSAULT PRELIMS; 3 TECHNICAL K-O'S

By A. C. C.

There were several interesting features of last night's preliminaries of the annual senior assault aside from the fact that both the wrestling and boxing bouts were up to the standard of former years. The assault was the longest on record. It commenced promptly at 7.45 and finished at 12.30. Another feature of the tournament was the fact that we didn't get sleepy until it was over. No chance to take a nap while any of these mit and mat men were in action. And the matches were run off so rapidly under the able management and announcing of Lonny McDonnell that it was impossible to even snatch a wink between them. O.A.C. brought down a strong contingent but did not have the same success as last year. Five of the Aggies reached the finals. Incidentally the attendance outstripped all former records and the gym should be crowded to-night for the finals. If last night's battles were a foretaste of the finals, the fans will not pass up the show. The winners will be Varsity's best bets for an intercollegiate title.

It was quite apparent last night why these rasslin' shows in which Stasiak, Don George and Sonny clown drag in the cash customers. The public wants action and plenty of it. At the assault the fights which earned the loudest applause revealed the least science. Schuman of U.C. did a Sonnenberg on Wallingford of Meds. The Artsman hit the medico with a flying tackle and bore him aloft. Then he tried to make him dizzy by swinging him around in mid-air. He completed the exhibition by banging Wallingford to the floor. But Wallingford took the punishment and came back to win.

Wallbridge of School went at Reynolds of O.A.C. like a large edition of a wild-cat. (He is a heavy.) He sent the Aggie boxer to the floor twice in the first round for counts of 7 and 8. In the second he dropped him again. But Reynolds dislocated his shoulder and lost by a technical KO. Wallbridge packs a vicious punch. He meets Longert to-night in the final.

The two best bouts of the evening were between Longert and Strachan, and Wilton and Saunders. Longert and Wilton were too experienced for their opponents and won handily. Both are fast and can hit. They look like sure finalists and point winners for Varsity in the 160 and 175 pound divisions of the intercollegiate meet.

SEA FLEAS DOMINATED

Varsity Strengthened Towards Last Half and Game
Livened Up

National Yacht Club swept to a clear cut victory last night at the Arena Gardens over the University of Toronto in a senior O.H.A. group A game, winning easily by 6 to 1. The Nationals were much the better team and they were travelling at top form. The game was interesting, the play was fast, and in the final half it became quite exciting when the defence men started to hand out stiff body-checks.

The Sea Fleas dominated the play from the start. Their forward line of McMullen, Lough and Seagram worked smoothly together and their combination carried them in on Ames in the blue nets time after time. Varsity looked woefully weak defensively in the early part of the game, the front line failing to co-ordinate with the defence in halting the Sea Fleas' attack. Varsity strengthened somewhat in the latter part of the middle period and from then on the game livened up.

Weiner Lough opened the scoring four minutes after the start of the game when he slipped around the Blue defence to score on a close-in drive. Seagram added a second for the Water Bugs taking a pass from Lough and rounding the nets, he picked it out of a scramble and slapped it by goalie Ames. Bruce Paul ended the scoring in the opening frame when he scored on a solo rush, stick-handling his way through the Blue defence to pull out the goalie and send it home. Smillie was serving a penalty as Paul scored his goal.

The final goal of the game came in the first half of the last period when Bruce Paul scored his third goal of the evening on a lone rush. Varsity tried hard to tally but Mueller was unbeatable in the Nationals' nets. Varsity's defence of Dewar and Smillie strengthened considerably in the final period and both stepped into the Sea Fleas with good results. Towards the end of the game Smillie received a facial injury when Dewar flattened Paul on the ice with a smart body-check, Smillie coming in contact with Paul.

National Yacht Club—Goal, Mueller; defence, Nugent and Paul; centre, Lough; wings, Seagram and McMullen; subs, Mercer, Beal and McKay. University of Toronto—Goal, Ames; defence, Dewar and Whitehead; centre, Stewart; wings, Smillie and Harley; subs, Lenahan, Leak and Ferguson.

class and three good bouts resulted. McCatty (S.P.S.) met a clever man in Campbell (Vic), but got the judge's decision. Stone (Trinity) and Green (Meds) were well matched and provided a fast bout. The former received the verdict in three rounds. Magner (Meds) winner of the lightweight class in the junior assault, earned a close decision over Archibald (O.A.C.). In the first bout of the evening, Teddy Fell, intercollegiate 126 lb. champion, knocked out Gilbert (O.A.C.) in the first round. The bell saved the latter, but as he was unable to continue, Fell received the decision on a technical knockout.

The wrestling bouts made up in quantity what they lacked in quality. Some of the mat men showed an excellent knowledge of the game, while others showed little more than the will to mix it. In the heavyweight class, Webster (O.A.C.) and Shute (Meds) put on a great display. The Guelph man got the decision on the third fall. Watt (Vic) defeated Harris (S.M.C.) in the other bracket of the 174 lb. class and earned the right to meet Webster in the final. Wright (O.A.C.) took two straight falls from Mason (Dents) and Eaton (Meds) duplicated the feat in a bout with Wachna of (Dents), in the 158 lb. class. Campbell (Dents) got the decision over Fletcher (Vic) in a slow bout in the 145 lb. class, while La Pointe (O.A.C.) took two straight falls from Walker (U.C.) in short order. Taylor (S.P.S.) took the other bout in this class by earning two straight falls from Bryant (O.A.C.). McKinney (Vic) university champion, decisioned Dunlop (O.A.C.) in the only contest in the 134 pounders. Bannister (S.P.S.) another intercollegiate man, Wallingford (Meds) and Hymmen of (Dents), defeated Wilson (O.A.C.), Shuman (U.C.) and Goldenberg (U.C.) respectively in the featherweight class. The match between Wallingford and Shuman was a feature of the program. The latter executed a flying tackle on Wallingford and then spun him in the air, before dropping him to the floor. Despite his bombastic tactics, Shuman lost the decision on one fall. Brownlee (S.P.S.) and Patterson (O.A.C.) gave a great exhibition of the mat game in the 112 lb. class. The former took the first fall after 8 minutes and got the decision. Rundle (Meds) earned the right to meet Brownlee in the final by eliminating Kinnear (U.C.) in a fair bout.

The results of the fencing show Lee (Meds) in first place in the foils with Porter (Trinity) the runner-up and Coleman and Sculley of U.C. tied for third. The last two named will settle third place in a bout to-day. In the epee, Porter and Lee exchanged places with Sculley next. The sabre bouts will be fought to-day at 5 p.m. The intercollegiate fencing team is chosen from the winners of the foils tournament. The epee and sabre are not yet intercollegiate contests, although an effort has been made to make them so.

The final bouts in the assault take place to-night at 7.45 sharp in the big gym. Five extra preliminary bouts are scheduled for this afternoon, at 4.30 p.m.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

The Varsity intercollegiate team displayed the best form yet this year when they defeated the seconds by 57 to 23. The forward line especially turned in a much better game than in their first effort against Margaret Eaton last week. The defence too, seems to have tightened up, although the seconds did not provide such good opposition as the M.E.S. squad.

The work of Mary Stewart, who played for the seconds, was particularly good, and she turned in a consistently strong game. Her shooting was especially good, and the defence was the weakest point in the second team's game.

Meds and Junior Vic played to a 1-all tie in their interfaculty hockey game last night. The game was quite slow and neither team displayed much in the way of combination, although Vic had an undoubted edge in this department.

At the Household Science swimming meet last night, Margot Thompson, who is president of the University Swimming Club, carried off the individual title, with twelve points to her credit. Until Household Science became a separate faculty, she starred for U.C. and her work stood out, especially in the speed events last night.

The meet was closely contested all through, and plenty of enthusiasm was displayed. Chances for Household Science in the interfaculty meet look very bright, and they will certainly make the other faculties step for the title.

thing that there is no modern poetry, but that the older writers simply sniff at the younger. So you see there is mutual antagonism."

"What do you think of free verse, Dr. Roberts?"

"I have the greatest respect for it. It is hardest to achieve a real poem in free verse than in any verse form. Some of the greatest poems have been written in free verse."

"I think he is intolerable! And he is getting crazier and crazier in his new work. The thing is such an unutterable chaos. As for D. H. Lawrence, he has a sex obsession, I don't think there is anything to be gained by obscenity."

"But obscenity does not annul a novel's chances of being a work of art?" I stammered.

"No. There may be consistent character drawing. Have you read Cabell's 'Beyond Life'? You should read it." Dr. Roberts closed the interview by reading me Matthew Arnold's "Utrum in Paratus" and I left knowing that I knew nothing, but with a charming personality stamped on my memory.

mate but that he considered that about a third of the work is covered in a general way, and the rest is left to the student to get up for himself.

Professor Kirkwood, Dean of the Faculty of Arts at Trinity College, said that the amount of work covered by students depended greatly on the year and course, adding that the upper years of the honour course have to do a great deal of their work for themselves.

When asked if a student might be successful if he attended few lectures and concentrated on reading, he said that this too, depended on the year and course, but that as a general rule in the first years of a pass course a student would be more likely to succeed if he attended lectures than if he tried to get the subject up for himself.

As far as his work was concerned, he did not favour the use of notes given out beforehand, although it could be used merely as a skeleton in such a subject as history.

VARSITY SENIORS
DEFEAT SECONDS

Lose Game by Weakening in Second Half After Interval

Displaying remarkable form in the second period, when they scored 34 points, Varsity seniors defeated the seconds by a count of 57 to 23. The seconds managed to hold the seniors almost even in the first half, but they weakened badly after the interval.

The seconds started off fast and began the scoring on a nice shot by Mary Stewart. The seniors came back quickly and the teams scored basket for basket almost all through the period, but a rally netted the seniors three baskets, which put them on the long end of a 23 to 17 score at half-time.

A whirlwind attack right from the beginning of the second half swept the second team off their feet, and some good work by Louise Crouch and Eleanor Sedgewick accounted for most of the seniors' tallies. The seconds could not get going and they also had some hard luck on their shots when close-in. An injury to Beth Jenking, at jumping centre for the seconds, materially weakened the Blue team and from then on the seniors

COMMERCE CLUB

Dr. W. E. Blatz will speak to the Commerce Club on "Things in Russia", in the Music Room, Hart House, on Friday, February 6 at 1.20.

VICTORIA COLLEGE

The ticket list for the V.C.U. women's tea dance, February 14th, is now closed to 1st, 2nd and 3rd years, since the number signed already exceeds the allotment of tickets to these years.

FABIUS CLUB

The Thursday discussion group will meet to-night at 7.45 in the Women's Union at 79 St. George St. The topic will be "The place of socialism in Canada and the United States."

ST. MIKE'S GLEE CLUB

The choral section of the club will be held at 7 p.m. This meeting will take place at 57 Queen's Park Crescent. Only those interested in quartet singing need attend.

ST. HILDA'S COLLEGE
HONOUR GRADUATORS

The annual dance in honour of the graduating year was given last night at St. Hilda's College. The decorations were modernistic, one of the rooms representing a merry-go-round. Miss Cartwright, Dean of Women for St. Hilda's College, Miss M. Tamblin, Head of the College, and Miss F. Axworthy, 1 had no trouble in overwhelming the seconds.

Louise Crouch, stellar senior forward, was outstanding, and netted 23 points. Loretto McGarry at jumping centre, played an excellent game, and the whole Blue senior squad combined well and their shooting was particularly good. Mary Stewart and Betty Thomas were best for the seconds.

Varsity Firsts—Louise Crouch (23), Wilma Haslett (11), forwards; Eleanor Sedgewick (15), side centre; Loretto McGarry, jumping centre; Jean Allen, Eleanor Wallace, defence; subs, Sally Ballard (6), Bea Longley (2), Pat Palmer.

Varsity Seconds—Bessie Lowry (2), Vieve Quinlan (9), forwards; Mary Stewart (12), side centre; Beth Jenking, jumping centre; Betty Thomas, Grace Gristwood, defence; subs, Hilda Layman, Marjory Wright.

Disagreements

In reply to comments made in Tuesday's issue of "The Varsity" by the Rev. F. J. Moore of the Student's Christian Movement at the University of Toronto upon a lecture delivered here recently by the Rev. Arthur E. Brown under the auspices of the Toronto Intercollegiate Christian Union, the following letter has been received by the editor of this paper from the Rev. F. Noel Palmer, B.A., B.D., General Secretary of the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship of Canada: Editor, "The Varsity",

Dear Sir:
May 1, as an Oxford graduate, offer a few observations regarding the statements attributed to the Rev. F. J. Moore in your issue of February 2. When we talk of origins, we have to go outside the realm of pure science. It is a matter of collecting evidence and building a case, but the final conviction is necessarily a matter of spiritual insight, or faith. "Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God".

One like myself must frankly and humbly disclaim any qualification for pronouncing on scientific themes. But any intelligent person can see two facts: one, that there are many zealous opponents of a scholarly evangelical faith who are as little qualified to speak scientifically as I am. The other fact is, that the theory of evolution (Continued on page 2)

PARIS THEATRES IN THREE GROUPS

Little Theatres Are Divided

Types

SOROID PLAYS

"The little theatres of Paris are divided into three groups: the veterans, the younger generation and the dramatic clubs", stated Robert Finch in the last of the series of lectures held in West Hall of University College yesterday afternoon. "Of the veterans, the Theatre Libre which grew to fame under Antoine is perhaps the most important," continued Mr. Finch. "However, Antoine's preference for naturalism finally led him to produce nothing but sordid plays which finally forced the Theatre Libre to close in 1896 after having produced ten new dramatists and 187 plays.

"The aim of La Maison de l'Oeuvre under Lugne Poe, was dramatic cosmopolitanism. The settings, painted by promising young artists, added to the delightful atmosphere.

"The younger generation declared war on the commercialism of the theatre, Jacques Copeau at the head of Le Vieux Colombine, made up his repertoire of old and new French and foreign classics. His cast consisted of a small number of young and sincere actors whom he trained himself, or in the dramatic school he later founded. At the height of his success Copeau retired to the country with part of his cast to experiment and has just returned to Paris.

VARSITY WOMEN'S INTERCOLLEGIATE HOCKEY TEAM

The Varsity women's intercollegiate hockey team, shown above, will play Queen's here on Saturday night at the Blue Arena, in the first of a two-game series for the intercollegiate

ART EXHIBITION AT HART HOUSE

The annual exhibition of paintings and drawings by members of Hart House will be held in the Sketch Room from Monday, 16th February until Saturday, 28th February. There is a Visitors' Day on Sunday 22nd February when ladies introduced by members will have an opportunity of seeing this exhibition. Any undergraduate, graduate or faculty member of Hart House may submit his work for the exhibition and the Sketch Committee hopes that, as formerly, a large number will do so. All exhibits clearly marked with the name and address of their owner must be in the Warden's office not later than 6 p.m. on Thursday 12th February. The hanging committee will consist of Mr. F. S. Haines, the Curator of the Art Gallery of Toronto and Professor H. Wasteneys, a former Chairman of the Sketch Committee. Work submitted must not be technical, that is to say, purely architectural, anatomical, etc. This exhibition has always aroused much interest in past years and like the photographic show arranged by the camera committee, gives members an opportunity of exhibiting their own work.

MISS WRONG TO SPEAK AT WOMEN'S UNION

Miss Margaret Wrong, daughter of Professor G. M. Wrong, Professor Emeritus of history at the university, is speaking at the Women's Union this evening during dinner. Miss Wrong, former Dean of Women's Union, at 85 St. George Street, is speaking on her purpose in inaugurating Argyle House and the Women's Union itself. The speaker will also deal with present residence and college conditions here.

Miss Wrong is now the secretary for Africa of the International Christian Literary committee, where her special duty is to bring about co-operation between government and mission schools. All new resident girls are invited to the Union to hear Miss Wrong speak.

School of Practical Science were declared champions of the interfaculty senior assault-at-arms which terminated at Hart House last evening when they nosed out Ontario Agricultural College by a single point. This is the first time in several years that the senior assault has not been won by the O.A.C. entrants.

S.P.S. scored a total of 53 points, 29 in boxing and the remainder in the wrestling bouts. O.A.C. scored but 18 in boxing but compiled a total of 34 in the mat game. Medicine was third with a total of 31 and Trinity fourth with 25.

Every bout was keenly contested. At the start of the finals it could be seen that the championship was between S.P.S. and O.A.C. The Aggies collected 22 points from the preliminaries and the semi-finals while School garnered but 13. In the finals, however, School captured four events to three for O.A.C., which gave them the title.

Stone of Trinity scored the only knockout of the evening. Boxing in the 135 lb. class, Stone completely overshadowed Wagner of Meds, and the referee halted the bout in the first round and awarded it to Stone.

The 160 lb boxing bout proved to be the best of the evening. Wilton of Trinity and Elson of School were the contestants. From the start both waded in and for three rounds the fans were treated to an exhibition of real hitting, with Murray Wilton having a decided edge over the School man. Bonaci of O.A.C. and Deeks of U.C. opened up in the second round of the welterweight event and for a while it looked as if the straight lefts of Deeks were carrying him to a decision. Bonaci, boxing with a clipped bone in the thumb of his right hand, made a great comeback in the third round and finished the bout with a rally of points that earned him the bout. INTEREST AROUSED

"Well, most of us could pass all those tests without any trouble—they are all so far-fetched that they're no tests at all." This statement made by Miss Doris Pringle, II Vic yesterday, seems to sum up the opinion of the majority of co-eds who would express any opinion at all on the merits of yesterday's "Perfect Female" questions on Common Sense and Domesticity.

"Absolute rot!" and "Dumb as usual," were both heard more than once.

"Go to an inexpensive restaurant if he were broke? We'd do more than that—we'd go home!" said one anonymous, but apparently experienced young lady in the university library.

"I think they're quite inconsistent throughout. And especially the one about jumping into a swimming pool dressed for a party is very foolish," commented Jane Grey, Iff U.C.

"The whole idea is cute, and this morning's are quite good. I'm being marked, and it's fun," Francis Weisburg, Iff U.C., maintained enthusiastically.

"There's nothing connected with common sense about jumping into a swimming pool dressed for a party—but it is a point even if it doesn't belong under that head. And as for refusing to call a doctor 'for fear it might be appendicitis', there are lots of girls like that; the question is a good one," said Jean Hunnisset, I U.C.

Hart House Elections

The House Committee of Hart House, with the approval of the Board of Stewards, announces that the election of members to the Stauding Committees of the House, will take place on Wednesday, March 4th.

All male undergraduates are cautioned to present their Hart House Fee Receipt and registration card to the Hall Porter as soon as possible, and have their membership stamp affixed, since this card must be shown when voting.

Hart House Sunday Evening Concert

Due to an error occurring in a head in yesterday's "Varsity" a false impression is abroad that the tickets for the concert in the Great Hall of Hart House next Sunday evening are for sale. A limited quantity of single tickets is available for free distribution at the Hall Porter's Desk in Hart House, as on all previous occasions. The Warden expressed regret to "The Varsity" last night that, due to yesterday's error, students had not availed themselves of these tickets.

The concert this coming Sunday promises to be one of the outstanding events of the kind in Hart House this season. Geza de Kresz, the noted violinist, is the artist.

PREPARED NOTES VERSUS LECTURES

Mimeographed Notes Used in Medical Faculty for First Time

METHOD SUCCESSFUL

"Mimeographed notes are being used in the Faculty of Medicine this year for the first time," stated Dr. E. S. Ryerson, secretary of the Faculty, in an interview with "The Varsity" yesterday. "In several courses the professors are distributing prepared notes in lieu of delivering a lecture. Time is spent then, in discussing these notes. This is a complete innovation, but it seems to be working well. The fourth year class in Surgery uses mimeographed notes extensively. The matter is, however, left to the discretion of the professor."

Questioned as to the necessity for taking notes in the medical courses, Dr. Ryerson replied that this depended entirely on the type of lectures and on the individual student. Some students are able to get by without taking notes while others find it essential to success. There are different types of lectures, some of which do not require notes. The so-called inspirational lectures are only given to supplement the regular ones and so the course of notes is not present. Such lectures are those in surgery, given in second and third years to show the students the value of their courses in biochemistry and such. Note-taking is, therefore, a strictly individual idea.

"Efficiency is the world's greatest curse, too many people are doing the right thing at the right time," stated Gordon A. Sinclair, the Star's wandering reporter to the University Press Club in Hart House yesterday. In his address he outlined the thrills experienced during 65,000 miles of travel through 12 countries and countless adventures. "Such is the big idea in the wandering reporters' game," he said. "I have been fired five times from the Star and expect to be fired another five, and if luck had not been with me, I might be a moss-back of a book clerk to-day."

One of Sinclair's first assignments was investigating a raided hobo yard, the occupants of which lived on razor blades and canned heat. This ended in a steam bath in Utica and started him using the letter "I" which he has been using ever since.

"Colleges are the playgrounds of the idle rich, not training fields for all classes, as they should be." "The success of the nation lies in the education of its youth." These two points, amplified and demonstrated at length, formed the basis of the platform upheld by the affirmative of the first preliminary inter-year debate at University College.

The subject of the debate was "Resolved that free education should be continued through university." The affirmative team consisted of two first year men, Sydney Hermant and Gordon Skilling, who were awarded the verdict by the judges, Professors G. O. Smith and Brett. The verdict of the judges was unanimous, hinging on (Continued on Page 2)

The results will be announced Tuesday if at all possible, and the prize awarded soon thereafter. In case of a tie, either two marriage licenses will be provided, if desired, or a member of the staff will buy two tickets to a movie for the two females and take them there herself under police protection.

ANONYMITY

Of late the editor of this paper has been deluged by a flood of anonymous letters. While conscious of the subtle compliment implied by the anonymity of these correspondents, we think it only fair—in the interest of conserving the energy of our fellow human beings—to point out that the first thing done by the editor on opening a letter addressed to him is to look for the signature. If the signature of the sender does not appear in full either on some part of the letter or in the form of a confidential enclosure, the letter is promptly torn up and consigned to the waste basket without having had so much as a cursory reading.

Anonymous correspondents, as well as anonymous people interviewed by the newspapers, have no importance in the scheme of things, unless it be to draw attention to the general contemptibility of the human animal.

"My best friend is my strongest enemy," says one of Shaw's characters,—"the man who keeps me up to the mark." For violent correspondents who tell us in no uncertain terms into which particular category of the many and varied categories of idiot we happen to fit, and then signs his name, we entertain a profound admiration... if not for his perspicacity, then certainly for his courage in exposing himself to the slings and arrows of outrageous editorial writers. For the friendly correspondent who writes over his name to turn the cold light of remorseless reason either upon us or one of our fellows, or who writes to commend us for some particular coup, we entertain the liveliest gratitude. But for the mean little fellow who scurries and fumes about and imagines he can thumb his nose with impunity because nobody knows who he is, we must reserve the deepest wells of oblivion, in order to retain the few tattered shreds of idealism to which a newspaper person must either cling or die.

COMMENT

"Free-Speechers' Backed by U.S. High Priest of Atheism," screamed The Globe in a page-width streamer on page one of the City Edition the other day.

Which moves one to observe that the United States is the only country self-conscious enough to have a High Priest of Atheism, and the Toronto Globe the only "newspaper" naive enough to draw attention to the fact.

PALMER COMMENTS ON MOORE'S ATTITUDE

lution, even if it seems to modern minds the best theory, is still a theory. It is unreasonable to call a man "silly" merely because he doubts a theory, provided the man has serious reasons for his doubts.

Mr. Moore is a Christian minister, and at the same time has faith in evolution. "Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind." He cannot blame others, to whom the reconciliation of the Christian faith with the theory of evolution is as yet unintelligible, if they stand by what they surely know—namely the saving power of Christ—rather than by what they do not know—namely, evolution. Let Mr. Moore remember that not all evolutionists are also Christian ministers, as he is. Too often their attitude resembles that of a Professor, who said to a Toronto student, "What! are you so foolish as to believe that Jesus is the Son of God, and all that stuff about coming into the world to save you from your sins?" Need evolutionists be resentful because humble believers feel more sure of their Saviour than of their Scientists.

It is because men have ignored such fundamental considerations as these, that so much wordy disagreement has the superiority of style of the freshmen, as Professor Brett announced at the end of the debate.

The negative side of the question was supported by third year, in the persons of Colin A. Crews and John S. McKinnon, both from the University College residence at 73 St. George Street. Although on the losing side they upheld their opinions valiantly and showed good debating ability.

The second preliminary will be held next Thursday and is open to the public. The subject will be "Resolved that the 68 professors were justified in signing the free speech manifesto." "The Rivals"

Sheridan's well-known play, "The Rivals," was presented last evening by the Dramatic Society of St. Joseph's College. The plot of the play, which is well known—the humorous and slightly ridiculous complications of an eighteenth century love affair—does not require very finished acting nor leave much scope for the individual interpretation of the parts. The actors were handicapped throughout by the fact that the cast was composed entirely of women who found it rather difficult to manage the more forceful male roles. The first two acts tended to drag a bit, but the actors soon became accustomed to their laced waistcoats and hoop skirts and the latter half of the play was more convincing. The hearty applause given to Bernita Miller in the role of Acres and to Helen Dolan as Mrs. Maltrap, gave the cast the necessary assurance and they romped through the duelling scene in an enthusiastic and light-hearted manner.

The best piece of acting was done by Francis O'Connor, who took the part of Fag, a servant. Bernita Miller as Acres, the country squire, was inclined to over-burlesque her part but she was quite at ease on the stage and filled in the odd moments in a most efficient manner. Helen Dolan in her interpretation of Mrs. Maltrap, failed to utilize the excellent opportunities for comedy in her part. Inscrutable old Sir Anthony Absolute was cleverly portrayed by Jessie Grant. She flew into a rage beautifully, became conciliatory with ease and on the whole gave a smooth performance. Irene Baxter as Captain Absolute, looked most charming in a scarlet uniform, and was at her best in Mrs. Maltrap's drawing room. Mary Palmer in the role of Lydia Languish, was quite adequate.

On the whole the cast seemed to get hold of the spirit of the play and what is more important, were able to give it to the audience, a very difficult thing to do with a play which is both in plot and language the product of another century.

S.P.S. DEFEAT O.A.C. BY SINGLE POINT TO CAPTURE ASSAULT

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

Varsity's intercollegiate hockey team will entertain Queen's here on Saturday night, in a game which will be played at 7 o'clock as a preliminary to the Varsity A-Hamilton struggle. Queen's will arrive in the city at 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

So far the Queen's outfit is an unknown quantity, but Varsity are favorites to take the title again. Although they have not done so well in their city league games to date, they are improving every time out, and should give all comers a hard battle.

In an exciting intercollegiate hockey game last night, St. Hilda's defeated University College Seniors by a score of 2-1. The deciding goal was not tallied until the last period and it was keenly contested all through.

Margaret Eaton met Varsity seniors again on Monday. The Blue team are keen to avenge the defeat administered to them by the M.E.S. team last week, and will have the advantage of playing on their home floor. They have improved greatly since their

SENIOR BLUE B'S TO MEET WESTERN

Varsity's Sole Remaining Hope for Hockey Title This Season

REAL BATTLE EXPECTED

Varsity's lone remaining hope for a hockey championship this season, the senior "B" squad, swings into action at the "T" Arena this afternoon in a league fixture with Western. Coach Dr. "Red" Smylie's boys have been travelling at a great clip so far this season, winning all four of their games in convincing fashion and a victory to-day will clinch first place in the group for them.

The Blues defeated Western 8 to 3 in their last encounter up in London, but since then the Mustang pucksters have come ahead a long way and the locals expect a real battle this afternoon. The class of hockey played in this group is very much of the crowd pleasing variety, with plenty of goals, plenty of action and sustained speed. The work of the Varsity squad has been featured to date by the sensational playing of Roger Clute at centre and Conn, the goal scoring ace on the wing. Lebar and Kress divide the net-minding assignment between them, with Hal Williams and Robinson forming a stonewall defence in front of them.

The contest is scheduled for 4.00 sharp at the Bloor Street Arena this afternoon.

Varsity-Queen's Senior BASKETBALL TO-NIGHT

Both Teams Evenly Matched; Neither Have Yet Won Victory

Varsity senior basketball team have a heavy program over the week-end for to-night they tackle Queen's University in an intercollegiate fixture, while on Saturday night their opponents will be none other than the famous Windsor Alumni, who at the present time are the eastern Canada senior basketball champions and Canadian finalists.

Both games will be played in the main gym at Hart House and should provide a fine brand of the cage game. To-night's game will bring together two evenly matched teams and both squads will be out to score their first victory of the season in intercollegiate competition. Varsity lost an exceptionally close game to Western two weeks ago while last week they succumbed to McGill by ten points. Queen's were also beaten by the Montrailers by ten points, so on paper Varsity and Queen's should put up a good argument.

WINDSOR ALUMNI TEAM TO PLAY SENIOR BLUES

Coach McIntee has scored a real triumph in bringing the Windsor Alumni team to this city for an exhibition game against the Blue and White, and Toronto basketball fans will have the opportunity of seeing one of the best teams in Canada play when the visitors appear. Last year the Windsor team swept through their group and won the Ontario championship by defeating the St. Catharines Grads by a point or two, but succumbed to New Westminster in the Canadian finals.

Both of these senior games will start at eight-thirty sharp and the preliminaries to each start at seven-thirty. O.A.C. will oppose Varsity intermediates to-night in the first game while the preliminary to-morrow night will probably be between Varsity juniors and a strong city team.

first game and are due to hand Margaret Eaton a defeat.

There are three intercollegiate hockey games scheduled for the week-end. One of the groups plays its last scheduled games to-day and the other finishes a week from to-day. There are numerous postponed games to be played off before the finals, however.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By T. A. F.

The long reign of O.A.C. in the intercollegiate assault came to an end last night, the battling engineers nosing them out by a single point in the final results. The Schoolmen deserve every credit for the great showing they made and they are worthy holders of the trophy. We may be a little previous with our congratulations, however, since there is a strong possibility that the Aggies may enter a protest. It seems that they were awarded only four points in the 118 pound wrestling class when Robertson of Meds was forced to default to Taylor of O.A.C. in the only match of the division. The Toronto man was suffering from an attack of the "flu" and of course could not be expected to take part. The customary thing is to award four points to the team winning the default, and that is exactly what was done. The O.A.C. officials, however, claim they should have received the full ten points for winning the final. If the protest goes through the title will, of course, go to Guelph. Whether it will be passed or not remains to be seen. There are several complicating factors which enter in and make the problem difficult.

For the most part all the bouts last night were first class. Deeks of U.C. lost the title in the welterweight division in his bout with Bonaci of O.A.C. after he appeared to be winning hands down. The U.C. man was much the better boxer, but failed to follow up some of his advantages in the first two rounds, when he could have put his man away. In the third spasm Bonaci cut loose with a storm of rights to the head which put Deeks down for two counts and finally cost him the bout. It was a hard match to lose. Sammy Longert, who stepped up a class into the 175 pounders, gave Wallbridge, the hard-hitting engineer, a boxing lesson for three rounds in a masterly display. The grapplers were equally as good as the mittmen for those who care to watch the mat game. Some of Referee Mike Chapesuick's decisions were not greeted with any too much approval by the fans. Mike is Canadian and British Empire champion in the light-heavy division and knows the game inside and out but in two cases there might have been room for doubt in his rulings.

To-morrow night Red Porter and his crew entertain Hamilton here. Far be it from us to call the Blue seniors to defeat the Tigers even on our home ice, but we don't intend to miss this opportunity of seeing the man-eaters from the Ambitious City perform. The Yellow and Black have a reputation for playing hockey in a somewhat strenuous (to say the least) way. Red Farrell, who looks after the opposing attacks on one side of the Hamilton defence, using his own delicate methods, has the reputation of being the "bad man" of the league. He will probably be in the game to-morrow, although he was occupying a bed in the hospital last week as the result of some personal attention on the part of one or two of the Sea Fleas.

TIGERS TO BATTLE VARSITY SENIORS

Hard-hitting Yellow and Black Team Expected to Show Battle Royal

NO ACTION LACKING

The famous Hamilton Tigers will take the ice against Varsity seniors at the Blue and White Arena Saturday night in an O.H.A. senior game which has all the earmarks of a battle royal. The Tigers have a reputation for playing hockey of the most strenuous variety and all the teams which have come up against them this season are still carrying around souvenirs of the encounters in the shape of sundry marks of affection bestowed on them by the hard-hitting Yellow and Black defence. The team from the Ambitious City is holding down second place in the "A" group, four points behind the flying Port Colborne Sailors. Marlborough and the Sea Fleas are chasing them closely and a loss for any one of the three would be serious for their exhibition chances.

The Tigers have one of the most colourful line-ups in the game. "Red" Farrell, the Eddie Shore of the league teams up with the great "Beef" McKay to form one of the hardest defences to pass in the game. Farrell is a player of the rugged type who goes after the man in a strenuous fashion. In the game with Sea Fleas the Toronto team used "Red" none too gently and he was taken to the hospital with serious back injuries. However, he proved too tough to succumb and will be back in the game to-morrow night. McGowan at centre and Jackie Kane are the stars of the forward line.

Varsity will have their work more than cut out for them to hold the Tiger man-eaters in check. The men of Porter have been travelling a rocky road this season and a victory over Hamilton would be too much to expect from them. However, their style of play fits in with the Yellow and Black methods and the game will be a battle. No lack of action will be found when the Tiger battering rams try to crash through the Smilie-De-war rearguard and vice versa.

ST. HILDA'S WIN FROM SENIOR U.C.

Women's Intercollegiate Hockey Fixture Proves Close and Exciting

SCORE 2-1

Senior U.C. went down to defeat at the hands of St. Hilda's in an intercollegiate hockey fixture by the score of 2-1 at Varsity Stadium last night. The game was close and exciting throughout. In the first minute of play Helen Buell scored a goal for U.C., and then St. Hilda's tied the score on a tally by Mary Morris. No goals were scored in the second period in which the play was slow. In the third period Mary Morris scored the second goal for the Saints, and from then on U.C. tried hard to score, but the period ended with U.C. on the short end of a 2-1 score.

St. Hilda's—Goal, Kay Steele; defence, Helen James, Enid Palmer; centre, Fran Brigstoeke; wings, Mary Morris, Lois Wilson; subs, Marjorie Tripp, Helen Groom, Ruth Raus, Al-dith McLaren, Ross Berry.

Senior U.C.—Goal, Jean Wilson; defence, Agnes Reid, Eugenia Haylow; centre, Helen McGibbon; wings, Helen Buell, Helen Swartz; sub, Marion Stevenson.

WOMEN'S S.A.C. PASS ON NEW CONSTITUTION

The Women's Student Administrative Council passed unanimously the proposed constitution and also the amendments made by the men's council of the S.A.C. at a meeting attended by 14 out of a possible 18 members, on Wednesday. The provision for minority representation and the question whether the president of the Joint Executive should be either a man or woman graduate, was discussed and also the reasons for the agreements embodied in the contracts of the various Varsity Editors. The suggestions made by the Constitution Committee in the new constitution were explained and judged satisfactory by the Women's Council. In the absence of the president, Reba Willets, the vice-president, Jean Robertson, took the chair. The new constitution is to go into effect in the spring.

outboxed Wallbridge in the 175 lb. final.

Eaton of S.P.S. was too strong for Wright of O.A.C. and was declared the winner of the 158 lb. wrestling although Wright forced the bout into overtime. Webster of O.A.C. grabbed a quick fall when he forced Watt to the mat, taking him by surprise, in the first twenty seconds of their bout. With but a point behind, O.A.C. were counting on a win in the heavyweight wrestling to give them the title, but Newell of the College of Education calmly tossed the O.A.C. representative for two quick falls.

Porter of Trinity won the sabre fencing, winning from Scully. An interesting fencing bout with foils between Lee, Varsity champion, and Fischmann, a German professional instructor, was won by the former. The following are the final results:

BOXING

112 lb.—Field (School) defeated McKay (U.C.).

126 lb.—Fell (School) defeated Hearn (O.A.C.).

135 lb.—Stone (Trinity) defeated Magner (Meds) technical k.o.

145 lb.—Bonaci (O.A.C.) defeated Deeks (U.C.).

160 lb.—Wilton (Trinity) defeated Elson (School).

175 lb.—Longert (U.C.) defeated Wallbridge (School).

WRESTLING

112 lb.—Rundle (Meds) defeated Brownlee (School).

118 lb.—Taylor (O.A.C.) won by default.

126 lb.—Bannister (School) defeated Wallingford (Meds).

134 lb.—McKimmey (Vic) defeated Miller (U.C.).

145 lb.—Lapoint (O.A.C.) defeated Taylor (School).

158 lb.—Eaton (School) defeated Wright (O.A.C.).

174 lb.—Webster (O.A.C.) defeated Watt (Vic).

WHERE NATURE DWARFS MAN

Visitors to Jasper National Park. In the heart of the Canadian Rockies, stand close to the very act of creation. In this beautiful area, life once was cradled. Convulsion seized the land and reared rock upward to the skies. Out of the welter came the glorious peaks to defy ice and time, their rugged beauty a magnetic attraction for thousands of sight-seers. Small wonder were mortals stand by and drink in the grandeur of the peaks. Above is Maligne Lake, its shores framed by mountains. C.N.R. Photo.

The Table Round

Canadian Literature Again

The author of this column in "The Varsity" of last Friday made a statement probably inconsidered and certainly erroneous. "To attempt to nationalize literature is to rob it of its vigour". But is not the most vigorous of literature the most strictly national? One cannot refer for support to Beowulf, since nationalism as we understand it was not existent in the so-called Dark Ages. But by the Elizabethan era the nationalistic, even jingoistic, plant had put forth dusty if immature growth, and therefore one may legitimately point the triumphant index at Shakespeare. Reflect on "Tom Jones", on "Tartarin de Tarascon", on "Resurrection" or "The Brothers Karamazov"; consider Thos. Mann, Arthur Schnitzler, Thomas Hardy, Knut Hamsun or Sinclair Lewis. Comment is superfluous. Ask a foreigner what is the best-known work of Canadian literature. If he acknowledges any at all, it will undoubtedly be "Maria Chapdelaine".

Until the latter part of the last century, what writing had we in Canada that was not nationalistic? We had Gorneau, Octave Coenaze, Louis Frechette, impregnated with the French-Canadian spirit and idiom of Seigneur and habitant, and we had Haliburton, whose work is redolent of its narrow north-eastern American setting. Then came the poetry. But poetry is so much more personal and so much less enervated than the novel that it is better left alone in a note like the present. The field of the Canadian novel to-day is represented in the minds of most people by four names: Otenso, Grov, De la Roche, Callaghan. There are others, certainly. E. Barrington for instance. Referring to such people as the latter, the writer's plea for non-interference is quite legitimate. But it is unnecessary, for no outside force can make any writer who has not the feeling for it produce a work distinctly Canadian. Such force may bring forth novels embellished by geographical labels, or regional natural phenomena and so on, but that is all. Canadian writers will undoubtedly "take whatever place they merit in this broader field." But younger writers, who have not yet found a reliable and satisfactory sphere for their unexploredly potent efforts, have a need for this reminder, (this artificial stimulus if you will), that for those who do have the feeling for Canada there is a gloriously roomy field to write about it in. And other writers, who may be trembling on the brink, need this encouragement to keep above the conventional fabric for which American publishers pay much gold, by the yard.

Is this sufficient excuse for the existence of the artificial stimulation societies? —J.M.

In Reply

We have little to say in reply to the above, save that we notice that every writer named has sought the broader field. And as for the "artificial stimulation societies"—do they not usually degenerate into "mutual admiration societies"? We find the clever casuistry of our attacker strangely unconvincing and we are willing to let our "inconsidered and erroneous" opinion stand. —G.G.B.

Shining Lights of Blue
Sextette

By J. D. Arup

Successfully holding off a belated attack in the last period, Hamilton Tigers shut out Red Porter's luckless seniors 1-0 in an O.H.A. senior "A" fixture on Saturday night at Varsity Arena, and lengthened their lead over Nationals and Marlboros in the race for second place. "Gonie" McGowan scored the only goal of the game half way through the middle canto when Ames only partially blocked his hard drive, and the puck rolled over the line.

All the good hockey was played in the first period, but the game was interesting to the spectators right to the dying moments of the last stanza when Bill Stewart capped a hectic struggle in the Hamilton goal-mouth by trying to battle with "Beef" McKay, the

Revision

LANGE GERMAN SPOKESMAN

"That the territorial settlements grouped about the treaty of Versailles be revised," was the proposition placed before the Model Assembly of the League of Nations Club at their second meeting held in Alumni Hall last night.

Introduced by A. Zimmerman of Knox College, representing Chile, the motion was attacked immediately by E. B. Joliffe for France. "If Mussolini ruled Chicago, how would Ontario feel?" he asked bringing in France's need for security.

The neutral Netherlands represented by Mr. Lautenslager (Vic), added clarity by a new survey of the situation.

$25,000 DONATION GIFT OF ALUMNAE

Will Go to Furnishing of New Residences for U.C. Women

COLLECTED OVER DECADE

The Women's University College Alumnae Association have donated $25,000 towards the furnishings of the new University College women's residence.

Miss Agatha Leonard, chairman of the association, stated that although it has not been definitely settled, the recommendation is that the fund be used to furnish the public rooms, that is, the chief common rooms, recreation room, dining room and kitchen.

A committee is to be appointed which will consult with the property committee and the architect as to the actual spending of the money.

The fund represents a sum which has been collected over a ten year period. The original intention was that it should form part of the building fund.

PORTO RICO SENDS STUDENT DEBATERS

To Speak in Hart House 25th of This Month on U.S.
Influence

JOLLIFFE FOR TORONTO

From the West Indies to Toronto is quite some distance but it doesn't mean a thing to three young students of the University of Porto Rico who are coming all the way to Hart House from their own home town to speak at the debate here on the 25th of this month.

If names mean anything, they should be good, for they are sporting the fancy monickers of Victor Manuel Gutierrez, Antonio J. Colorado and Juan Enrique Geigel.

Toronto's representative on the paper at the debate will be E. B. Joliffe, Rhodes Scholar, who is going to introduce the motion: "Resolved that this house condemns the increasing influence of the United States of America in the affairs of this hemisphere."

The Debates Committee of Hart House has been in touch with the Universidad di Porto Rico since early last fall trying to arrange the visit and to reach an agreement on a topic for debate, but it was not until last week that a letter was received from the manager of the Porto Ricans stating that they will reach Toronto on the 24th.

Further interest will be attached to this month's debate since the annual elections for the Debates Committee for 1931-32 will take place immediately at the conclusion of the debate itself. Six new men are to be elected and every member of Hart House who has spoken at one debate this year is eligible for membership.

"College Wimmies Are Snawbs" Says Disillusioned Engineer Dishwasher

A significant contribution to the discussion of the Woman Question, which has been raging in the columns of this journal during recent weeks, is made in the following letter received from an evidently experienced reader in the Little Red School House:

Dear Ed:—
would u be so kind as to let an ignorant S.P.S. man express his vucs about snobs, on akount of us engineers being lackin in manners i shall not atemt to pay nuy atenshun 2 spellin grammaer as fokes mite think i wuz putn on the dawgs.

Thirteen months after the first sod was turned for the new Emmanuel College, the building was opened. On Friday, several members of the old West House, in the presence of members of the staff unofficially tore down the wooden barricade blocking the main entrance and declared the building open. Members of West House also turned the first sod. Friday will mark a memorable occasion in West House history.

TORONTO WILL HAVE FREE SPEECH MAG.

Robert Mulvenna to Edit New Journal of Open Forum Variety

FIRST ISSUE IN MARCH

As a sequel to the free speech issue a new publication will shortly make its appearance in Toronto. The journal will be called "Public Opinion", and will be under the editorship of Robert Mulvenna. In an interview with "The Varsity" Mr. Mulvenna outlined the policy of his latest venture.

"Public Opinion" will be a semi-monthly devoted to articles and letters from the public on all subjects of topical interest. It has been founded on the belief that many people realize that a change in our social and economic structure is inevitable and must come soon. This publication has been instituted to provide a medium for free expression and exchange of ideas. It is not the voice of any political party, group or individual politician, nor is it the organ of any denomination, sect, creed or cult. In these respects it will be independent in policy the general public—for its maintenance.

Canada Faces Economic Ruin, or Lowering to Level of Slaves

Stalin's Five Year Plan for Russia, to all indications, will be realized ahead of time, in so far as the production objective is concerned, according to the Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, who addressed a full house at Convocation Hall on Saturday night. The occasion was one of the open meetings of the Royal Canadian Institute, and the subject was the Russian Experiment and its Relation to Canada.

Pointing out that Russia's resources are duplicates of Canada's, Mr. Meighen showed how vital to Canadian life was some sort of protection from Russian competition in the foreign market. He declared that the present system of government in Russia will not live through the day when the peasants demand their promised rights. But in the meantime, in the next ten years, Russia will reach an importance in world affairs far above her pre-war status.

Canada, because of her similarity of raw materials and climate faces ruin, first and most complete among the nations.

of Inception of Residence Houses

FORMER DEAN OF WOMEN

Miss Margaret Wrong, a former Dean of Women at University College and now Secretary for Africa of the International Christian Literary Committee, was the guest of honour at dinner at the Women's Union on Friday evening.

It is through the persevering efforts of Miss Wrong that the first Women's Union, Argyle House and Hutton House came into being, and she had many amusing incidents to relate about their origin. Miss Wrong pointed out that in 1916 investigations were made regarding the places that the women of University College were taking their meals and these investigations led to the Board allowing her to start a Women's Union at 85 St. George St. as an experiment. It was poorly equipped and the kitchen was so small that, as Miss Wrong said, "It was necessary to engage a thin cook." But the venture proved a success and enough money was collected for improvements. Then through Miss Wrong's influence the Board purchased Argyle House,

Search For Perfect Female Ends To-day

Contestants in the search for the Perfect Female are reminded that the contest closes at 6.00 p.m. to-day. All entries must be in the office of "The Varsity" in Hart House before that time. Every entry should contain the name, (if an undergraduate), year and faculty of the sender and of the female marked, and must give the tally for each list of ten questions and the total for the hundred. Results will be announced as soon as possible.

FORESTERS MAKE MERRY AT ANNUAL RECEPTION

The annual at-home of the Foresters' Club was held in the music room of Hart House on Friday evening.

The music was supplied by the Varsity Entertainers' orchestra, to one of the largest crowds on record. Supper was served in the Great Hall at eleven o'clock and dancing continued until two.

The patronesses were Mrs. C. D. Howe, Mrs. J. H. White, Mrs. W. N. Millar, Mrs. T. W. Dwight and Mrs. R. C. Hosie. The committee in charge consisted of F. R. Hayward, convenor; L. E. Simpson, A. T. Catto and R. I. Young.

WAR IS NO SOLUTION

"There seems, at first, to be no connection between price margin and world peace," said Miss Irene Biss before the Youth Section of the Fellowship of Reconciliation Sunday afternoon. "However, there is."

A large and growing group learned that competition between nations for markets and for sources of supply were two very fertile sources of international friction. The standard of living and habits of the populace are important in international relationships. Emigration barriers are barriers to international friendship, said Miss Biss.

Over-population and the consequent need for expansion may be the main-spring of many wars. But war will not solve these economic problems. Markets are destroyed on all sides. Even the population problem is not solved for the loss in resources overbalances the loss in numbers.

TRICOLOUR FALTERS AS CAGE FIVE SECURES SEASON'S FIRST VICTORY

By J. M. Charlton

Varsity seniors scored their first victory in the intercollegiate basketball series on Friday night in Hart House when they defeated the Tricolour of Queen's University by the score of 30-26. In the preliminaries, O.A.C. of Guelph defeated Varsity in an intermediate intercollegiate fixture by 30-28, while in an intermediate Y.M.C.A. game, Broadview created a three-cornered tie for the lead by defeating the Varsity intermediate "B" team 32-27.

Scoring three baskets in the last five minutes of play, Howard Riggs, stellar forward for the seniors, clinched the senior game for Varsity after Sakler had put Toronto ahead for the first time in the game which was as close as the score indicates. Queen's held the advantage at half time, leading 15-11, but Varsity made a determined bid in the second period and overcame the lead to snatch a last-minute victory. Neither team showed championship basketball but the game was fast throughout and the issue was in doubt until the final whistle.

Queen's had a slight advantage in the initial frame, but were never more than five points in the lead, the period ending with the visitors ahead by four points. The second period opened fast, with Varsity trying des-

"Utterances of Dons Make a Laughingstock of University"

A demand for "a strong hand in control of the University" was made in the editorial columns of The Evening Telegram Saturday. Referring to "the recent eruption of sixty-eight professors" as evidence of the need of such control, the editorial goes on to attack the recent expression of his views upon the question of free speech by Professor Gilbert Jackson, supervisor of studies in Commerce and Finance. The article follows in part:

"The recent eruption of sixty-eight professors is insignificant except as it points to the lack of a strong hand in control of the university. If there were such control, the academic purpose of the institution would not have been disturbed by an issue which the citizens are quite capable of dealing with themselves. The university would then be most frequently heard of through its own achievements, and not through the utterances of a few dons whose activities make a laughing-stock of the university.

"There is not, and should not be, any desire to abridge the rights as a citizen of any members of the university staff. Even Gilbert E. Jackson, B.A., (Canlab.), should feel at liberty to participate in the personal controversy as to whether or not city canines should wear muzzles during the dog days. But even his undoubted eminence as a statistician does not endow him with special authority to determine that a community which is content with the orderliness of its present system of government should coddle a crew of rowdies who wish to destroy that government and to make a general nuisance of themselves in the process.

perately to cut the lead, but Queen's scored point for point until Hynes and O'Leary sunk field shots to tie up the game. Then Sakler put in a long floater which gave Varsity the lead. McLaughlin tied the score again with a good attempt, while on the tip-off O'Leary got possession, pivoted and sank a long shot. Thereafter Varsity was never headed. Riggs on a pass from Cock, scored from under the basket while Bewes counted for Queen's. After Hallett had put in a gift shot, Riggs dribbled the ball from centre and scored on a great effort. The flashy forward again looped the net on a pass from Collins with a minute to go that put the game on ice for Varsity. The whole Varsity team worked well together with Riggs, Cock, Sakler, O'Leary and Hynes outstanding. Collins turned in a nice game, but was kept off the score sheet, while Sniderman showed up well on the defence. McLaughlin, Bewes and Hallett were the best men for Queen's, while Carter turned in a good game at centre.

The preliminaries were both close and exciting. Broadview snatched a close game from the Varsity intermediate "B" team in which the lead alternated continually. The strong

AN APPEAL

In Great Britain to-day there are close on three thousand amateur dramatic societies. These societies have nothing in common with the old type of amateur "theatricals" and "play-actin'"—except, perhaps, the impulse and enthusiasm which led to their inception. These societies,—with few exceptions,—are directly connected with either one of Britain's two leading Little Theatre organizations,—the British Drama League and the Village Dramatic Society.

"The new spirit among the amateurs," says the London Times, "is one of adventure. It does not seek to copy, or rival the professional stage, but to appreciate it the more in those for which it is most fitted. By adopting a serious and critical attitude towards his vastly different work, the modern amateur has become a more intelligent theatre-goer, and is helping those who support him to be the same. His work does not interfere with the professional theatre; rather it makes for better audiences, and as a result better plays and players."

Next April the final of the annual Festival of Community Drama will take place in London. At the present moment the societies operating under the two national organizations are engaged in the preliminary rounds of this competition. The cup, which is the coveted prize in the Festival, was presented by Lord Howard de Walden at the founding of the event five years ago. The one-act play is the vehicle used by the societies in this competition.

The Little Theatre movement has not been neglected in Canada. There are well-known amateur societies in Montreal, Vancouver and other large centres, while in many less populous sections, there are to be found flourishing clubs engaged in serious work. In Toronto Hart House Theatre has long been regarded,—and rightly so,—as one of the continent's most important Little Theatres.

But there is no national organization in this country, comparable to the British Drama League or the Village Dramatic Society, nor,—so far as we know,—has there ever been any attempt at such a nation-wide competitive stimulus to serious amateur dramatic endeavour as Britain's Festival of Community Drama.

Yet, surely this Dominion stands in peculiar need of just such an organization, and just such a stimulus. It is unnecessary to remark with what pain the students of the theatre look upon the continued existence and activity in this country of the old type of amateur "theatricals", wasting valuable time and talent, and warping the dramatic and literary appreciation of the poor unfortunates thus engaged. We have, moreover, in this country, no native professional stage. And, with the advent of the talking picture, there are now only two cities in Canada to which touring companies from London or New York can look for an audience substantial enough to pay expenses. We are left, consequently, to the tender mercies of Hollywood. Even after we have been condemned to watching films for the rest of our theatre-going lives, we are refused,—except in a few of the large cities,—the solace of films from England and Germany. And the experimental films from Russia are denied us absolutely.

Canada's need of the Little Theatre is very great, not only to create an intelligent and critical audience, but to provide a satisfactory substitute for the professional theatre which our underpopulation denies us.

But without a national organization the task is hopeless. There is already too much overlapping of activity in cities like Toronto, which harbour a plethora of amateur dramatic societies. There is a body of prejudice engendered by the continued existence,—too often, unfortunately, under the aegis of the church,—of futile, "play-actin'", groups, which at the present rate of progress will not be overcome in the lifetime of anyone now living. There are still too many blind spots in our far-flung realm, to be cured by any means save an intelligent, constructive, national programme, backed up by a central organization, and fostered by a nation-wide annual festival of the Little Theatres.

Where is the leader to be found? We submit that Toronto, with its imposing array of serious amateur drama groups and containing as it does Canada's largest unilingual theatre audience,—Toronto is the centre from which such leadership must be expected. What is Toronto's answer? Or, in case Toronto does not answer, what agency is going to come forward to champion this important and vital cause?

Art, Music and Drama

H. C. Players' Guild

The first original production of the year, The Cyresses, by Selwyn Dewdney, was presented last week at the Players' Guild under the direction of Mr. Dewdney himself. A short play, devoted entirely to "atmosphere", it interpreted cleverly the life history of Friedrich Nietzsche, modern philosopher who was so grossly misunderstood during his life. The author attempts to direct the sympathy of his audience and shows him in the last stages of his illness before his death.

The play is didactic in character, no plot or action, but handled smoothly, both in technique and in characterization. At times it dragged slightly, and the insertion of the music and reading of poetry, rather weakened the theme, failing to produce the proper spirit of pathos that the author intended.

Dewdney himself took the part of Nietzsche, but hardly caught the spirit of the old philosopher. Helen Zavitz acted particularly well in the part of the sister, Lisbeth, and Marion Lossing as the Baroness, and Eugenia Watts, the mother, did smooth work, although not very free. Dennis Chitty was the young musician, taking the burden of the piano solo on himself.

On the whole, however, the cast played up to one another, and succeeded in giving a very smooth production. The costumes were extremely effective, though the stage effects were not so convincing as in "The Evil Kettle" for example, one of the recent plays given by the Guild.

This week, also, there will be another original play presented, "Abelard", by Stanley Ryerson.

Hart House Musicals

Geza de Kresz, the well-known leader of the Hart House String Quartet, with Ettore Mazzoleni at the piano, gave an unusually fine program before a very enthusiastic audience.

The recital opened with a sonata by Handel, whose grace, charm and vitality is seldom fully appreciated, possibly because his oratorios are successfully and periodically slaughtered. The tender melody of the larghetto and the beauty of the largo maestoso were delightful.

A remarkable display of superior violin playing came with the Bach Partita in B minor for violin alone. Based on four country dance rhythms, Bach applies his prodigious inventiveness, creating a fine suite of dances of complex and highly developed character, each of which is followed by an ingenious variation.

A "danse macabre" by a modern German composer, Heinz Tiessen, is colorful, fantastic and suggestive, and a concert rhapsody by a modern French composer Ravel, a witty modernistic imitation of Hungarian music as played by the gypsies, were both excellently played. The familiar Air for G string by Bach and a Hungarian dance by Brahms, completed the program.

The work of Mr. Mazzoleni deserves particular commendation for his skill and sympathy.

TIGERS BLANK VARSITY 1-0; "T" GIRLS LOSE TO QUEEN'S 3-1

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

The intercollegiate hockey team looked rather weak against Queen's on Saturday night, all three goals being scored from right in front of the net. The defence, while they played a good game most of the way, seemed distinctly weak on the three goals scored, allowing the Queen's players to go right behind them.

However, the team displayed plenty of pep, and except for the three lapses they turned in quite a good game. The Queen's squad have a well-rounded team and May Mills, on their defence, is especially good. They are particularly good on combination, and their goals, although she did not have much to do, looked very good on all her chances.

Betsy Burruss, in goal for Varsity, had no chance on the three goals scored against her, and she saved several times on what looked like sure goals. Dot Starr and Margot Thompson combined for Varsity's only goal, and played a good game all through.

The intercollegiate basketball team met Margaret Eaton for the second time this year when they clash at U.T.S. at 7 o'clock to-night. The Blues are anxious to avenge the defeat M.E.S. handed them on their first encounter and have been practicing hard in anticipation. They looked considerably improved against the seconds last week, and their shooting is spectacular.

Conny Smythe, managing director of the Maple Leaf Hockey Club, is to be asked to donate a trophy for the intercollegiate badminton club, newly organized campus sport. He is well-known for his generosity in this way, and a trophy would considerably stimulate interest in the game.

St. Mike's lost their third straight game in the intercollegiate series, when Senior Vic won their fifth game by a score of 3 to 0. The Double Blue displayed a woeful lack of practice, and Vic's combination was very good.

Junior Vic and Junior U.C. played to a scoreless tie in an intercollegiate game on Friday night. The game was very fast, and only the good work of the rival defences prevented scores.

A meeting of the faculties and colleges who are entering teams in the intercollegiate badminton league will be

DEFENCE OUTSTANDING

Varsity Senior Bees made it five straight victories by virtue of their win over Western by 4 to 0 Friday afternoon.

There was no scoring in the first period, both teams shooting from outside the defence. The play was ragged and dull. In the second period Varsity scored two goals and play pepped up a little. The last period was fast and exciting, Varsity adding two goals and missing chances for many more around the nets.

Williams scored the first goal on a beautiful solo effort, going through the whole team to draw Bowen out and poke the rubber past him. Ten minutes later in the same period Clute copied Williams' effort and backhanded one into the net.

Lawson was put off early in the third period and later Boyd and Herberts were benched for fighting. As soon as they went off both teams started to go full speed and kept it up until the final bell. Robinson pushed one past Bowen after a nice solo rush. A minute later Copp got the final goal on a pass from Robinson.

Varsity—Goal, Lebar; defence, Williams, Robinson; centre, Clute; wings, Conn, Charlebois; subs, Herberts, Copp and Mulvihill.

BLUE FIVE LOSES EXHIBITION GAME

Windsor Alumni Find Varsity Opposition Weak in 30-17 Win

JUNIORS WIN PRELIM

Being held up for several hours on the way and finally arriving at 9.30 p.m. for their exhibition game with Varsity senior basketballers did not seem to make much difference to the Windsor Alumni team as they stepped out on the floor and administered a 30-17 beating to the Varsity intercollegiate squad.

Dowd was the best man on the floor scoring in all seventeen points and running rings around the Varsity defence. Stewart and Pendlebury who arrived at half time, showed good form. For Varsity Riggs and Hynes both played smart games, while Cook, O'Leary and Sniderman showed good basketball. In the preliminary Varsity juniors defeated Central in an exhibition game 41-21. The game was fast but at no time were Varsity pressed hard to lead at half time 18-9.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By A. C. C.

Prior to Saturday night's game Marlboros, Hamilton and Sea Fleas were tied for second place and a chance to meet Port Colborne in the playoffs for the group title. As a result of the Tiger win, they have a jump on their other two Toronto rivals. Either the Ducks or the Fleas will be knocked out of the contention when they hook up at the Arena Gardens Tuesday night. The same night the Blues will be entertained in the Mountain City. After that Varsity plays Marlboros and Kitchener to wind up the schedule. The Ducks must also play Port Colborne while the Nationals take on Kitchener. If the Gnats can dispose of the Marlboros Tuesday night they will likely finish in a second place deadlock with Hamilton, that is, providing the Tigers win both games from Varsity.

Rod Smylie's senior Bees blanked the Aggies 4 to 0 Friday afternoon to stretch their string of victories to five straight. They have one more game to play in the intercollegiate group and that is in Hamilton against McMaster. Already the Blues have captured the intercollegiate title and the right to meet Windsor Mic Macs in the first game of the playdowns. The winner of the series between Varsity and Windsor meets the champion of the senior B group comprised of Belleville, Queen's and Oshawa. At present the Tricolour and the Bay of Quinte sextet are tied for the group leadership.

Last Friday night Varsity juniors played an exhibition game against Sault Ste. Marie in the northern town and emerged on the long end of the 6 to 2 score. They were much the superior team. Cunningham led the Varsity sharpshooters with three goals to his credit while Hendry notched two and Boddington one.

WOMEN PUCKSTERS LOSE TO QUEEN'S

Tricolour Win 3-1 in Opening Fixture of Two-Game Series

MARGOT THOMSON SCORES

As a result of their 3 to 1 win over University of Toronto, Queen's women's hockey team will carry a two-point lead into the second game of a two-game series for the intercollegiate championship. Queen's had a decided edge on the play all through, scoring two of their goals in the first period, and adding the third in the last. Varsity's goal came towards the end of the third.

Play was fairly even through the first period, with Varsity missing a great chance when they failed to score from a scramble in front of the net. Both the Queen's scores came near the end of the period, one on a nice solo rush by May Mills, starry Queen's defence player, who took the puck at her own net, circled the Varsity defence and went right in on top of Betsy Burruss, who had no chance to save. A minute later Gladys Simmons went through the Varsity defence to score.

The second period was scoreless, with Queen's pressing all the way. Fran Crooks missed a great chance, when the Queen's goalie came out of the net to save. Varsity pressed hard at the beginning of the third period, and when Doris Snell, Queen's winger was penalized, for holding Margot Thompson's stick, they lost a good chance to tally. Doris Snell ended the scoring for Queen's when she went through the defence and beat the goalie cleanly. With 5 minutes to go, Margot Thompson tallied for Varsity on a pass from Dot Starr, who took it through the whole Queen's team. Dot Starr missed a pass from Betty Carter when she had the goalie beaten cleanly. The game ended with Queen's pressing hard.

Queen's—Goal, Beth Paterson; defence, May Mills, Jean Nelson; centre, Gladys Simmons; wings, Doris Snell, Betty Adit; subs, Marion Guest, Mary Ewart, Dot Clemens, Bea Johnson.

biggest defence man to appear here this season. The Ambitious City squad failed to unleash either the scoring punch or the heavy body checking that was expected of them and on the night's play looked inferior to the fast skating Sea Fleas.

Both teams set a gruelling pace, and the regulars went the first fifteen minutes without relief. Don Smillie was outlined in the first five minutes when he shot from the blue line, went in for the rebound, and with an empty net in front of him, batted the rolling puck right over the cage. Varsity showed their best combination of the year in this spasm and Lenahan, Harley and Dewar all gave Marsh some close calls.

The middle session degenerated into a close-checking game of glorified shinny, with no passes by either team and some loose defensive work by the locals. Smillie knocked McKay high and far, while the crowd howled for more. McGowan finally walked in on Aines, after faking a pass, and his hard drive went for a counter.

The last period was faster, and with Varsity sending four men up on the attack, the Terrible Tigers had to resort to shooting the puck down the ice. Lenahan was right through all alone, but Marsh outgassed him. The Yellow and Black were hemmed in their own half of the rink until Stewart and McKay were given major penalties, and their experience in covering up saved the game.

Varsity—Goal, Ames; defence, Dewar and Smillie; centre, Stewart; wings, Harley and Lenahan; subs, Bell, Leak, Ferguson.

ACADEMICA

By kennethjerwin

At Rollins College, a course called "The Art of Making Love" has been added to the curriculum, and credit for five hours a week is given. The faculty reports "It's the only course in which you can depend on the class to keep ahead of the assignment. We suggest that one of these days the professor will enter the classroom and be compelled to expel a couple of students for taking the final exam too early."

From the McGill Daily. No doubt each one could get honours.

A few months ago the girls at Hood College were allowed only one bath a week due to the shortage of water in the district. The order of the bath, it is said became the order of the day. Were there theologs at Hood one could count on them to supply hose.

Mr. Meighen opened his address by briefly reviewing the history of Russia since 1914, and then outlined the Five Year Plan. By the end of 1933, by a process of a scheduled annual increase in production for each class of commodity, the general industrial expansion is to be 236 per cent. In agriculture it is to be 270 per cent. Last year's general output was just below the level, but many items far exceeded the objective.

Mr. Meighen explained that it is the fanatical patriotism of the poor peasants who endure untold suffering with the belief that they are waging the Quartet is again with us, and a large audience heard the third of their Toronto series with a great satisfaction.

The Haydn B minor is a pleasing number in thoroughly classical style and which, save for a few faulty "bows", was exquisitely played. The second movement, which is unusual in being a scherzo, is built on rather dainty lines with many curious accents and the Andante has a very lovely lyrical theme which weaves its way of sadness to a graceful staccato accompaniment. The Allegro Molto is a singular display of virtuosic technique, but is not particularly attractive.

The Quartetto Dorico by Respighi, best known for his orchestrations of Bach organ works, was one of the most attractive compositions of the modern school which this writer has heard. The number is in one movement and might be described as a dithyramb. Opening in a magnificent broad unison announcing the primary theme a few premonitory cadences are heard, followed by a delightful chorale. The movement works up to barbaric fury, the original theme frequently reappearing. A few bars of the chorale are again heard and in sheer frenzy the number is ended.

While his harmonies are almost as unconventional as a Hindemith, Respighi has a continuity, form, colour and intellectuality which was very effective and certainly comprehensible.

The final number was a Schumann Quintet with Miss Gertrude Huntly at the piano. This number comprised of four "allegro" movements is fussy, sweet, and slightly reminiscent of the atre organs "we have heard". There was considerable lack of unanimity between the quartet and piano, and while Miss Huntly has excellent technical equipment, there is a lack of crispness and clarity in her tone which made some passages duller than necessary. One also feels that considerably less piano in the fugue completing the quintet would have been desirable.

MEMOIR WRITERS ERR ASSUMING IN READER TOO HIGH KNOWLEDGE

Leading Journalist and Man of Letters Speaks at Women's Lit.

IS RETROSPECTIVE

Will Wait Until More People Die to Write More
Chronicles

"The mistake many memoir writers make," said Hector Charlesworth, editor of "Saturday Night" at the open meeting of the U.C. Women's Literary Society held last night, "is that they take it for granted that their readers know too much. An anecdote hasn't much point unless the author can make you visualize the original character and the atmosphere in which he lived."

Mr. Charlesworth is the author of "Candid Chronicles", published in 1925, and of "More Candid Chronicles" in 1928. Of another book "The Canadian Scene", published at the time of the sixtieth anniversary of Confederation, the speaker said he was aware of two readers. "The present Prime Minister, the Right Honourable R. B. Bennett must have read it, because he called my attention to an error." The other reader of the book was the present Crown Attorney, the Honourable Mr. Price.

"I don't think I'll write any more books. I have too much to do, and besides I have to wait until some more people die," said Mr. Charlesworth.

The speaker recalled the story of a Hamilton gentleman, who, determining to be foremost in the fashion, wore a monocle when they first came into use. Sir Allan McNab, riding down the street on horse-back, and coming up abreast of the gentleman, took his foot out of the stirrup, and applied

As a sequence to the lecture delivered on Saturday night in Convocation Hall by the Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen on the effects of the Russian Five Year Plan, the following statements represent fairly accurately the general student opinion on the subject:

Hugh Barrett, IV Victoria: "The Soviet five year plan was a highly advisable procedure if for no other purpose than to organize the country after the Revolution, even if it does not prove successful as an agricultural enterprise. It presents a very serious problem as regards competition with Canadian wheat in foreign markets. Russia is already exporting much wheat and may affect the markets of other products likewise."

"As regards the necessity of lowering the Canadian standard of living in order to compete with Russia in foreign markets, Canada may have to become merely a self-sufficient agricultural country and concentrate on industrial enterprise."

Andy Elder, IV U.C.: "The real menace of the five year plan is simply the fact that if it succeeds, and Russia manages to raise the standard of living of the lowest classes above the present standards of the lowest classes in other countries with whom she

Trinity Men Walk Out Rather Than Eat Meals

Indignation over the class of meals which have been served this year, reached its climax last evening at Trinity House when, in a body, members of the fourth, second and first years staged a walk-out at the commencement of the evening dinner.

Previous protests this year brought about no change so it remained for a general walk-out to express the feelings of the men at Trinity College on this dire subject.

With the exception of the third year, which remained intact, the majority of the fourth, second and first years rose in a body and left the hall. With the walk-out as an expression of their feelings, it is hoped by the men in residence that the college authorities will take some action.

WANT NATURE TRAILS

Some biology student, interested in the popular side of natural history, will be appointed as nature guide in the city parks if the city accepts an offer made in a resolution passed by the Toronto Field Naturalists' Club, at a meeting in the Biology Building last night.

The meeting was called to consider action for the preservation of natural beauties in Toronto's parks. The resolution passed is as follows:

Moved that a communication be sent to the City Parks Department commending the Department for the efforts that are being made to increase the natural history attractions in our parks. We wish especially to commend the efforts that have been put forth to attract and stock Catfish pond, High Park, with water-fowl. We also wish to express our appreciation of the assistance given by the Parks Department towards the establishment of the nature trail in Sunnybrook Park.

In making the following suggestions for increasing the attractiveness of our parks to those interested in natural history, we are not animated by the spirit of criticism, but seek rather to co-operate with the Department in their desire to have the parks used more extensively as centres for the study and enjoyment of nature.

To this end, the Toronto Field Naturalists' Club offers to co-operate by employing next summer a qualified person to act as nature guide, if the Parks Department will assist in the extension of the nature trail established last season and will undertake to afford greater protection against such depredations as occurred in the past. It is also suggested that an area be set aside in Sunnybrook Park, and preserved under natural conditions to

THREE FURNACE CHEERS

Yesterday morning Victoria College bore a marked resemblance to one of the far-famed Eskimo igloos of the North Pole. Whether the furnace finally balked owing to the efforts of the janitor to turn it into a generator of tropical heat, or whether it merely decided that the time had come for a holiday for the long-suffering Victorians, is a matter of conjecture. At any rate, the fact remains that after having caught all the colds and chills they were likely to catch in the frigid atmosphere of the college, the students were informed that "owing to the unheated condition of the main building of the college" the afternoon lectures would be cancelled. Three cheers for the old furnace!

By I. H. Cleaver

"I am against anything that is in any way injurious to the ideals of the state and the ideals of Christianity," said Hon. Charles M'Cree, Minister of Mines in the Provincial Government when asked by a representative of "The Varsity" for his views and that of the House on the continual controversy carried on in the local papers concerning the letter of the sixty-eight university professors.

"In dealing with this question we have only to choose between two things," Mr. M'Cree continued. "On the one hand we have the philosophy of the Christian religion joined with our state which has developed by the aid of British principles to a height of democracy that has not been obtained before, while on the other hand we have Atheism and Communism which have brought nothing of any value for civilization. Do we want to undo the work of our forefathers and destroy the very structure of our state that has taken years to develop? Do we want to convert Canada into another Russia?"

"I am for free speech when it is used to build up the state, but anything that destroys it ought not to be allowed. An ounce of prevention is

USE EXTRA TICKETS ONLY AT PLAYDOWNS

Thirty-Five Tickets Do Not Mean Thirty-Five Games

AUGMENTED CLIENTELE

"Because there are thirty-five tickets in the student's season book, is no guarantee that you will see thirty-five games," stated T. A. Reed, secretary-treasurer of the Athletic Association. "The extra tickets are there in case there might be some other events that the Association had not taken into account, such as playdowns. We cannot make tickets to cover basketball, assaults or water events because the gym or pool couldn't accommodate half of the students that buy these tickets and would like to attend. There has been a steady increase in the number of tickets sold. The scheme is on its third year. The first year we sold 800 tickets, the second about 1400, and this year we sold about 2500."

Mr. Reed declared himself very well satisfied with the student ticket plan. He said that it tremendously increased the attendance at the hockey games, something that had not been true when tickets were sold for all hockey games alone at two dollars a book.

These tickets are for students only, neither graduates nor members of the staff being allowed to procure them. The books are cheaper here than they are at McGill which charges five dollars for them.

This year 21 tickets have been used up to date and it seems likely that at least ten will be left over, but students get more than full value in the number of games they can see with their season ticket.

In reply to a letter in last Friday's issue of this paper from the Rev. F. Noel Palmer, General Secretary of the Inter-Varsity Christian Union, the following communication has been received from the Rev. F. J. Moore, General Secretary of the Student Christian Association of the University of Toronto. Reference is made to an interview granted a representative of this paper a week ago by the Rev. Mr. Moore and published at that time:

The Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

I have no desire to enter into controversy with Mr. Palmer, but I can scarcely let his interpretation of my remarks about Dr. Brown of Vancouver pass without comment. A reference to last Monday's "Varsity" will show that what I described as "silly" was not the fact merely that Dr. Brown does not believe in evolution—there I agree with Mr. Palmer—that a man must "be fully persuaded in his own mind"—but that he went further and said that he did not see how a man could believe in evolution and also be a Christian. This, I repeat, is silly, and as I said in the interview, dangerous. To tell a man that if he would be a Christian he must commit intellectual suicide, is both to discredit the Christian Church

ROMANTICISM IS OUT

"We are aware of a spiritual unrest in the creative minds of to-day," said Professor Pelham Edgar, lecturing on "The Trend of the Modern Novel", in Wymulwood on Friday. "There was a period of conservatism until the naughty 90's when respectability went out of fashion. Shaw began to set off his juvenile fire-crackers, assuring the world they were bombs—which it has believed ever since."

"The younger spirits, Katherine Mansfield and Virginia Woolf, find the present world good to laugh at, but offer no remedy. The war has changed us, and for the next decade the novel will dance on ruins. It is suffering from a high fever: the physician prescribes a rest, which will be disregarded, and the patient, as usual, will recover."

"To-day, we strive for economy of words, frankness, rather than hypocrisy, and repudiate romanticism completely. Young writers are alive to the value of the aesthetic, if only to create that vague emanation from reality we designate as 'atmosphere'."

"Many youngsters attain success by capitalizing their impudence, but it is doubtful whether they will steer 'The Apple Cart' or upset it."

A word of advice begged beginners not to indulge in unnecessary description, or such foolishness as 'said Reginald, nonchalantly flicking the ash of his cigarette'.

In order to give every possible contestant a chance, late entries will be received until 5.00 p.m. to-day.

"SOME ARE LENT, AND—"

The question, "Do you believe in note taking, and if so are notes much of an aid in reviewing for examinations or do you advocate listening to lectures without taking notes?" brought an unanimous reply in favor of note taking and note using at all times.

"I am a thorough believer in notes and I don't think we fully realize how much they help us when the time of reckoning rolls along," said Ross D. Crosby, II Vic. "Notes are a necessity and a ready help in time of trouble."

George Clifton, III S.P.S. replied: "Notes are essential to the engineer. He simply can't get along without them. Whether they are dictated or whether you are supposed to concentrate only, you take them and you use them."

A co-ed in U.C. III Household Science who refused to divulge her name, said: "Oh, yes, we take notes, but then we lose them or they are borrowed, so they are not a terrible lot of use after all."

H. Rothwell, Professor of History, who has done detail experimentation on different ideas of note taking, said: (Continued on Page 4)

DISCUSS PAMPERED SONS IDLE RICH, CARELESS ONES

Is the college a place of recreation for the idle rich? Even if a poor boy can get through college, can he enjoy the social side? These two questions were asked by a reporter on the campus, in regard to certain statements made at the U.C. debate last Thursday evening. The majority of the students agreed that the college was not a place of recreation and that the poor fellow had not much chance for social events. The Registrar, A. B. Fennell, on being asked for the estimate of how much a year it cost a student to go to the University of Toronto, stated that, in the Arts course, it cost around $120 per year, in the faculties of Medicine, Applied Science and Dentistry, about $220 per year, in Forestry about $145 and in Household Science the same as in the Arts course. He also stated that this did not include the cost of books.

S. Hermant, I Pol.Sc. and Econ., one of the debaters, mentioned that he said in the debate that the college "can be" not "is" a place of recreation for the idle rich. He further stated: "A versatile person can find time to do everything, but the person with the sense of value has to be careful and put his social activities last."

W. E. Beamish, II C. & F. stated: "Of course it is not true that the college is for the idle rich. As a matter of fact, the student of only moderate means is the backbone of the college. But still, the poor fellow, who hasn't any car, cannot afford to pay seven dollars for one dance, this being one disadvantage of being poor."

"Professor de Champ is a worthy representative of France and the best in French culture," stated Professor F. C. Jeanneret, when commenting to "The Varsity" on the fact that Professor de Champ has recently been made a chevalier of the Legion of Honour of France. "In his thirty-five years at the University of Toronto he has been to the students the ideal of French culture and courtesy. The Department of French is very much honoured and pleased; Professor de Champ is a real ornament to the Department."

M. de Champ is a member of an ancient French family, and is still very much attached to his mother country. Mme. de Champ returned to France after only one year in Canada, owing to ill-health, and every year M. de Champ goes home to be with her for some months. In spite of the time he has spent in Canada, he has remained essentially a Frenchman, and is well steeped in things French.

The Cross of the Legion of Honour, which is a reward for civil and military services, has been awarded to Professor de Champ as a recognition of his long and excellent services to France, not only as a professor at the university, but also as the President of the Alliance Francaise, an office which he has held since its inception.

Alumni

TD LIMIT ATTENDANCES

A new departure in Literary Society meetings will be established to-night when the first annual Grads' Night will be held. The University College Literary and Athletic Society working in conjunction with the University College Alumni Association, will entertain the graduates of the college at this meeting. The speakers for the evening will be the Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen and Judge R. L. McKinnon of Guelph. In addition a sing-song and musical numbers should help to provide a very entertaining evening.

Since the seating capacity of the Junior Common Room is limited, the tickets are being issued for the meeting. These will be distributed at nine o'clock this morning and at one o'clock this afternoon. Tickets will be good until eight o'clock this evening and after that members of the Society will be admitted until the seats are filled.

Nominations for the award of the Maurice Cody Memorial Prize will be made at this meeting and the winner chosen by a vote of the Society. The prize is given particularly for ability in public speaking as manifested at meetings of the Literary Society and for interest in the college and its activities. The prize is only open to members of the fourth year, but any member is entitled to make a nomination and to vote.

The meeting will conclude with refreshments and a smoker.

STRONG HAND

The Evening Telegram, that worthy publication which has recently taken a flyer into educating the dear taxpayers into the mysteries of "The Varsity", the Students' Administrative Council, and kindred subjects, had some illuminating contributions to make on Saturday's editorial page upon the subject of free speech et al.

"A strong hand in control of the University," it appears, is what is needed. The protesting sixty-eight, in that case, would have had no opportunity to shatter the academic calm "by an issue which the citizens are quite capable of dealing with themselves".

If this statement means anything, it means that there is a distinction between professors and citizens.

Evidently—as one might have supposed—it doesn't mean anything, because the learned editorial writer goes on to point out in an ensuing paragraph: "There is not, and should not be, any desire to abridge the rights as a citizen of any members of the university staff."

Yet, to abridge the rights of professors as citizens is precisely what the Telegram, in common with other voices of reaction both inside and outside the University, proposes to do.

The editorial proceeds to refer to Professor Gilbert Jackson in words of this sort: "... Even his undoubted eminence as a statistician does not endow him with special authority to determine that a community which is content with the orderliness of its present system of government should coddle a lot of rowdies who wish to destroy that government and to make a general nuisance of themselves in the process."

This is tripe.

Neither Professor Jackson nor any other of the sixty-eight signers of the famous protest have laid claim to any such special authority. These were not the grounds upon which the protest was signed. The sixty-eight signed their letter as citizens and nothing more. If the popular mind, in its innocence, chose to feel that the professors—because of their scholarship, their years of mental discipline, and their thorough knowledge of the principles underlying the British Commonwealth—were worthy of a respectful attention at least equal to that to be afforded The Evening Telegram—because of its late editions contain eight pink pages, surely that is not sufficient cause either for disenfranchising the professors as citizens or unfrocking them as dons.

Even The Evening Telegram's undoubted eminence as an advertising medium does not endow it, we submit, with any special authority to determine either that the present system is orderly, that the entire community is content with the system, or that it is in the best interests of the majority that any minority be condemned unheard and that the whole body politic be submitted to indignities which are not according to the tradition of our race and which will eventually defeat the very end they hope to gain.

To add to the general unfortunate impression exuded by its editorial page, this weighty publication adds as a parting shot a description of the "pedagogue" which is as extinct as the dodo. The professors are pictured as peering over their spectacles and short-sightedly failing to see what goes on under their very noses. "It means little," smiles the writer tolerantly, "that sixty-eight dons have banded together in a united declaration of what they don't see."

An eminent Toronto divine speaking recently in Hamilton remarked that the City of Toronto was fortunate and unique in possessing four daily comic papers. While we may not be willing to agree entirely with this divine, we cannot help admitting that editorials of the calibre of this Telegram offering do not go far to disprove his statement.

And yet this is the paper that complains that the sixty-eight professors are "making a laughing-stock of the University"!

The members of the editorial staff of "The Varsity" wish to express their thanks to the officers of the Newman Club for their kindness and courtesy in granting the use of their splendid House for the celebration last night of the annual party of the undergraduate newspaper.

Editor "The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

A recent issue of your most valued paper carries a report to the effect that University College men are once again proving themselves "the milk sops of the campus"—to quote the words of the versatile editor of the U.C. Magazine—pardon the "Undergraduate". In the largest college in the university, it is impossible to find any men in either second or third years to uphold the honours of their classes in a battle of wits and words.

In this connection may I express a criticism of the manner in which debating is conducted in the college. This year, the debaters from first year were chosen arbitrarily by someone—no one knows whom—without any notice being posted to the effect that debaters were wanted. There was apparently no thought of an elimination series among the freshmen to excite the academically inclined and to ensure that the winners would be truly representative of first year.

Let it be understood that I have no personal objections to the two debaters chosen to represent the first year. Knowing them both personally and having heard them both speak on different occasions, I am confident that they are capable of very creditably upholding the laurels of 314. But, I do object to their being allowed the honour of representing first year without first proving their merits against all who may care to try for a place on the team.

If this procedure of choosing first year debaters without an elimination contest has been pursued in the past, I can readily understand why second and third years are having difficulty

With the Theatres

For the benefit of our readers, pictures are graded as follows in this column: Average (0), below average (-1) or (-2), above average (1) or (2).

Loew's.

One Heavenly Night. (0)—Evelyn Laye—a beauty with a fine voice who can act a little—saves this show from the bone pile. A Budapest night club and a Hungarian castle; an impersonation and two clowns should provide good entertainment; but a fair plot is lost in the midst of poor direction and poor editing. John Boles makes a handsome hero. Leon Errol is funny.

Imperial.

Modern Wife. (1)—A bright and cheerful modern comedy. A very usual plot made interesting by careful and original handling of the details. Conrad Nagel and Genevieve Tobin make a possible husband and wife. "Slim" Summerville and Zasu Pitts make impossible lovers.

Shea's.

The Silver Horde. (0)—For a change, the wild, wild woman of Alaska wins her man; and the lily-livered heiress loses all. Not a very inspiring picture but the scenes would make a good news-reel. The stars are Evelyn Brent and Louis Wolheim. Bob Murphy is the best vaudeville master of ceremonies seen here lately.

Tivoli.

The Man Who Came Back. (0)—Charles Farrell and Janet Gaynor in heavy melodrama this time. Story is rather impossible, but interesting, and the atmosphere is effective. A young man, heir to millions, and gone to the dogs, is sent to Shanghai, to sink or swim. He wins out, however and with his wife goes back to his father. The picture is horribly censored, and the end is weak, but it is worth seeing. The shorts are very average.

Uptown.

The Cohens and Kellys in Africa. (-1)—If you are in a particularly vacuous mood you may get a few laughs out of this. The well-known Irish-Semitic team makes whoopee in African forests and in a motion-picture producer's conception of a sheik's menage. Perhaps it is a poor satire on Africa Speaks.

A patchwork of shorts distinguished for quantity rather than quality completes the bill. A film of the Music Appreciation Hour given weekly by Walter Damrosch and his Symphony orchestra is a fine exception.

WYCLIFFE ANNOUNCES LENTEN LECTURES

A series of Lenten Lectures, beginning February 28, will be delivered once a week in Sheraton Convocation Hall of Wycliffe College. All students and the public are invited to attend. The program is as follows:

February 28th—Humanism: A new challenge to Faith, Dr. W. E. Taylor;
March 7th—John Wycliffe's Work and Worth, Professor R. Mercer-Wilson;
March 14th—How we got the New Testament, Professor B. W. Horan;
March 21st—The Significance of Karl Barth, Professor T. W. Isherwood.
All students and the public generally are invited.

In getting anyone to represent them. The time for students to start college debating is in first year. The inordinate conceit with which all freshmen are supposed to enter university, should be put to good use.

So, Mr. Editor, I should like to ask the executive of the Lit., if they wish to give U.C. freshmen an opportunity to show whether or not they are as spineless as their seniors in the college are supposed to be.

One of the Frosh.

VARSITY SENIORS PLAY RETURN GAME IN HAMILTON TO-NIGHT

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

The senior basketball team displayed unlooked-for ability when they defeated Margaret Eaton 43-25 at U.T.S. last night. The team has improved remarkably since their first start against M.E.S., and the defence particularly turned in a strong game.

The forward line showed their last year's form when they ran wild right from the start and overwhelmed the M.E.S. defence so completely that they established an insurmountable lead in the early stages of the game.

The good work of Loretto McGarry, the jumping centre, was particularly gratifying. She played the whole game in this position and with Jean Allen and Eleanor Wallace on the defence, produced a performance that amply backed up the good work of the forward line.

Since the intercollegiate tournament will not be played until the end of February, and in view of the good showing of the team to date, a third successive Blue and White championship seems far from improbable.

At a meeting of the badminton representatives from half a dozen faculties and colleges concerned, it was decided that each college will enter three teams two doubles and one singles. Owing to difficulties about practice hours, a definite schedule could not be arranged. Managers are asked to have definite information as soon as possible.

Badminton is soon to take its rightful place among the recognized women's sports of this university. Official confirmation of this move is being sought from Miss A. E. M. Parkes, secretary of the Women's Athletic Association.

EMMANUEL TRIMS WYCLIFFE

Emmanuel College remained in the running for group honours last night when they defeated Wycliffe 2-1. The outcome in the theological group of the interfaculty hockey series depends on the last game between Emmanuel and Knox. Knox are leading at present.

The game was hard fought and many glorious scoring opportunities were wasted. However, all the goals that were scored were of the gift variety. The first period was scoreless. Half way through the second period Crosby opened the scoring for Emmanuel on a long shot. A few minutes later Perkins tied it up on a fast shot from left wing. Lockhart regained the lead for Emmanuel just as the second period ended. There was no scoring in the final session.

Addison was the outstanding player on the ice and made many fine plays. He was outlucked and deserved at least two goals. Wycliffe only had one sub and every man had to play a great game to hold the purple and gold.

Wycliffe—Pegler, Ruche, Fairweather, Wood, Perkins, Morrissey, Zimmerman.

Emmanuel—Williams, Armstrong, Inglis, Crosby, Lockhart, Addison, Binnington, Wills, Hussar.

Basket Girls Turn Tables on Opponents to Tune of 43-25

SHOW EXCELLENT FORM

Displaying complete reversal of form Varsity intercollegiate overwhelmed Margaret Eaton School by the score of 43-25 in a city league game at U.T.S. gym last night. Varsity started piling up the score from the first touch-off and their six-man defence baffled M.E.S. M.E.S. scored only two baskets until near the end of the first half when they made a quick succession of baskets which left them trailing Varsity 21-18 at half time.

After the interval M.E.S. came back fighting hard but Varsity showed magnificent combination and outplayed the losers in every department drawing steadily away from them. Foul shooting was extremely accurate. Wilma Hazlitt making all her shots count. Louise Crouch accounted for 18 points and Eleanor Sedgewick 15. Loretto McGarry at jumping centre, played a great game, showing excellent form. Ruth Tingley was high scorer for M.E.S. with 14 points to her credit.

M.E.S.—Ruth Tingley (14), Viola Harvey (5), forwards; Isobel Moyer (6), side centre; Ruth Hamilton, jumping centre; Dot Treble, Margaret Ryan, defence; subs, Marg. Withers, Theo Elmsley, Nora Withers. Varsity—Louise Crouch (18), Wilma Hazlitt (10), forwards; Eleanor Sedgewick (15), side centre; Loretto McGarry, jumping centre; Jean Allen, Eleanor Wallace, defence; subs, Betty Thomas, Bea Longley and Sally Ballard.

Interfaculty Track Meet

With the two mile run, the 880 yard relay race and the high jump all taking place to-morrow afternoon at the indoor track in Hart House, this section of the interfaculty meet should prove very interesting. The high jump should provide more than ordinary interest with Alex Munroe, Bob Dennis and Ford all providing competition. The feature of the two mile run will be Don Smith's attempt to win this event and thus fulfill an ambition first roused two years ago when he failed to make a clean sweep of the four longer runs by dropping the quarter mile dash. Wally Graham, Varsity's well-known two-miler, will not be competing. In the 880 yard relay six men compete each running once around the track and the race seems to be between U.C. and School, with the odds in favour of U.C. School will have Adams and Eaton, both good men, but U.C. has an array of talent in Brooks, Peart, Smith, Watson, Standish and others.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The seniors are scheduled to play the return game with Hamilton on the latter's ice to-night. The terrible Tigers were not so terrible here on Saturday, but it is a different matter up in the Ambitious City. Ask Marlboros or the Sea Fleas. It is just about as hard to win a game up there as it is to win a rugby championship from Queen's. The Yellow and Black need to-night's game worse than we need a pro football coach and they will probably stop at nothing. As for Red Porter's crew they are, of course, definitely and mathematically out of the running for the honours, but that doesn't mean that they will not be out there battling from the first going to the last as they have been in every game to date. Nothing would suit the Blues better than to spike Hamilton's chances for a playoff berth and with the Fleas and Marlboros cutting each other's throats (metaphorically speaking) at the Arena Gardens to-night, the situation in the "A" group of the senior O.H.A. race should be cleared up somewhat by to-morrow.

University of Toronto seniors are now officially champions of the City Water Polo League and holders of the Daily Star trophy. It took a long time and a good deal of wrangling before the title was finally decided, but at last Leo Latchford's team managed to overcome all the obstacles and win the honours. As far as winning games goes there was no doubt as to who was on top in the league, but several complications entered in. Usually in the league the first two teams play off at the end of the season. This year, however, a vote of the four teams, Central, Broadway, West End and Varsity was taken and it was decided not to have any playoffs. West End protested strongly. At the time Varsity and West End were deadlocked for first place each having tied a game with the other and won all the remaining games with one more each to play. It looked as though a playdown would be necessary in any case. However, Central unexpectedly came across with a win over the rival Y and the Blues were in there undisputedly, having chalked up a victory in their remaining fixture. After about a week's discussion, the Davenport Road Y, who were then more anxious than ever to play a two-game series, were forced to give in and Varsity were declared champions.

RUGBY MANAGERS

Applications for managers of the University Rugby Teams will be accepted at the Athletic Office, Hart House, until 5 o'clock, Thursday, February 12th.

NEW LANGUAGE NEEDED FOR INDIAN EDUCATION

"The educational problem which faces western teachers in India is the difficulty of using western methods without killing the spirit of that country," Miss Kilpatrick told her group yesterday at the Women's Union in an interesting discussion on "The Problem of Indian Education."

"Do not overlook primary education because in it is laid the foundation for the education of the masses. A new language is essential because the majority of the people are not sufficiently high-caste to learn Sanskrit; they are forbidden to do so. Sanskrit is inadequate for conveying English ideas in that a vocabulary does not exist in it for scientific words. The English language then is the instrument to be used in teaching English ideas."

MORGAN LAUDS GAMES AT U. OF CALIFORNIA

Descriptions in Magazines or Films No Equal to Action

BIG ROOTING SYSTEM

"It is a most wonderful sight to see an American football game, to see ninety thousand spectators standing on their feet and yelling at the top of their voices," stated Professor Morgan to "The Varsity" yesterday afternoon in an interview concerning the tendencies in American sport. Professor Morgan spent a number of years as a member of the staff of the University of California. "I went down there, like all Canadians, prejudiced against the American brand of sport, but I was slowly won over. I went to see one of their games and became as enthusiastic as any of them; I was quite surprised to find myself yelling so hard, and went home absolutely exhausted."

Professor Morgan described some of the games he saw. He said that he had seen versions of football games in cheap movie fiction, had read about them in magazines, but they did not equal what he had seen played in the bowl in California. Their big game is held during their Home Week and graduates come from all over the world to see that game. All tickets are five dollars regardless of the position in the stand. The gate receipts for this game usually run in the neighbourhood of four hundred thousand dollars.

The stunts and rooting are very elaborate. California has about eight thousand rooters dressed entirely in white shirts. This presents from the other side of the field a complete mass of white. By means of coloured cards and following explicitly the instructions that are given them, they are able to present such things as an Indian shooting a bear with a bow and arrow. These stunts are very elaborate and there are men who do nothing else the whole year round but think up stunts for occasions like this.

"I was always a critic of their sport," stated Professor Morgan. "It occupies too large a place in the minds of the students. As far as the players themselves go, I have nothing to complain of. They are fair students,

Fate of Latter Hangs in Scale with To-night's Victory

POSSIBLE 3-WAY TIE

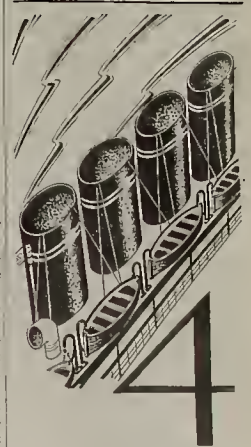

To-night's game with Varsity senior "A" team will either make or break the Hamilton Tigers, for if they succeed in topping Jack Porter's Blue and Whites they are assured of a play-off place, if not for the championship at least for place in the standing, while a defeat to-night will give either Nationals or Marlboros an excellent chance of gaining undisputed hold on second place.

As the teams now stand there is a strong possibility of the race finishing with a three-cornered tie for first place. Hamilton has this one remaining game and a victory will give them 14 points and a tie with Port Colborne for first place. The other two Toronto teams each have a chance to finish with 14 points also. Nationals and Marlboros meet to-night and the winning team will then have 14 points providing Marlboros can defeat Port Colborne in their final game. This is the best season senior hockey has enjoyed since the days of the Varsity Grads and it looks as if there will be more than one playoff before the group is decided.

and clean, straight-shooting chaps. I had many of them in my classes and when I flunked them, they took it without a murmur." Professor Morgan is by no means an enemy of sport. He has played many games, including basketball and English rugby. But he feels that sport has run away with the American students. He says that it is the non-playing sport, the chap who goes to college just to enjoy the sporting end of a university career that is the most harmful. Many of the players are first grade students, some getting as high as ninety marks in their examinations, but the majority are just good "C" students.

Another side of American sport that Professor Morgan does not like is that they play to win. The game to them is nothing; they want to win. A good example happened this year in the University of California. They had a coach that was under contract at twelve thousand dollars a year and had two years of his contract to run. He lost three games and consequently he was fired. He was paid the twenty four thousand dollars which his contract demanded and a new coach was brought in.

All the men on the California team are big men. The average weight for their line is two hundred and ten pounds. A small man, one less than a hundred and seventy pounds, is unusual. The climate is ideal for foot-

HAPPINESS IN RUSSIA IS GREATEST MENACE

"Russia is trying an experiment in happiness by which people are to live happily and honestly together as individuals with a minimum of necessities. This constitutes the real Russian menace, not the so-called 'dumping,'" asserted Dr. W. E. Blatz, addressing the Commerce Club in the Music Room of Hart House last Friday afternoon. "For if it succeeds, the rest of the world will be bound to follow. This does not necessarily mean by revolution. If a man sees Russians living happily and prosperously together he may try it in his own circle."

The Table Round

Radio Broadcasting

Mr. Bennett has promised action at the next session of Parliament with reference to the Radio Broadcasting. What that action will be is a mystery, probably even to Mr. Bennett. But in view of the continuous decline in the quality of broadcasting programmes, and the strong agitation in favour of a change, we may look for drastic action. It may be that a national broadcasting system will be brought into existence side by side with the existing private systems. If that happens the private systems seem likely to die a natural death, for they will not be able to compete either in quality or power. Perhaps the Prime Minister may take that way of escaping the outcry that would arise if he were to legislate them out of existence.

Censorship

Every once in so often a particularly bad blunder on the part of the authorities brings up the whole question of censorship. In the abstract it may be true that censorship is an evil, and in some particular instances it may become ridiculous, as when American authorities prohibited the importation of the Decameron of Boccaccio for a university library. But to advocate an absolute freedom for periodicals and moving pictures is patently absurd. A trip downtown in a street car full of girls is enough to make one think that the censorship of periodicals ought to be extended to cover a lot of asinine "romance" magazines. It is a pity that movies must be "cut", but the parts eliminated are usually deliberately pornographic, and not simply frank and open. "Frankness" has become a synonym for lewdness too often in this modern age.

MEMOIR WRITERS ERR ASSUMING IN READER

the stirrup to his eye, to the discomfort of the fashionable gentleman.

One of the memoirs to which Mr. Charlesworth referred was a life of a former governor general of Canada, Lord Minto, written by John Buchan. When that novelist was visiting Toronto, the speaker asked him if he had not undertaken the "life" because he and Lord Minto (who was an Eliot) had a common interest in the clans of the Scottish border. Buchan confessed that that was the case, and that he had come to the rescue of the Countess of Minto who was in a hopeless mess trying to edit her husband's diary.

At the conclusion of his address, Mr. Charlesworth was chatting with some of the members of the Lit. He related the following anecdote of a young lady whose name he mentioned, who only "lasted about a year" at the University of Toronto. The young lady, who was from Ottawa, was at a gathering at which Mr. Charlesworth's son-in-law Mr. Louis MacKay of the Latin department, was also present. When the conversation turned to classical topics, the young lady asked, "By the way Mr. MacKay, did Homer write the Iliad in Greek or Latin?" Mr. MacKay pondered the question a moment, then equally seriously he replied, "In Greek, I believe." Mr. Charlesworth was not quite prepared for the shout of laughter which greeted his story, but he was soon enlightened by the explanation that a younger sister of the young lady in question was in his audience.

serve as a sanctuary for wild flowers and other plants, and as nesting sites for birds. We also ask that a fence be built around an area of ground, an acre or more in extent in High Park, so as to protect from extermination some of the wild flowers most in need of protection, and that efforts be made to prevent the picking of wild flowers in the park. It is also suggested that efforts be made to attract birds to the parks by providing (1) more thickets in which they may nest, (2) nesting boxes for birds that nest in cavities, (3) winter food.

The Club will be willing to co-operate in having descriptive signs and labels placed along the waterfront in Exhibition Park, so that the waterfowl of many different kinds which frequent the lake shore there might be identified.

It is further urged that serious consideration be given to the possibility of providing more ample and congenial quarters for the animals now confined in Riverside Park.

and to go far towards keeping out of it the very type of man and woman that to-day it sorely needs.

Whatever else faith is, it is not accepting something in face of all the facts, nor even in face of a theory when that theory seems to be the only possible one in view of all the facts. I am no more of a scientist than Mr. Palmer, but I think I can see when science has a right to speak, and when its word must be taken. On the other hand, if all Fundamentalists were as ready as Mr. Palmer evidently is to leave it to Christian people to accept the teachings of Science or not according to their conviction, without calling in question the validity of the Christian profession of those who do, there would be no room for a quarrel. Unfortunately, this is not the attitude of Dr. Brown, and as the head of the oldest Christian organization in this university I felt that I had both a right and a duty to express my opinion when asked for it by the university newspaper.

Yours truly,

How. Personally, I think that if one can do this it is the very best way. At any rate a student should have a record of outstanding facts which may be gotten at the lecture and details may be added later as a matter of choice. Of course, the type of matter given at the lecture must be taken into consideration."

CANADIAN SPORT UPHELD BY U. OF T. ATHLETIC STAFF

Athletics not Over-Emphasized at U. of T. as in American Colleges

NOT COMMERCIALIZED

Sound Mind in Sound Body is Still Ideal Condition Declares Dr. Hendry

"I was always a critic of American college sport. It occupies too large a place in the minds of the students." Such was the statement of Professor Morgan a Canadian who spent some years as a member of the staff of the University of California, as quoted in yesterday's "Varsity".

American influence in this respect has made no great impression at the University of Toronto, according to several members of the athletic department approached by "The Varsity". When asked if sports are emphasized overly much here, Mr. T. A. Reed, secretary-treasurer of the Athletic directorate replied as follows: "I would not think so. Every endeavour is made that athletics should not interfere with academic standing. The standing of those taking part in athletics is well up to the average." In the University of Toronto, those playing for university teams must keep up their academic standing or they are no longer eligible for the teams.

Dr. W. B. Hendry, chairman of the advisory committee on rugby, contrasted conditions here and south of the border. "When sport becomes highly commercialized, there is a danger of over-emphasis on efficiency, instead of general physical development." "Mens sana in corpore sano" — a sound mind in a sound body — is still the ideal condition, and, according to Dr. Hendry, athletics develop your body and thereby benefit your mind at the same time.

ANGLO-SAXONS INCREASE

Upper Canada College is apparently in a class by itself. Dons of the college have found it necessary to install seven foot beds for the students. The tall boys are keeping away from the University of Toronto, however, for deans of several men's residences interviewed yesterday by "The Varsity" claim that they are having no trouble with feet extending beyond the footboards. There are exceptions, but on the whole the boys can stretch out in their little trundle without getting their feet cold.

"I have found no noticeable increase in the height of the boys here during several years' observation," Dr. F. G. Kingston, Dean of Trinity House, told "The Varsity". "Of course," he continued, "we have one or two very tall boys each year, and have a few beds of extra length for such exceptions. But I don't think I have found enough examples to say that the average height of the boys is increasing."

W. J. Little, of Burwash Hall, said he has never had to face the problem of an epidemic of tall boys. When asked what size beds were in use at Burwash, he replied that they were "just beds". "I don't know the exact length of the beds," he said. "When

University Benefits Young Men Physically

University life is of great benefit, physically, to the young men in attendance, according to Dr. George D. Porter, medical director of the men's physical department. "The physical development of the boys in second year is considerably greater than that of the freshmen," he told "The Varsity" yesterday.

In 1930, 93 per cent of the boys were strong enough physically to undertake all physical training and sports. Five per cent were able to take physical training under special supervision, while three per cent could not take any form of physical training or sport. Strangely enough, the figures were exactly the same in 1929.

ENGINEERS HEAR SPEECH BY STERN

Compares Concrete Structures in Europe and America

EUROPE IN ADVANCE

The Engineering Society of S.P.S. yesterday afternoon listened to one of the most interesting and distinctive addresses, delivered to them in many months. The speaker, E. W. Stern, spoke on "Reinforced Concrete Structures in Europe and America". Mr. Stern, a graduate of School, is a well-known New York consulting engineer and an authority on his subject.

Europe is far in advance of America in the use and development of reinforced concrete. All the new hangars at Le Bourget Field, Paris, are constructed of reinforced concrete. In Paris there are two huge, new dirigible hangars also built of reinforced concrete. These hangars are built for military purposes. No one shell could possibly destroy them. In fact they would have to be practically riddled with shells before they would collapse. On the other hand the old war-time hangars of corrugated iron would collapse under one direct hit.

Europe has the largest dome in the world with a diameter of 235 feet. A striking feature of this dome is that the concrete is only a few inches in thickness. The Germans have built a huge dome of reinforced concrete for a planetarium. The French are now developing permanent colours in their mortar.

In America the west coast has taken the lead in the use of reinforced concrete. Here there are many dignified and imposing buildings, including churches and colleges of this construction.

America, however, is greatly in advance of Europe in steel construction. The largest expansion bridge in the world is in America. The Hudson River bridge when completed in 1932 will be the largest expansion bridge in the world. America is ahead of Europe in the construction of steel bridges because all the American steel construction companies are headed by engineers. In Europe such is not the case. A famous French engineer is now proposing to build a bridge with a span of 5,000 feet.

The up-to-date use of reinforced concrete is to abolish the ugliness of steel.

NEW ORATORICAL CLUB HOLDS FIRST MEETING

Constitution Drawn Up and Officers Elected, but No
Name Decided

St. Michael's Oratorical Club has a new rival on the campus. Yesterday afternoon, students in first year Law, Political Science, English and History and Modern History, met in Baldwin House and, amid great enthusiasm, drew up a constitution for an Oratorical Club among these courses. The question of a name aroused so much discussion that it was left over until next meeting.

The officers elected were: President, R. A. Bell; Vice-President, J. K. Blair; Secretary-Treasurer, P. E. G. Beckett.

The membership of the club shall on no occasion exceed twenty. New members may join by being elected by a unanimous vote of the members present at any meeting. Judging by the zeal displayed by those present, the club will form a welcome addition to the already great number of clubs in these courses.

HAIL THE PERFECT FEMALE!

Pansy is not the University's Perfect Female

After wading through dozens of entries till a late hour last night, the judges eventually came to a unanimous decision and awarded the crown of honour to Miss Carolyn Temple, II Victoria, entered by L. Mitchell Greene, I Victoria, with a complete total of 1,000 points. In proposing the name of his choice, Greene wrote, "Miss Carolyn Temple is the winner of your contest with an unbeatable percentage of one hundred. While your queries were enough for the ordinary female there were many others which apply to this wonderful little woman."

Great difficulty was experienced in deciding on the winner of the contest, as Miss Temple was not the only candidate entered with the maximum batting average. The decision of the judges was based on the fact, however, that the winner's name was the only one which was awarded no lower figure. Every other female who received 100 per cent from one or more males, was also credited with a slightly lower average by others whose choice she was. The winner was the only female in whom no male was able to discover any flaws.

"Professors of all citizens have a right both of speaking their opinions and of receiving a respectful hearing," declared Rev. G. Mr. Russell's answer was made unhesitatingly and with firm conviction.

"There is no doubt," he said, "that the opinion of a university professor who is, as a rule, a trained expert in some department of life, is of outstanding value. To begin with he is an educated man, which is often more than can be said for his critics. He has had the opportunity of examining public questions with an impartiality and detachment impossible to the politician or even to the journalist, both of whom are usually interested in the promulgation of ideas favourable to

Workmen Injured

A police ambulance with its siren blasting a passageway up St. George St. quickly backed into the alleyway of the new University College women's residence at Hoskin and St. George at 8.50 this morning.

Walter Joyce, plastering contractor on the job, sustained severe back injuries when his coat accidentally got caught in the gears of a hoist, causing him to be hurled sixty feet to the ground. The injured man was removed in the ambulance to the Western Hospital and his condition was reported late yesterday afternoon to be fairly good. The superintendent of construction, a brother of the injured man, stated no one was to blame for the accident.

CO-EDUCATION NEW IN FRANCE: DEBRAY

Girls Inclined to Specialize in Languages; Leave Philosophy to Men

SOCIAL LIFE ABSENT

Co-education is very recent in France, M. Debray told the French Club last evening at the Union. Before the war girls were educated in separate schools but invaded the university when the men were required at the front. There are many feminine teachers in France now. Girls, however, are inclined to specialize in languages and leave the intricacies of philosophy and law for masculine minds.

The university of Paris is composed of five faculties, letters, science, law, pharmacy and medicine. These occupy separate buildings on the banks of the Seine. The Sorbonne is the faculty of letters, or arts.

Social life as we know it in America is somewhat noticeable for its absence. The relations between French and foreign students are rather strained owing to the fact that there is little opportunity of becoming acquainted.

Institutions for foreign students have been founded in recent years. Ever since the war Americans have been sending their children to France to learn something of the land in which "they won the war".

Another feature of the evening was a very amusing play written by Betty Holland, a first year student.

Special to "The Varsity" by Norman
Dickson, "Varsity" Sports Writer

Hamilton, Feb. 10—Varsity's senior hockey team furnished stiff opposition here to-night against the Hamilton Tigers in a senior O.H.A. group "A" contest that ended 3 to 0 for the Bengals, which places them on the top rung in the standing with Port Colborne.

Tigers uncovered their best effort of the season to win this game which would have meant elimination for them had they lost. Varsity, likewise, uncorked their hidden strength and the crowd present were treated to a smart exhibition of fast and thrilling hockey. Varsity extended the Tigers to the limit and it was the slight edge in the comparison of the teams that brought victory to the Yellow and Black.

Hamilton presented a five-man defensive system that could not effectively be pierced by the Blue forwards. The Tigers covered up well in front of Marsh, giving him perfect protection. On the other hand, Ames had his hands full stopping close in drives from "Gooney" McGowan and "Hurricane" Kane, who were able to get through and pick up loose pucks around the Blue nets.

Varsity gave their best and though beaten they battled the Bengals for the full sixty minutes. Not a member of the Blue and White was below par

PANSY SHOULD WIN

Where are all the worried women, tearing their hair in their anxiety about the all-important contest results? Where are all the frightened females, hiding themselves from society lest their friends should find them perfect? In fact, where is all the hurrying and scurrying, squeezing and teasing of the more curious and daring to find out the worst as soon as possible? There are none. There is none.

In a desperate search to discover the quantity and quality of the probable casualties or strokes caused by the approaching crisis, "The Varsity", armed to the teeth against any unexpected attempt at violence, ventured forth across the campus. All this with the half-formed idea of bumping into a long line or mob of flawless females waiting outside the Press or "The Varsity" offices—some hysterical, others composed and grave, some weeping, others swearing, all in some state of nervous wreck. There might even be the chance of a fight! But what disappointment! It was all a bad attack of imagination it seems!

A few Queen's Hallites attempted to explain this state of affairs by saying: "What's the use of worrying?"

"WHERE WE STAND"

Well, where do we stand?

This is Volume XLIX Number 77 of "The Varsity".

Two years ago, between Numbers 76 and 77 of Volume XLVII of "The Varsity", an editor lost his job. He was dismissed by the S.A.C. because he wrote an editorial in Number 76, entitled "Where We Stand". It was a plain-spoken editorial which claimed that the S.A.C. was demanding a degree of "co-operation" from the editor-in-chief which that body had never seen fit to reciprocate. It complained in straight terms that members of the S.A.C. had made statements relative to certain matters of publication finance, which were untrue. It cited chapter and verse and told why they were untrue. It pointed to examples of "lobbying" against the then editor on behalf of certain officials and declared that these officials had, throughout the year, brought pressure to bear upon the Joint Executive that the editor be dismissed.

"We can understand why they want us out," declared the editorial, "because we say 'inconvenient' things. But why do they attempt to pose as student representatives? Student consent has been and can be obtained only by misrepresentation."

"Students are told that there is a debt on the Council's hands. There is not. There is a surplus. Students are told that other Canadian student papers are run under the same conditions that we have faced this year. No other student daily in Canada is published by a staff that remains at press all night, during the proofing and composition."

"Let them bludgeon the student representatives into firing us. They cannot deny that we have been the victims of unprecedented treatment."

And L. J. Ryan was fired.

Number 77 did not appear the next day. For twenty-four hours there was no editorial staff of "The Varsity", because the entire staff had walked out with the editor-in-chief, agreeing—in very deed—that he had been the victim "of unprecedented treatment". The next day a single-sheet publication appeared, entitled The Varsity Bulletin, written and published by certain members of the Joint Executive.

A statement from the Joint Executive, appearing in this Bulletin, declared that the previous day's editorial had been a direct breaking of a pledge to the S.A.C., signed by the editor-in-chief, in which the latter had agreed "to see to it, to the best of his ability, that there will be omitted from the pages of 'The Varsity' personal attacks, attacks on colleges or faculties, attempts to sow discord between faculties, personal bitterness and vindictiveness and offensive epithets".

Reading the famous editorial of Number 76 in the comparative calm of two years later, we find it hard to believe that the members of the Joint Executive of the S.A.C. were able to justify the dismissal of L. J. Ryan on the grounds given. Neither at that time nor at any later time did they make any attempt to answer any of the charges levelled in the disputed editorial, save by one categorical declaration: "The statement made by the editor that he has lacked the co-operation of the Joint Executive in the past is denied."

Has the position of the undergraduate newspaper improved with the passage of two years? Is this paper more independent than it was then? The Evening Telegram, which in that fight took up the cudgels in behalf of the embattled and exiled "Varsity" staff, appears to think that the advent of the new constitution spells the doom of the free press on this campus. Without pausing to ask the very natural and pertinent question as to where there is to be found either in this city or in the Dominion of Canada an example of the free press, we suggest that only sufficient time for practical interpretation and operation of the new constitution will prove whether the place upon which "The Varsity" stands now is more strategic than the place whereon she stood two years ago.

In the meantime, we have to remember that both the new constitution and certain highly significant changes regarding the voting of permanent employees, the representation of editors, and the presence of certain non-teaching members of the University staff on the S.A.C., have all resulted from the revolution which took place between Numbers 76 and 77 two years ago.

DOING NICELY

The editor is informed that, at last night's meeting of the University College Literary and Athletic Society, the President of that organization

Art, Music and Drama

M.C. Players' Guild

Abelard, an original play by Stanley Ryerson, is to be presented at the Players' Guild this afternoon. The play is mainly a character study of the famous mediaeval Frenchman at the period of his life when, shattered in body and metamorphosed strangely in mind, he resolved to put away his lover and wife Heloise, and retire to a monastery. It contains penetrating study of the relations between the sexes and shows a creditable mastery of the psychology of such a mind as Abelard's.

Though the drama is necessarily static, there is quite sufficient interplay of personages to avoid monotony. A high, vibrant pitch. The sometimes sombre, sometimes harsh, sometimes tender, and always poetic character of the lines gives flexibility to their invariable forcefulness.

The role of Abelard is being played by Mr. Ryerson, that of Heloise by Miss Patricia O'Reilly, that of Denyse, the sister of Abelard, by Miss Patricia Godfrey, and that of Hugh, an old retainer, by Henry Noyes.

—J.M.

The Gondoliers

As an amateur production The Gondoliers presented last night by the Victoria College Music Club, was a success. But it was not the success expected from a society that boasts of its Gilbert and Sullivan traditions.

Musically, little fault can be found after due allowance is made for the inexperience of the soloists, and the relatively speaking untrained singers who compose the chorus. Of course there was a certain shadiness of attack, and the voices of some of the leads lacked carrying power; but the tonal quality was remarkably good, and there was a certain freshness to the songs and well modulated warmth to the choruses that was very pleasing.

The light operas of Gilbert and Sullivan, however, consist of more than the music. The greater part of the plot is revealed by spoken lines; and of course the whole piece is very fine comic drama, and of course, requires studied acting and direction of a high calibre.

It is unfortunate that the Victoria

Society has not realized that the speaking-voice requires just as much training for stage work as the singing voice. The Gondoliers is a fine example of an operetta that loses unity if the players do not read their lines with carefully accented voices that reveal some education in cultured voice production.

The direction so far as stage movement is concerned is very fair. But the principals are allowed to shuffle around rather aimlessly, the chorus does not seem to realize the impropriety of crossed legs in this type of production and from time to time individuals in the background either indulged in a little disturbing by-play of their own, or passed right out of the picture by allowing their wandering gaze and listless attitude to indicate momentary amnesia. This last fault was commendably absent for the greater part of the evening, but in a chorus as large as that in this show, and on the close-to-the-audience stage of Hart House Theatre, the least slip of this kind is painfully evident. Individual tricks of acting, so memorable a feature of D'Oyly Carte presentations, are mostly absent. However, the few concerted gestures attempted by the chorus pass off very smoothly and effectively.

The stars of the show are first, Betty Oram, for her clearly enunciated singing. Better than any of the rest, she mastered the clear and distinct diction essential to the rapid delivery of musical comedy lines. Perhaps the most commendable acting was that of Georgina Green (as the Duchess), who seemed to fall into the vivacious satirical style demanded with rare abandon.

In the finales to both the first and second acts, these two, and Aubrey Smith, Roy Wood, Campbell Graham, Gordon Maxwell and Jean Evans were really effective. Joan Welford was an attractive heroine, and Helen Emerson sang her few lines with proper feeling.

The production was a credit to the society but could have been one hundred per cent better had the same attention been paid to the acting and speaking voices as was paid to the music.

Dr. Crawford conducted the piece with unobtrusive skill.

Rumours appear to have reached the public ear that Pansy is not what she seems.

C-C

Everywhere we go we are besieged by hordes of furious females who accuse us of using them as our inspiration.

C-C

Some of them are so insistent we almost believe it ourselves. At a party the other night we became a trifle hilarious and suddenly found ourselves on the verge of proposing to one of these unfortunate maidens. We were rescued from this rather ticklish situation only by the timely intervention of a few loyal friends, who saw we were in a tight place.

But to return to the beginning (no, Mabel, we are not writing this on a merry-go-round) we are not yet ready to announce Pansy's true identity yet, but in order to calm the fears of self-conscious suspects, we are going to print from time to time the names of persons who are not Pansy.

declared that during the past week—since the despatching to the editor of "The Varsity" of a missive of censure on alleged "editorial policy"—there had been remarked a very noteworthy improvement in the columns of that paper.

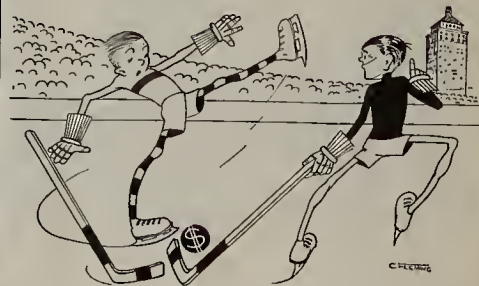

Since we never received the missive in question, and have had to content ourselves so far with rumours as to its existence, we can only express our humble gratitude to the gods that the blind spinning of the Fates has enabled us so signally to regain the good graces of this august body.

INTERMEDIATE "B" BASKETEERS ELIMINATE WEST END IN PLAYOFFS

THE SPORTSWOMAN

The Varsity second basketball team will meet Margaret Eaton in their initial clash this season on Friday night. The M.E.S. team has already played the seniors twice, coming out on top in their first encounter and losing the second.

The seconds did not fare so well against the seniors last week and they will be out to hand Margaret Eaton their second successive defeat. Although there is still one player to be dropped from the intercollegiate team, definite announcement of the senior line-up has not yet been made.

The intercollegiate hockey team will meet Silverwoods for the second time this year at the Mutual Street Arena to-night at 7.30. Although Varsity has yet to win a game they are confident of turning the trick on Silverwoods to-night.

Permission for the use of the U.T.S. tank to-night has been granted to University College for their annual swimming meet. This event is the fourth in a series of faculty and college meets held in preparation for the interfaculty meet in March.

U.C. DOWN ST. MIKE'S IN SENIOR HOCKEY

Helen McGibbon Scores the Only Goal of the Game

PLAY WAS SLOPPY

Senior U.C. defeated St. Mike's by the score of 1-0 in an interfaculty hockey game at Varsity Stadium last night. The game was a sloppy exhibition interspersed by fast play of the wings. The only goal of the game was scored in the middle of the first period when Helen McGibbon banged the puck into the St. Mike's net after a wild scramble in front of the goal. In the second and third periods the teams tightened up and the play was much improved. The defence on both teams lacked the ability to carry the puck past the opposing players to their forwards.

TWO MILE INDOOR RECORD SHATTERED

High Jump Record Almost Broken — Don Smith Breaks Record

TWENTY SECONDS FASTER

One record was broken and other good marks set up as U.C. strengthened their hold on the leadership at the third session of the indoor interfaculty track meet held in Hart House yesterday.

Don Smith of U.C. broke the intercollegiate indoor record for two miles by twenty seconds, and Vinnels of Vic came within one inch of doing the same thing in the high jump.

Next Tuesday the mile relay, the 100 yards and the standing broad jump will be run off, while on Tuesday, February 24, a special meet will be held when the shot putt and the pole vault will take place.

Yesterday's results are as follows: Two miles—1, Don Smith, U.C.; 2, K. Reid, U.C.; 3, Wilson, U.C. Time: 9:59 1-5.

Running High Jump—1, Vinnels, Vic; 2, Ford, Vic; 3, Dennis, U.C. Height: 5' 7".

Half-mile Relay—1, School; 2, U.C. Time: 1:50 2-5.

SWIMMING COMPETITION IS NOW BEING HELD

Durnan Trophy to be Awarded for General Proficiency in Swimming

The competition for the Durnan Trophy is now being held. This cup is in the form of a general proficiency trophy in swimming and is awarded to the individual swimmer securing the highest number of points in six events. These are: 50 yds. free style, 200 yds. free style, 100 yds. back stroke, 200 yds. breast stroke, plain and fancy diving, and 440 yds. free style.

The first four events were run off on Monday and Tuesday. The remainder will be completed to-night.

The standing and total number of points for the first ten swimmers is as follows: Glass, 1270; Henderson, 1220; Sinclair, 1216; E. Henderson, 1186; Armstrong, 1156; Bell, 1134; Tedman, 1102; Nasmith, 1012; Buchanan, 965; Smith, 937.

CANADIAN SPORT UPHELD BY ATHLETIC STAFF

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By De C. H. R.

Totalling a single point more than their rivals, the University of Toronto intermediate "B" basketball team eliminated West End Y.M.C.A. from the playoffs of the second part of the group series last night in a hard-fought and closely-contested game at Broadview Y.M.C.A. At half-time the Blue and White basketweavers were trailing behind, but Willis led a rally in the final period which gave them the victory by a close margin. Loblaw and Humphrey contributed their bit to the offensive tactics adopted by Coach McCutcheon's men in the last few minutes of play, the work of Loblaw being especially effective in garnering points.

Previous to the game last night the Varsity cage team was tied with West End and Broadview for high place in the group. By eliminating West End the U. of T. intermediates qualified to meet Broadview next Thursday night on the Central "Y" floor. Victories have gone haphazardly to all three teams during the second part of the series, so we hesitate to predict a win for either team. It is enough to say that neither quintette will be slouching, so the type of close playing basketball that appeals to cage fans should result.

An intercollegiate indoor track record unofficially went by the board yesterday afternoon when Don Smith stepped two miles faster by twenty seconds than any intercollegiate indoor runner has yet done. The interfaculty indoor track meet has been featured by some fast exhibitions this year, and the remaining events will be watched with interest.

Varsity's senior hockey team put forth every ounce of strength last night in their final game with the Hamilton Tigers in the Ambitious City, but the Battling Bengals went the Blues one better and uncovered some of their hidden ability that has been lacking in their games up to the present. "Red" Porter's men started out to battle for a win from the very beginning. There was nothing at stake for them but it was this same Tiger aggregation that put them out of the Allan Cup playdowns a year ago and perhaps the memory of that 2-0 defeat after a 2-1 win in Toronto had something to do with the magnificent efforts from the Blue and White players. Once again the work of "Doc" Ames in the Blue and White nets featured the work of the Varsity team. Ames certainly deserves an equal ranking with the foremost in the senior A.H.A.

ST. MIKE'S BASKETEERS DEFEAT JUNIOR SCHOOL

St. Michael's downed Junior School yesterday afternoon at Hart House in a low scoring interfaculty basketball game. Close checking and hard luck on their shots kept St. Mike's scoreless in the first half, while School netted one basket.

In the second half Culklin for St. Mike's netted several points to put the double blue in the lead which they successfully maintained. The final score was 9-6 for St. Michael's which practically clinches the group for them.

Culklin, DeLair and Hussey were the best performers for the winners, while Cahoon turned in the best game for School.

VICTORIA DOWN TRINITY IN INTERFACULTY BALL

Victoria defeated Trinity yesterday afternoon in an interfaculty baseball fixture by 14 runs to 1. Trinity scored their lone tally in the fourth inning when Simmers was walked. Willis was the high scorer for Victoria with four runs in four times at bat. Garton and Malloy were invincible in the Victoria box. Victoria scored three in the second and third and four in the fourth and fifth.

Trinity—Lowe, Ingram, Simmers, Bell, Hamilton, Cattell, Mann, Little, McMullen.

Victoria—W. Christie, King, Leask, Grant, Little, Willis, V. Christie, T. Hart, Amos, Garton, Malloy.

that there is no move towards playing to win, instead of for the game's sake. If the right man were chosen, this would be avoided."

So much for the players. What of those who "only stand and wait"? The magnificently organized cheering sections, etc., of the States colleges have no real counterpart up here. Such a movement, making the sports take a large place in the lives of the students in general, without giving them the physical benefits which should go with it, is not affecting the University of Toronto.

The general opinion was that here sport is in no need of restraint but keeps to sensible proportions, and as such is an undoubted benefit to all connected with it.

LORETTO CLASSICAL ASSOCIATION MEETS

"Virgil Wished to Prove that Greatest Courage is Moral Courage"

TOOK FORM OF DEBATE

Last evening the students of Loretto College and their guests of the evening were entertained at the first performance of the Classical Association.

The main feature of the evening was the debate, "Resolved that Aeneas was too God-controlled and blooded to be a hero, and in short, Aeneas was a stick."

Miss Dorothy Smith, the first speaker of the affirmative, proved that Aeneas was too God-controlled to be a hero. The fundamental flaw in Aeneas' character is the lack of initiative, a god most handsly came to his aid at every turn. He followed the will of the gods like a stoic not as a human being.

Miss Mary Purkis, the first speaker of the negative, systematically tore down the government with excellent argument. "Virgil wished to prove that the greatest of courage is moral courage and Aeneas most emphatically was morally courageous."

Miss Smith's colleague, Miss Rita McDonald, pointed out that Aeneas was too cold-blooded. "A man lacking in human consideration and feeling."

Miss Marie Wright, took up her colleague's line of argument and expanded it. "Aeneas lived in constant death for the whole word; who can deny that this is heroism?" she asked. The judges gave their decision to the negative and the vote of the house was accorded to it also.

Highly Imaginative—"I hear that your husband is doing hair-raising fiction nowadays."

"Yes, Bob's writing a series of scalp-treatment ads."

One hundred and thirteen courses are on the curriculum at Ohio State University.

ONE POINT VICTORY FOR INTERMEDIATES

Triumph Over West End Breaks Three-Cornered Tie with Broadview

BROADVIEW GAME DECISIVE

Varsity's intermediate B team broke a three cornered tie with West End and Broadview Y intermediates when they defeated West End by one point in a thrilling fixture last night at Broadview. The final score was 22-21. Varsity now meets Broadview at Central on Thursday night to decide the winner of the series.

In the first half West End maintained a decided edge over the Blue quintet scoring six field goals to Varsity's one, but Varsity kept in the running by sinking seven shots on personal fouls. The score at half time was 12-9 for West End.

Shortly after the opening of the second half Willis scored and then scored again to put Varsity in the lead for the first time by one point. Then West End again obtained a lead of four points only to lose it when Loblaw scored four points and Willis one to put the Blues up one point again. Then with a minute and a half to go Humphrey scored on a long shot from the side line, making it 22-19 for Varsity. Willis shot and missed on a technical and West End scored on a rebound making it 22-21.

Baird for West End was high scorer and ran up fourteen points on field goals. Shortt also was good for the Y.

For Varsity, Willis, Loblaw and Humphrey were best.

West End—Board (14), Shortt (2), Aubrey (2), McPherson (1), Bolton, Martin, Paterson, Cunningham, Couse and Miller.

Varsity—Hutcheon (2), Grant (2), Humphrey (4), Willis (7), Lotimer, Loblaw (6), Kay (1), MacIsaac, Henderson, Fox.

MUCH BRIDGE PLAYING IN U.C. COMMON ROOM

Cards Supplied for Players by Executive of the Society

It is of interest to note that the junior common room of University College has been crowded to capacity these last few weeks—with bridge players. One of the nicest entertainments—and now one of the commonest daily occurrences—is for a foursome of studious scholars to cut lectures for the afternoon and quickly make their way towards the junior common room where, after securing one of the twenty or so decks of cards from the office, they twist the dial of the radio until strains of joyful dance music is heard and then they settle down for an afternoon's enjoyment. A few minutes later a rush of feet is heard and several more foursomes rush into the common room to secure, a deck of playing cards, and if possible, one of the tables. On some of the busy bridge days, there is a dearth of tables, but as yet no one has suggested the thought of playing bridge on the floor, the piano, or the radio, much less on the snow. From the amount of card playing done by these disciples of Milton Work, it may well be decreed that in very short order University College may be able to boast of an invincible U.C. Bridge Society.

The enforcement of the no-smoking rules for co-eds at Randolph College was so unsuccessful last year that the authorities have given permission to the girls to smoke this year.

The big question of the hour is whether a Siamese twin would have to pay double tuition at the university.

on his night's work. Ames was spectacular in the nets. The three that beat him were impossible. Dewar and Smillie were quite prominent in the stand of the Blue and White and their rushes were dangerous threats.

Up on the Blue front line, Mel Harley's playing was brilliant. Harley is a Hamilton boy and before his home town he demonstrated a sparkling all-round performance. Bill Stewart was close behind his teammate for the honours. George Hendry of the Varsity junior team was taken along with the team in the place of Billy Bell and fitted in well at right wing on the second string front line.

Tigers scored their first goal in the initial period and added the other two in the middle frame. "Beet" McKay carried the puck around the Blue defence on the play for the first goal and passed it across the front of the nets to Kane who missed the pass for a certain goal; he secured it, however, and passed it into McGowan, who was parked in front of the nets. In the second period McGowan counted for the second tally singly handed on a smart effort. The final goal came late in the period, Kane taking a pass from Schwab at the Blue defence to give Ames no chance at all.

McGowan and Kane were the pick of the Tiger team, the former being about the best player on the ice. Kane, despite illness, turned in an effective game.

Hamilton—Goal, Marsh; defence, McKay, Ferrell; centre, McGowan; wings, Louch, Hayhoe; subs, Liizen, Kane and Schwab.

Varsity—Goal, Ames; defence, Dewar, Smillie; centre, Stewart; wings, Harley, Lenahan; subs, Ferguson, Leak, Hendry.

Eskimo Maid Is Crowned Beauty Of Arctic Circle

 Ennoslak, 24-year-old brunette, is the reigning beauty of the Arctic. Andrew Brown selected this brown-eyed, brown-skinned Eskimo girl from an entry of two dozen in the first beauty contest ever held inside the Arctic circle. From Baker Lake, little trading post on Chesterfield Inlet, just a thousand miles north of Winnipeg, came word of Ennoslak's triumph. "Shining Star," her name means, and proudly, for the first time in her life, she can survey her prize-winning features. A mirror was her reward, the first she has ever owned.
 Brown, who organized the contest, declares Ennoslak the most beautiful Eskimo lady he has ever seen. She lives not far from Baker Lake.

Dr. G. D. Porter could not say off-hand whether the average height of the boys entering the university was increasing. The average height in 1929 was five feet eight inches, but the figures for 1930 have not yet been compiled. "It is hard to tell, even from the figures," he said. "There is such a variety of races now attending the university, many of which are naturally small in stature, that the average is lowered considerably. I believe there is a slight increase in the Anglo-Saxon race, due to improvements in diet and physical education."

 Pansy will win. What chance have we?"

Another co-ed volunteered optimistically: "The boys are too scared to send any real names in—their names would have to go too!" This statement was explained further in the remark: "The Perfect Female(s) might possibly have something to say in private to the considerate males who suggested her (them)! I think most boys know what is good for them, and won't attempt anything so drastic."

In any case, public opinion seemed to favour the fact that there was nothing to fear, that knowing men and "The Varsity", this would not be treated seriously. After Gaspard McGuffey's grand debut as a model of perfection, the logical sequel to the story is that Pansy should be raised to that honour to keep him company!

SAM FACTOR TO SPEAK BEFORE LIBERAL CLUB

First Liberal to be Elected to Dominion House for Thirty-three Years

The Liberal Club of the University of Toronto will hold its second meeting of the year in Hart House north common room at 1 p.m. this Thursday. Sam Factor, the first Liberal Member of Parliament to be elected from Toronto in the past thirty-three years, will be the speaker.

On July 29, 1930, the then alderman Sam Factor made political history in Toronto by defeating T. L. Church in a hard fought race for the Toronto West Centre seat in the federal house. He is thirty-seven years of age and one of the youngest members of parliament. In a short period of time he has made a great impression in political circles. Mr. Factor is the first Jewish citizen to represent Toronto at Ottawa and the third in the Dominion.

STEADY INCREASE IN LIBRARY USE of 1930. Books taken out over the holiday showed an increase of 25 per cent over the year before.

There are not enough copies of a great many titles to meet the demand. If books are asked for that are not kept in the library they are put on order.

Shelf room is limited in the library at present. A new shelf on each floor made room for several volumes, but lack of space is a handicap. The reading rooms also show a lack of space.

A slight falling off is usually noted in January. It is expected that more students will take advantage of the library in the evenings during the rest of the term.

 their party or their circulation."

As to the issue of free speech: "The issue seems strangely irrelevant to a citizen of the old country." Mr. Russell received his ministerial training in Scotland. "We have found that one of the surest ways of discrediting ridiculous, harmful or otherwise undesirable sentiments is to allow them full expression. Meetings to denounce the police have, before now, taken place under police protection from interruption." Here reminiscences of Hyde Park intervened.

"Of course," agreed the pastor of several members of the much maligned "sixty-eight", "if it is felt that the common sense of the community cannot be trusted; and if those who are concerned for the welfare of the state feel that the minds of the majority of people, themselves always excepted, are unbalanced; they will naturally wish to prevent the circulation of opinions from which they differ. This anxiety is, however, a confession of fear, and it is worthy of note that those who criticize the sixty-eight professors are evidently afraid of the lack of judgment on the part of the people. If they are not afraid," challenged Mr. Russell, "why not let the public hear all that can be said?"

"Remember,"—the point was emphasized—"I speak as one opposed to communism."

paring them for their part in life. It is for the undergraduates to maintain this valuable institution by their support and co-operation."

His speech was followed by an address by the former prime minister of Canada, Mr. Meighen, who requested that the contents of his lecture should not be made public to the press.

The meeting was opened by an outline of the accomplishments of the Lit. this year, reports being given by several members of the executive for the benefit of the many graduates who were present. It was later revealed by Principal Wallace that there was present one graduate of the seventies, one of the eighties, and several of the nineties.

Musical numbers by Mr. Beamish, a sing-song, refreshments and a smoker concluded the evening.

"Toronto is not conducive to a Little Theatre movement," Mrs. Lorna MacLean Sheard told "The Varsity" yesterday in an answer to the question put to her. "I do not think there are enough people interested in the drama to consider the furthering of the movement."

"The Little Theatre is extremely dangerous financially and people recognize that fact," replied Professor E. A. Dale. "They are not interested in an organization of Little Theatre groups because there is no specific gain in it. I do not think that there is a possibility of a drama league."

"There has been a remarkable increase in attendance at Hart House during the past two seasons," Jack Barber stated. "This may be due to better production, better publicity or actors who are more interested. People are appreciating this theatre and want to keep alive a place where they can see the legitimate drama. FREE SPEECH LAW DISCUSSED AT U.C.

Many Subjects Argued; Police Commission, 68 Professors, Etc.

FOURTH YEAR BEAT SECOND

The indisputable rights of British law for free speech and the overstepping of the Police Commission as compared to the harm and misrepresentation to the university of their manifesto, provided the basis of argument for fourth and second years of University College in the inter-year debate in the junior common room yesterday afternoon as to whether the 68 professors were justified in signing the free speech manifesto.

E. W. Paget and W. Arnold of fourth year were awarded the decision over B. Laskin and M. Marks of second year. The verdict of the judges, D. A. Keith, fourth year; G. K. Drynan and H. G. Skilling, first year, was based on the senior men's better delivery and manner of attack.

The communist question, professorial freedom, veracity of the press, and the Fellowship of Reconciliation were all discussed pro and con and at some length.

Fourth year will contest with first year sometime in March for the finals of the inter-year debates for the Robbette trophy.

Co-ed War

War on the co-eds in their midst is being waged at Oxford University by the men students. A passive resistance towards them is under way, and the males believe it will only be a matter of time before they leave. The female, they say, is a disturbing element in the academic atmosphere of the university. In an editorial in the college publication, Isis, a plea to the women to depart carried the challenge to the opposite sex. The editorial declared that women students were not decorous, and that, in fact, they were unseemingly undignified and unfledged.

In interviews with several of the leading women students, it was learned that they are indifferent to the whole matter. However, if any definite action is taken they are prepared to stand up for their rights.

TCHEKOV'S PLAY TO BE PRESENTED

"Three Sisters" will be Acted by the Trinity College Dramatic Society

DIRECTED BY O. WAGNER

Marking the first time in the history of the Hart House Theatre that a play by Tchekov has been offered, the Trinity College Dramatic Society is presenting one of the celebrated Russian's most famous plays, The Three Sisters, over the week-end with performances on Friday and Saturday nights and Saturday afternoon.

Only one of Tchekov's plays has heretofore been produced in Canada, The Cherry Orchard. On that occasion, Dixon Wagner played one of the leading roles, and he is directing the present production. Under his guidance the cast is expected to capture the spirit of the play and to give an accurate dramatization of its incidents. The Three Sisters has an interesting plot and the action contains many delightful bits of comedy.

Trinity productions in the past few years have included The Dragon, Cyrano de Bergerac and Trelawney of the Wells, and have been among the leading undergraduate productions as far as quality of acting is concerned. The present cast contains many who had parts in Trelawney last year and includes in the leading roles, Margot Clarkson, Mary Winspear, Erica Mundy, Loetitia Wilson, Dorothy Livesay, Lloyd Summerville, Ross Parmenter and A. R. Little.

Marriage License or Tickets Undecided By Perfect Female

"I didn't even know that I had been entered in the contest," declared Miss Carolyn Temple, the "Perfect Female," when "The Varsity" found her back stage at the Hart House Theatre.

"No, we have not decided whether to take the marriage licenses or the two tickets to a downtown show," she said while some of the other co-eds in "The Goodies" chorus struck up "Here comes the bride".

"Carolyn, take the marriage license and let me be bridesmaid?" was a helpful suggestion offered by one of the chorus girls, and Miss Temple replied:

These questions were asked by "The Varsity" on the campus yesterday and the majority of the students agreed that a Literary Society or an Oratorical Society was a great benefit to the university and the student.

H. Cameron and W. D. Scott, both of U.C., stated in collusion: "We think they are of great value and we agree with Judge McKinnon's statement in today's 'Varsity'. RATING SYSTEM WILL BE ADOPTED

Scholastic Accomplishments Measurement for Students

THREE YEARS' PLAN

Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Cambridge.—In order that parents and students may clearly understand the standards which govern the action of the Faculty in judging a student's record, a scholastic Rating System has been developed at this university. This system affords a measure of a student's scholastic accomplishments, shows how that accomplishments compares with the minimum requirements of the Institute, and states what a student must do in the future to maintain good academic standing.

Three years of study and experiment have been given by the Faculty to developing this plan. It is hoped that the system will fill a long felt need for a definite rating of a student's academic ability.

While providing a uniform and definite appraisal of a student's work, the system in actual application is supplemented by individual consideration for a student whose low scholarship may be due to unusual non-academic conditions.

Fashion Degree?

Fashion has crashed the gates of academic learning; and not on this continent as might be supposed but in Paris which succumbed even with the tradition of the Sorbonne behind it. The first University of Fashion has been opened in Paris.

Forty students are now engaged in the study of bums, gussets, reverses, biases and selvedge edges, and will be engrossed in investigation for two weeks when, presumably, they will become Bachelors of something. Instruction is in the hands of Mme. Renee Jean and M. Gerber.

The new school offers a practical course in the history of costume design since mediæval times. Line and colour-harmony lectures will be given by leading couturiers, painters, sculptors and artists.

CHILD ADDRESSES FATHER 'DEAR SIR'

Free-lance Writers Show Many Topics at Women's Press Club

MISS EVE POWELL SPEAKER

A good deal of local talent was displayed yesterday afternoon at the regular meeting of the Women's Press Club. Following from the last meeting when Miss Eve Powell spoke on newspaper work, a number of feature articles written by members of the organization were read and criticized.

The articles varied greatly in subject matter, showing what a large range is open to the free lance writer. One member had discovered a number of letters written by a University of Toronto student of the 1870's. She noted particularly the great respect with which he addressed his parents. Letters to his father generally began, "Dear Sir". University College was the only one of any size at that time harboring some three hundred and seventy students; but the student admits that even at that early date it was impossible to know everyone. Books could be taken from the library over night only as a special privilege.

Another article featured the huge party which the university men gave the boys of the University Settlement. This party, held shortly before Christmas, is held in great anticipation by the Settlement House boys, and the Great Hall becomes a veritable "feast of St. Stephen" in the modern style.

"In dealing with men a superiority is to be avoided and an effort should be made to understand their viewpoint," stated E. W. Stern in lecture yesterday afternoon to students of Civil Engineering. He then showed how reinforced concrete is being increasingly used in foundations. One of the latest examples of this was the new 71 storey building in New York, in which the foundations were put in before the old buildings were removed. This latter was shown on slides, along with preparations of various kinds of foundations.

POLITICAL ISSUES LARGE IN ENGLAND

Canadian and English Attitude to Politics Like "Life" and "Punch"

AMAZED AS SUFFRAGETTE

"The difference between the Canadian attitude towards politics and the English is the difference between 'Life' and 'Punch,'" said Mrs. W. L. Lang at the noon vocational lecture at the Women's Union. "The humour of one is personal and that of the other is not."

The political issues in England are greater than those in Canada. Imperial and international affairs provide the newspapers with plenty of important material and they do not need to resort to copy of the kind used in the recent Hamilton elections. In the old land politics is a common subject of conversation.

"I remember," the speaker continued, "the first time I spoke in Canada. It was astounding. It was a university function but because my subject was the suffragette movement they could not guarantee me a hearing. However, they said they would protect my person."

FREEDOM HINDERED BY PROHIBITION

To be Free, to Starve at Home,
Better than to Live
Prosperously

ICONOCLAST CLUB

The weekly meeting of the Iconoclast Club of St. Michael's was held in the college library last night at 7 o'clock. F. K. Dell read a paper in which he criticized some of the modern tendencies in social and political thought. He drew attention to the place of increasing importance that civil government is acquiring in the daily lives of citizens of the modern state. Mention was made of prohibition as an atrocious example of civil interference in men's natural rights.

In the discussion which followed it was agreed by the majority that to starve in one's own home (to take an extreme example), but to be free at the same time to pursue one's end in life as he sees it, is better than to live, moderately prosperous, under conditions which hinder and prevent such freedom.

The most striking thing about Africa is its extreme poverty, was the opinion of Miss Edith Clarke, guest of honour at the Women's Union, Wednesday evening. Miss Clark went on to say that the nakedness of the Africans is due to poverty, not to choice and explained a system of training in household science that they are attempting. She explained a need for doctors, nurses and all kinds of teachers.

MISSED GOOD MEAL

Food Much Better as Result of Walk Out, Residents
Aver

The recent walk-out at Trinity House, as reported in "The Varsity" two days ago, was the result of a determination to use drastic measures to obtain good, variable meals; this was the gist of all opinions quoted to "The Varsity" yesterday afternoon.

"The chief reason of the walk-out," said T. A. Archer, IV S.P.S., "was that we felt that the kitchen and the meals were and are under incompetent management both from a point of true economy and proper preparation of the foods. Previous 'grub kicks' and petitions to the authorities brought practically no permanent improvement. Also I feel it is not a good practice to wash your dirty linen in public; but by means of the papers we are able to draw the attention of our parents to something that they have paid for and have a right to know."

E. A. Brooks, Head of College, said that what had happened was quite unofficial and that the usual way of making a complaint was at a special college meeting. "As yet," he stated, "there has been no official representation sent to the Dean this year concerning this complaint. I believe that the walk-out was quite individual and originated in the fourth year. As a matter of fact, they missed a very good meal and the rest of the students laughed at those who walked out. At a previous college meeting a walk-out was suggested but it was contrary to the general feeling."

Man Power Used Because Many Turns Make Other
Power Impossible

Using two drums, each weighing six tons and each containing six hundred feet of electric cable, twenty-nine men are carrying out one of the most difficult tasks in connection with the building of the new women's residence on St. George Street.

Because of the numerous turns the cable has to make on its twisting path it is impossible to use anything but man-power in pulling it through the heating tunnel from University College to the Women's Union on St. George Street and then underground to the new residence. Instead of laying it in a direct route to the new residence from the central switch board at University College, the crew is taking the duct to the Women's Union so that if any time in the future the Women's Union is torn down and a new women's residence erected upon its site another new cable will not need to be laid.

Co-eds New Game

Here's a new game which seems to be replacing the yo-yo down south, but as the yo-yo never took here, we might still be spared this:

When the campus cop of Western Reserve University strolled by a senior co-ed party recently and saw a group of girls shaking dice, he thought he'd better stop and give the girls a lecture on the vice of gambling—but then he found that the girls were not gambling, but were playing a new and exciting game called Stunt Cup.

SILENCE IS GOLDEN

"To everything there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heavens; . . . a time to keep silence and a time to speak . . ." Thus saith the Preacher of old, and his words as true to-day as they were when they were written. But, unfortunately, there are some people who either have no discrimination as to times and seasons or else their egoism completely prevents them from realizing the necessity of the observance of such times.

Last week we had occasion to spend an hour in the University Library reading room, and the truth of this statement was indelibly impressed upon our mind. We found what apparently is the normal state of affairs in that potential power-house. Little groups of two and three were ranged around the corners of the tables discussing matters of personal interest in such a tone as to be distinctly audible to a number of persons engaged, presumably, in study, nearby. These thoughtless individuals seemed, from the titles of the books they possessed, to belong mostly to the first year. Apart from the irritation that such conduct induces in the people who have, perforce, to study at intervals during the year, this selfish disregard for the rules of the library is a practice which should be stopped.

Even freshmen, by this time of the year, should have learned that if they are not gentlemen they are expected at a university to act like them. There are places provided in Hart House and the various colleges where opportunities are afforded for friendly conversations and the retailing of jokes, but for students to be so wrapped up in their own little world as to absolutely neglect such legitimate resorts, and the rights of the other few thousands in this university, is a condition which does not speak well for their place of origin—family, town or school. It should not be necessary to employ a special policeman to watch over the reading room to prevent the inane babblings of precocious youths with such high opinions of themselves! And yet if these creatures cannot be relied upon to act as becomes university students, it will be incumbent upon this university, not only to provide a student adviser, but also an official to advise parents as to the mental ineptitude of their precious charges.

We felt that on this particular occasion we were not alone in our resentment, and there is undoubtedly a large majority of students who frequent the library who are anxious that such childish conduct should cease. If it continues, a little of the power that this university prides itself upon might well be exercised in the disciplining of these unprincipled offenders.

PHILOSOPHY TELLS NOT EVERYTHING

Science Affects Philosophers and Scientists Admit Philosophy Rational

GOD IS ULTIMATE

"Philosophy and philosophers cannot tell us everything," stated Professor John Line in an address before the S.C.M. yesterday afternoon. The subject was "Philosophy and the Idea of God." Professor Line explained how far philosophy had been responsible for the idea of God.

Philosophy in tackling the question of what existence is, came to the idea of the one and the many, of the unity and the multiplicity of the world. Considering monistically the conception of the ideal and of the ultimate reality, the idea and often the term God became the name for unity.

God, when used in philosophy usually stands for something ultimate. This idea was arrived at through the realization of the contingency of events that one thing exists only by its dependence on many other things. An effect is brought about by a cause and this cause by a prior cause until the logical necessity arose for philosophers to arrive at a final meaning. The idea of an ultimate, self-subsistent being was postulated—God.

Philosophy has been influenced by science, and science admits that it is descriptive and relational. "Philosophers," said Professor Line, "have gone beyond scientific explanations and interpreted them in terms of a propositive and creative agency. God functions in this way."

Lawrence, Kas.—But seven of 1,705 women students at the University of Kansas are studying to be home-makers, according to a recent survey of the university undergraduate body. Teaching school is the aim of 879 of them.

Eighty-four intend to take up journalism, 80 are planning to be nurses, 60 hope to be business women, sixteen will take up the practice of medicine, and fifteen will practice law.

Another 123 are undecided and 136 did not answer the questions of the registrar.

Art, Music and Drama

M.C. Players' Guild

One of the more successful original plays presented by members of the Players' Guild was Abelard, written and directed by Stanley Ryerson, who also played the lead in yesterday afternoon's production.

Intended to be a psychological study of the relationship between sexual jealousy and the ideal of perfection, the play is focused about a mental struggle between Abelard, who wishes his wife to return to a convent and Heloise, who still would live with her lover in the freedom of their Brittany home.

Unfortunately the idea of the play is belauded by a long preliminary scene intended to announce Abelard's mutilation. Even Mr. Ryerson with all his frankness, took fifteen minutes to half-explain the situation.

However, most of the lines are good, and if there is too much philosophizing, it is not too obvious a fault.

Mr. Ryerson, himself, gave the best performance of the four players, although Patricia O'Reilly was quite excellent as Heloise, lacking only a certain poise and intensity for a first rate effort. Patricia Godfrey and Henry Noyes did very well with their explanatory roles in the preliminary scene.

CHAMPUS CAT

We take great pleasure to-day in assuring Madame Schumann-Heink (the operatic star of all time, farewell tours arranged on request) and Master R. Vallee that neither of them is Pansy.

C—C

To change the subject:

C—C

There was a young lady named Banker,
Who sept while the ship was at anchor;

She awoke in dismay,
To hear the mate say,

"Hoist up the top-sheet and spanker!"

C—C

And yet again:

C—C

There was a young lady, Mchitabel,
Whose corpulence was truly pitiable,
For she gorged every meal
Though her stays were of steel,
And the pressure inside quite considerable.

C—C

Three times and out:

C—C

They tell us a co-ed's a moron
When they find out she always puts store on Her clothes much too much,

But the fashions are such,
I think she'd do well to put more on.

C—C

We dedicate the following to Mr. Freud or somebody:

C—C

Eenie, meenie, minie, moe;
Have you got a libido?
If you have, just let it go,
And your friends will love you so.

C—C

Mary had a little urge;
It was as pure as snow.
But she suppressed that little urge:
Now where will Mary go?

C—C

The devil you say!

C—C

And now we bring forth a little query we have been nourishing in the feline bosom for, now, many weeks.

C—C

How is Wall St. (N.Y., N.Y., U.S.A.) like a farmer's pasture?

C—C

If we were a vaudeville team, or even a yovdvil team, it would take seven minutes or more or less snappy repartee to find out, but alas, we couldn't find a partner.

C—C

And if we had found one, he'd still need a partner.

C—C

Pansy would never let us out of her sight.

C—C

And there goes the seven-minute bell, so here goes:

C—C

Because you'll find lambs gambolling in both places, and it takes a smart man to corner all the stock.

C—C

If you haven't pasture intelligence test it's take farmer brains than we think you have to get that one.

C—C

Pansy was right. We are degenerating.

C—C

Which is that.

YALE CURRICULUM VITALLY CHANGED

Subject's Method and Mastery Emphasized Rather Than Credits

INSTRUCTORS REPORT

Dean Clarence W. Mendell of Yale has announced that Yale has adopted several vital changes in the college curriculum which will go into effect next year. Chief among the changes are new requirements for degrees, abolition of the mid-year examinations, inauguration of three reading periods throughout the academic year and general changes in the method of instruction.

These changes have for their purpose the emphasis of method and mastery of subject rather than the acquisition of a certain number of credits. They have been passed by the Yale faculty and approved by the Yale Corporation. The changes will place the responsibility and initiative for a comprehensive and useful education more directly on the shoulders of the students and at the same time tend to automatically weed from the college those who are not in college primarily for an education.

The new arrangement will effect changes in the general scholastic requirements in which a student will be admitted to Yale in full standing only when he has successfully completed the entire work of his freshman year. In his statement Dean Mendell said: "Each student at Yale shall select not more than five courses each year and juniors and seniors whose work is of quality grade may, with the written approval of the class officer or dean, elect less than five courses."

"A student will be admitted to the junior class in full standing only when he has completed successfully the entire work of his sophomore year and the same with the senior class entrants."

"The student will be recommended for the degree only when he has completed successfully the work of all four years and has received a grade of 27 or better in at least six courses."

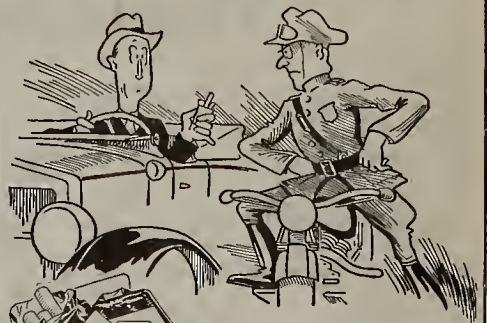

"Early in February each year at the call of the dean's office, each instructor shall make a report on the quality of work being done by each student in his course. All students whose work at the time is unsatisfactory in three courses will be placed on general warning; the same for students on two subjects after a review of the student's status in all subjects. Any student who at the close of the year has failed in two courses will be dropped from the college."

"Any student who during the freshman and sophomore years has not received a grade of 27 or higher in at least two courses shall be dropped from the college."

Governor Dan Moody of Texas has offered a reward of $100 for evidence leading to the arrest and conviction of any bootlegger selling liquor to high school or college students in Texas.

The University of California is inaugurating "Hello and Smile" week with the first All-University dance of the year.

Four lawsuits, amounting to $51,150, have been filed against 21 freshmen and one sophomore at Columbia as a result of a recent inter-class disturbance.

An inquiry class, the purpose of which is to give students an opportunity to have doubts settled and their questions answered has been established at Creighton University.

Northwestern University.—Certain co-eds are wishing they had not accepted dances with Purple football warriors quite so willingly. After Hank Bruder, brilliant halfback, was taken ill with smallpox, all members of the team and women with whom they had danced at a recent party were compelled to be vaccinated.

VARSITY LADIES HOLD SILVERWOOD SEXTET TO 2-2 DEADLOCK

SILVERWOOD DAIRY HOCKEYISTS EQUAL UNIVERSITY WOMEN

Dairy Girls Score 2 in First Session in Spirited Hockey

FRAN CROOKS TIES WITH 2

U. of T. Defence Weak, Forwards Check Well; Marg Porter Shows Speed

Varsity's intercollegiate women's hockey team held Silverwood's Dairy to a 2-all tie in a peppy City League game played last night at the Mutual Street Arena. Both teams played good hockey and showed plenty of spirit throughout. The score indicates the play well, neither team having much advantage at any time.

Shortly after the start of the game, Marg Porter beat the Blue defence for the first counter. Dot Roffe added another six minutes later to put the Dairy girls two up. Fran Crooks put Varsity back in the game when she countered on a solo effort just before the period ended.

For the students, Fran Crooks was outstanding with two goals to her credit. The defence was weak but the forwards checked well and played a nice passing game. Marg Porter showed speed and heady playing for Silverwoods and Vida Gowland played well defensively and made several dangerous, though unsuccessful rushes.

Varsity—Goal, Betty Burruss; defence, Adele Statton and Frances Crooks; centre, Betty Carter; wings, Dot Starr and Margot Thompson; subs, Naomi Slater, Bliss McQuarrie and Dama Lumley.

Silverwoods—Goal, Sarah McCausland; defence, Vida Gowland and Viola Ferguson; centre, Al Donaldson; wings, Marg Porter and Dot Roffe; subs, Nellie Steele, Phyl Ecclestone, Hazel Rutler and Connie Henney.

Durnan Swimming Trophy

Final results in the competition for the Durnan Swimming Trophy will be posted at noon to-day. At 10 o'clock last night Sinclair was leading with 2706 points, having passed Glass and H. and E. Henderson. The standing for the first eight places last night was as follows: E. Sinclair, 2706; H. Henderson, 2516; E. Henderson, 2434; G. Glass, 2175; R. Armstrong, 2173; S. Smith, 2033; T. Bell, 1720; B. Crocker, 1585.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By A. C. C.

We wish to correct an error that appeared inadvertently in this column yesterday. To-night the Varsity intermediate B team plays Central Y.M.C.A. on the Broadview "Y" floor in a sudden-death fixture for the championship of the second series of the schedule. It does not play Broadview at Central as previously stated. We are doubly anxious to make this correction because we expect that a goodly number of the cage fans will be anxious to visit the Broadview "Y" to-night to witness the crucial game against the College Street quintet. The winner of to-night's battle will meet Y.M.H.A., the winners of the first half of the schedule, in a home-and-home series to determine the Y.M.C.A. championship.

This intermediate B team might properly be called the Orphans of basketball. It is composed of left-overs from Varsity's other three teams. And they are the only one of the four teams representing the Blue and White which give promise of winning a title. They deserve plenty of credit for the showing that they have made. They have been a prominent threat in the "Y" league all year and are now in an excellent position to come out on top. The Blues have won and lost two games to Central, and they are confident of taking the odd game from their rivals to-night. It will be a great struggle.

Saturday evening the Varsity seniors play their last home game of the intercollegiate schedule against Western U. at Hart House. It will be remembered that the Mustangs downed the Blues in London by a single basket which was scored just as the final whistle ended the fire-works. The local basketballers are anxious to avenge the defeat they received in the Forest City. They looked to be the better team in their last engagement and should have no difficulty in reversing the tables Saturday night. They still have a mathematical chance to win the title. If Queen's beat McGill and Varsity wins its three remaining games, they will be in a tie with the Redmen. As a special added attraction, there will be dancing in the big gym until twelve o'clock following the game with Western. A large crowd should be on hand to cheer the Blue and White cagers on the occasion of their last appearance on their home floor.

U.C. DEFEATS WYCLIFFE 12-1 IN BASEBALL GAME

Senior U.C. defeated Wycliffe 12-1 in a one-sided baseball game in the big gym at Hart House last night. The Red and White team got all but one of their runs in the first two innings while brilliant pitching by Mason held the losers to a single run, which they scored in the last inning.

Senior U.C.—Caldecott, Moran, Doherly, Usprech, Giroux, Hilder, Reid, Harrington, Edell, Broughan.

Wycliffe—Longhorne, Lancaster, Boone, Weir, Kirk, Peglar, Coleman, Wickenden, Hunt.

VICTORIA JUNIORS BEAT JUNIOR MEDS

Med Penalties Give Vic Ten Free Throws in Charity Lane

STUBBS HIGH SCORER

Victoria juniors proved themselves much more superior when they vanquished Junior Meds 35-17 yesterday afternoon at Hart House, qualifying themselves for the interfaculty basketball playoffs.

Starting off fast Vic ran in several hoops to gain a strong lead which was cut in half by Meds shortly before the end of the first half. Meds persisted in the infliction of personals which gave Vic ten free throws down the charity lane, of which they made nine count.

In the second half Vic concentrated on the attack, playing smooth combination with Stubbs, Morrow and Wood scoring close-in shots. With a decided advantage in height Vic completely outplayed the fast travelling Meds, both on the offence and defence. Stubbs, playing right forward for Vic, was high scorer in both halves, running in five field goals and two free throws for a total of twelve points. Don Wood at right guard, followed close on the attack as a great play maker, netting two baskets and six foul shots.

Kesler and Kyle turned in the best performances for Meds, with Kesler netting six points.

Junior Victoria—Stubbs 12, Morrow 7, Ford 2, Wood 10, Clarke, Vinnels, Ferguson, Read, Boettger 4, Misener, Junior Meds—Vaughan 2, Kesler 6, Kyle, Simon 4, Herschorn 2, Green, Scher, Levinson, Chenoweth.

Students at the University of Missouri must pass approximately 75 bad checks each day, a recent survey conducted in Columbia indicates.

EXPECT GOOD GAME AT BROADVIEW

Winner, Varsity Intermediates and Central, Meet Y.M.H.A. in Two Tilts

DEADLOCK AT PRESENT

A game that has all the ear marks of the best tilt of the Y.M.C.A. league will take place at Broadview Y to-night when the Varsity intermediate Bees meet Central in the titular game of the second series of the schedule. Last Tuesday night Varsity eliminated West End and are all set to duplicate this feat against the College Street quintet. To-night's winner will play a two game series with Y.M.H.A., winners of the first half of the schedule, for the title. So it is either Varsity or Central and Coach McCutcheon is expecting that it will be Varsity.

Varsity has won two games from Central and lost two to them. The deadlock will be broken to-night. The Blues are playing at the top of their form and if they can manage to get by Central they should encounter little difficulty in overcoming the Hebrew five. The Maermen have plenty of height, shooting ability and a strong defence. Humphrey at centre, with McIsaac and Williams, guards, and Hutchings, Grant and Loblaw working on the forward line, Varsity has a well-balanced team and whether they win to-night against Central or not a hard fought game is ensured.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

Varsity intercollegiate hockey team played Silverwoods to a 2-all tie at the Mutual Street Arena last night. Varsity showed up much better than in their game with Queen's on Saturday night. Their play was greatly improved and a fast brand of hockey was produced. Frances Crooks scored the first goal for Varsity on a solo effort at the end of the first period. Miss Crooks also accounted for the second goal, made on a pass from Betty Carter.

Frances Crooks changed from a defence position to centre and Naomi Slater took her place on the defence line. This was Miss Slater's first appearance in a game and she put up a creditable showing.

This is the second tie game Varsity has had, having tied Aura Lee 3-3 in their first encounter. If Varsity play as well as they did to-night they have an excellent chance of coming out on top in the City League.

Fran Crooks was outstanding all through, playing well at centre and teaming up effectively with the forward line. Miss Crooks is one of the most outstanding players Varsity has and always plays an effective game.

With regard to their recognition of badminton as an official interfaculty sport the Athletic Directorate has decided to reserve decision until the success of the tournament planned for the next few weeks is assured. They expressed themselves willing to co-operate in every way possible with the representatives from the different colleges and faculties.

The U.C. swimming meet which was to have been held last night has been postponed owing to the inability of Mr. Cochrane, the swimming instructor, to attend. The meet is scheduled to take place next Wednesday night.

ST. HILDA'S AND SENIOR U.C. TIE IN HOCKEY

Timely Saves by Jean Wilson, U.C. Goalie; Saints Play Better Game

St. Hilda's tied Senior U.C. in a scoreless game of interfaculty hockey at the Varsity Stadium last night. The game was fairly fast, but poor combination and many off-sides resulted in no goals being scored. The Saints put up the better brand of hockey and many of their shots would have counted.

ed but for the timely saves of Jean St. Hilda's—Goal, Kay Steele; defence, Helen James, Enid Palmer; centre, Fran Brigstocke; wings, Laura Wilson, Mary Morris; subs, Aldyth McLaren, Ruth Rous, Ross Berry and Marjorie Tripp.

Osculators Osculate Promiscuously;
Bloated Plutocrats Eat With Krehm

By Milton Schulman

Nothing in particular, and everything in general . . . having survived our debut with nothing to be proud of . . . we return under threat of death . . . but never weaken . . . is our motto . . . nowadays a red nose is ambiguous, you can't tell if a man is drunk or just cold . . . but there's no use getting too noisy in this business, because there's always a leak somewhere . . . how punny! . . . at last the Columbia network has found somebody who can compete with the tremendous popularity of Amos 'n' Andy . . . Morton Downey, the male torch singer, who is on the same time as the tooth paste boys is giving them plenty of opposition . . . everything will be downey for Columbia from now on . . . which reminds us . . . the last five or six people we met told us that Amos 'n' Andy won't make another picture . . . because Pepsodent removes the film (joke) . . . The General Science lecture is no place to take your best girl . . . we can't see how the formation of rocks and the composition of a substance (in a closed vessel) is an appropriate background for promiscuous osculations . . . even if the place is dark sometimes . . . if you must take her out why not skip the lecture and take her to a show . . . if you get there before one o'clock, it'll only cost you two bits (adv.) . . . have you read those tiny features by Ring Lardner that are in the Star every ydre? . . . you shouldn't miss them, they're good . . . we hear that Kamerad Krehm has been seen eating amongst the bloated plutocrats in the thirty-five cent section of the Great Hall . . . quite an aristocratic custom . . . apparently the Kamerad has adopted the old saying: when in Toronto do as Draper says . . . if we don't get a long reply to this, we'll be sorely disappointed . . . so get out the dictionary K. Also, there is not enough variety. We get carrots in our soup, carrots in our salad, carrots in our pie, carrots in everything."

"I absolutely agree with Bull that the meals are not up to the price," said E. L. Burpee, II Trinity, "there is much incompetency and inefficiency in the kitchen." He also added a lot more, not fit for publication, in reference to carrots and soup.

"In my opinion, the food is all right," said K. C. Coleman, IV Trinity, "but it does get rather monotonous to eat the same meals day in and day out. The soup was terrible, just like water, but strange to say, we got good soup to-day. As to the walk-out there was a certain amount of dissatisfaction among the student body and it was thought that something drastic must be done since no proper attention was given to any appeal."

It was made clear to "The Varsity" reporter that the walk-out happened at only one meal, so as to bring attention to the food question, but all declare that since then, the meals have been much better than before.

SINGLE POINT LOSS

Central Y.M.C.A. Hold Steady in Hectic Struggle for Group Championship

Varsity's only hopes for a basketball title were shattered last night at the Broadview Y when the intermediate B's lost by one point to Central Y.M.C.A. in a hectic struggle for the lead in the second series and a chance to play Y.M.H.A. for the group championship. The score was 18-17. But for several bad breaks the Blues might have pulled out on the long end of the score. Just as the bell rang to end the first half Lohlaw sank a rebound but a dispute resulted in no score.

Central started off well and scored seven points to Varsity's three, but the Blues came back strong and led by one point at half time with the score standing 9-8. In the second half Central again took the lead when Varsity seemed to lose the fighting spirit with which they finished the first half. With the Blue quintette stopped, the Central basketballers took full advantage and had their opponents 18-9 with nine minutes of play left. After a time out, Varsity again came from behind and, with a big handicap, almost came through with a win. Humphrey, going in at terrific speed, scored from underneath to make it 18-11. Then

VARSITY TRUANTS SEE SPRING SESSION OPENING

Brilliant Annual Social Event
Attracts Capacity Crowd to Queen's Park

The university campus reverberated yesterday afternoon at three o'clock to the deafening roar of several cannons discharged simultaneously in Queen's Park. When "The Varsity" arrived on the spot the militia in charge of the guns were just being drawn up by the officer in command.

During the firing of the salute, which heralded the opening of the provincial parliament, the vice-regal limousine rolled down the west side of the park preceded by cavalry and mounted policemen.

The inner halls of the Parliament Buildings were crowded by employees and Varsity students, who missed lectures to see the grand opening. After a few minutes of waiting, broken only by the entrance of Brig. Gen. Draper and the impatient mutterings of the crowd, the lieutenant-governor and his attendants, all resplendent in their brilliant dress uniforms, entered the front entrance and slowly passed to the central staircase. Premier George Henry, who had received them, climbed the staircase at the side of the lieutenant-governor.

An attempt was made to see or hear part of the proceedings on the floor of the Legislative Assembly but the visitors' gallery was crowded to full capacity and the press entered only by special pass.

Independent Declaration of World Disarmament

By permission of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, "The Varsity" reprints a portion of a polyglot petition for world disarmament which is sponsored by the League. The petition is being circulated in many languages through 47 different countries of the world, and in England alone over 200,000 signatures have been obtained, and more are being received at the rate of about 2,000 a day. A space is being left at the foot of the petition for two signatures, with addresses, and those wishing to sign this form may return it either to Rev. F. J. Moore, S.C.A. Office, Hart House, or to Mrs. C. B. Sissons, Secretary of the Toronto Branch of the League, at 64 Admiral Road.

The Petition

The nations have renounced war. Let us also renounce the instruments of war.

La Guerre est mise hors-la loi. Exigeons la mise hors la loi des moyens de guerre.

Der Krieg ist geächtet. Die Kriegsmittel müssen geächtet werden.

The undersigned men and women, irrespective of party, STAND FOR WORLD DISARMAMENT.

They are convinced:

That competition in armaments is leading all countries to ruin without bringing them security; that this policy renders further wars inevitable; that wars in future will be wars of indiscriminate destruction of human life.

that the Governments' assurances of peaceful policy will be valueless so long as those measures of disarmament are delayed that should be the first result of the Pact for the Renunciation of War.

World Conversion to Communism Confidently Expected by Russians

ALIMONY MAY BURDEN EITHER SEX IN RUSSIA

Soviet Divorce Rate Falls Two Per Cent. Below U.S.
Figures

"There is no question of inequality in that land between male and female," stated Miss Yeghennian in answer to a question on race equality in Russia after her talk to the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom last night.

"Divorce is just as easy as it is printed except that if there are children the couple cannot appear before a commission. If the wife is earning more than the husband she has to support the children accordingly and is given no more consideration than her husband. If the husband is ill and she wants a divorce, she must put him alimony, but of course it works vice versa."

The strange part of it all is that lately the divorce rate in Russia is two per cent lower than the divorce rate in the United States. The younger folks don't seem different from those in other lands. The older people were responsible for the original high divorce rate and it is now falling to normal.

ATHLETIC FUNDS VANISH AT U. OF M.

Seven Dollar Value Secured for Price of Five Dollar

COMPULSORY ATHLETIC FEE

The Athletic Directorate at the University of Manitoba has made the disturbing revelation that the organization is defunct financially. The directorate has been paying twenty-five cents (25c) to the Amphitheatre at the university for every athletic ticket received at the gate. Now all the money is gone, quite gone.

The solution of the problem, the Directorate explains, is that each student should pay twenty-five cents (25c) with each season ticket presented for admission, according to "The Manitoban". Students have already got seven dollars ($7.00) value for the five ($5.00) paid for the athletic tickets, that paper says.

The crash, it was alleged, was due to the decrease in the sale of athletic season tickets and the disappointing rugby gates. Next year's crash will be avoided by a compulsory athletic fee on all students. The University of Manitoba may drop out of the Intercollegiate Rugby Union for one year, to reappear under more auspicious circumstances in 1932 or enter the Senior Rugby City League of Winnipeg. Student opinion, the Directorate decrees, will be sought to decide the course of the athletic policy. In the meantime a compulsory athletic fee is essential for the financial well-being of the organization.

Forbidden to Attend

"The Union of Soviet Republics firmly believes that some day one of the capitalist countries is going to attack Russia," stated Miss Yeghennian to the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom in an address on Soviet Armenia in Simpson's Arcadian Court last night.

Miss Yeghennian is a member of the National Board of the Y.W.C.A. and an Armenian by birth who spent last summer in Soviet Armenia in an attempt to get an unbiased opinion on how the Soviet experiment was working out.

"Russia is not interested in peace and disarmament, but they themselves don't want war. They only look for the day when all the world will be Communist."

"For six hundred years Armenia had been under a very cruel political fate," she pointed out. "It is only in the last ten years she has become suddenly free as part of the new experiment."

"The people are enjoying for the first time freedom of self-expression and their sacrifice is worth more to them than the terms of material prosperity which we enjoy. Each of the nine republics forming the Soviet Union has its own government and Moscow is the capital of the whole Union of Soviet Republics."

"With regard to education, no people are suppressed in cultural expression and they have perfect freedom. The official language of each republic is the one taught, but minority groups also learn their own tongue. Each literate person has to devote some time to teaching the illiterate and illiteracy is being done away with. "The Five Year Plan" is replacing the miraculous in religion by the miraculous in science. Industry and mechanism such as the Hydro Electric plant and irrigation ditches are used to replace religion."

"Although the Communist party is waging fierce anti-religious campaigns there is no suppression of religion and churches are open. But members of the Communist party cannot attend and the young are all being trained in anti-religious thoughts."

"We miss so much of these experiments because we judge it from our own experiences and history and not that of Russia. The priests and Czar

History of St. Michael's College Traced on Occasion of Annual Banquet

FIFTY YEARS AFFILIATED

First Irish Team to Win Cup in Thirty-Three Years Honoured by Fellows

Reminiscences of the early development of St. Michael's College, from its organization in 1881 were indulged in by Sir William Mulock, guest of honour at the twenty-first annual Arts banquet of the college held last night in the college refectory. The banquet was held in commemoration of the affiliation of the college with the university fifty years ago.

Beginning his address, Sir William presented his famous trophy, saying, "If you wish me to attend another such function in such a capacity, do not let another span of thirty years elapse before winning this trophy again."

Turning to the early history of the college, he said that fifty years ago it was regrettable that the Roman Catholic people did not take a more active part in the higher life of the province. The reason was thought to be that there was not sufficient higher education for the Roman Catholic people. The labours of his old acquaintances, Father Vincent, Dr. Cassidy and others, to correct this, resulted in the development of St. Michael's College and its affiliation with the university.

He stated that in 1881, he made a motion in the Senate of the university appointing a committee to devise a scheme of affiliation. The motion was accepted, but without much enthusiasm, and little notice was taken of it

FEMALES DISTURB ACADEMIC LIFE

Varsity Men Validate Opinion Broadcast by Oxford Undergrads

CO-EDS SOCIAL ADJUNCTS

Is the female a disturbing element in the academic atmosphere? What do you think of the action of the men students of Oxford University in issuing a plea to the women students to depart? These two questions were broached to several of the Varsity undergraduates in campus interviews yesterday.

W. G. Goddard of University College, expressed himself in favour of the women, and at length. "The co-eds in any college lend a softening or ameliorating influence on the men. I don't mean by that that the men become effeminate, but they at least curb their actions on the campus and in the classroom to a more desirable degree."

H. Gordon Skilling, also of U.C., was of the opinion that university women were not necessary adjuncts to college life, and had little effect on the life of the men at the University of Toronto. "The women and men sit separately in the classrooms, eat separately, have separate societies, study separately, etc., and generally ignore the principle of co-education that is supposed to exist at Toronto."

"As Oxford is a place for students it would be to the good of the university as a whole if the women were driven out," humorously remarked

HEADLINE HUNTERS

Nothing, perhaps, shows so clearly the policy followed by a newspaper as the quality and discretion of its headlines. A gruesome murder is committed; one newspaper will flaunt the fact to its readers in glaring scare headlines, appealing to the morbid and unhealthy instincts of its public; another contents itself with a single account of the affair, without giving it disproportionate space and apparent importance. The tabloid, which can scarcely be called a newspaper, reveals its contents to its prospective readers by a few clever headlines, a foretaste of the matter which is in its columns.

Barring a few of the more ardent enthusiasts, we might be termed a nation of headline readers. A few hasty glances at the pages of the newspaper are considered sufficient to keep us up with the times; we read the headlines of the pages, with perhaps a few of the lead paragraphs of the items which interest us particularly. Beyond that, much of the material filling the average newspaper might, for all ninety per cent of its readers care, never have been cast into lead slugs and reproduced on hundreds of tons of newsprint daily.

By that we do not mean to infer that the function of the newspaper is a totally unnecessary and useless one. Far to the contrary. It is in supplying a varied diet of reading for its subscribers that the modern newspaper has reached the position which it now enjoys in the community.

But it is also clear that the community is almost totally at the mercy of the press, with regard to the presenting of current news happenings. And, just as certainly the character of the headlines, and their general treatment will be a potent force in swaying thought and opinion, more important, perhaps, than the quality of the news presented.

The headline tells the story, so far as the majority of readers are concerned. If a biased statement appears in the headline, it will go down as fact. Cases are on record of successful libel suits having resulted from inaccurate headlines, although the body of the article has not borne out the statements. Even disregarding positive inaccuracies, headlines may be based on unimportant details, to trump up glaring situations, and lead to actual misunderstanding. Candidates for civic elections are well advised to bear this fact in mind, and guard their speech.

To the credit of the English press, it may be said that they are the least offenders, in this regard. A policy is followed by the leading London newspapers of absolute conservatism, a policy that sacrifices at the same time, interest for the sake of principle. In the United States, the opposite tendency is more apparent. Screaming headlines, that not even the outbreak of another world war would persuade the English press to display, are daily splashed over the pages, perhaps to draw attention to the speech of a mud-slinging mayoralty candidate, or to properly play up a murder, according to the tastes of the particular readers of the journal. Commercialism in the last degree is evident, to such an extent that one publisher will own two newspapers, screaming in their rivalry of one another, each holding a section of the population because of the policies they propose.

In this regard, Canada occupies an intermediary position, and this is not to be regretted, for it would seem that a combination of the two types of journalistic practice would be the best, sacrificing neither accuracy to sensationalism, nor interest to conservatism.

FROGS' EGGS AID STUDY OF EMBRYOS

Embryology Known to Greeks; Microscope Responsible for Modern Advance

"The discovery of the microscope was one of the greatest advances made in the study of embryology," said A. F. Coventry, guest speaker at the annual open meeting of the Trinity Science Club held last night in the College library. Mr. Coventry's talk, well illustrated with lantern slides, was a highly interesting and instructive discourse on the subject of embryology.

According to Mr. Coventry, the ancient Greeks were well versed on the subject, but some of the greatest advances were made in Darwin's time.

Mr. Coventry illustrated his lecture mostly with the egg of the frog, showing its development, and the various changes wrought by changing conditions at different stages. The slides showed plainly the growth of the cells. He stressed the fact that once the embryo has begun its development, there is no turning back; the cell must either die or go ahead.

Refreshments and dancing were enjoyed afterwards by those present.

Art, Music and Drama

"The Three Sisters"

Local premieres of great plays are always interesting events and tonight's presentation of The Three Sisters in Hart House Theatre, by the Trinity College Dramatic Society, should prove no exception.

It is many years since a Tchekov play appeared in Toronto. Russian drama of this type has never been very popular with amateur societies because of the great difficulty of characterization, and the prevailing prejudice that holds Russian drama to be monotonously dreary and melancholy.

The Trinity Society believes they have solved the problem of casting the play, and prophesy exceptional work, especially from the girls who are playing the Sisters' parts—Erica Mundy, Marge Clarkson and Loetitia Wilson.

Dixon Wagner, who played about five years ago under Bertram Forsyth, in another drama by Tchekov, The Cherry Orchard, is directing the piece; and is emphasizing the natural sympathetic humour with which the great Russian playwright has filled this story of the ordinary lives of ordinary people fighting against the powers of loneliness in a world that ignores their presence.

The Three Sisters has been in rehearsal since before Christmas. No one in the university who is interested in the drama should miss what may be the only chance in many years to see this significant play presented with the success that is expected from the Trinity Society.

Among those in the cast are Mary Winspear, Dorothy Livesay, Dorothy Ryerson, Lloyd Summerville, Ross Little, Gerald Graham, Ross Parmenter, Jack Damm, Frank Grimley, John Gilmour, Tony Brown, Richard Davies, Arthur Murrell-Wright and Frank North.

The technical committee consists of Henry Bull, John Guest, Arthur M'Gonigle, Cynthia Walker, Carol Dennison, Gwen Murrell-Wright, Molly Houston, Ruth Rous, John Thomas and William Baldwin. Montith Douglas, the president of the Society, is acting as Business Manager.

QUEEN'S HALL JUNIORS BANQUET SENIOR YEAR

Queen's Hall held their annual Seniors' Banquet, given by the Juniors in honour of the graduating year, last night. The guests of the evening were Miss Dorothy Kilpatrick, Dean of Women, U.C.; Miss J. G. The special decoration for the occasion consisted of the representation of different nursery rhymes by means of life-size cardboard figures against a black background. CENTRAL Y BASKETEERS ELIMINATE BLUES 18-17 IN PLAY-OFFS

THE SPORTSWOMAN

Varsity intercollegiate hockey team entertain Aura Lee to-morrow night at Varsity Arena. After their excellent showing against Silverwoods Wednesday night, Varsity should be able to hand them a defeat. They will also have the advantage of playing on their own ice. ***

The change in the line-up of the team was apparently just what they needed. In the three games played before Wednesday, Varsity had been able to score only 4 goals to their opponents' 9—and three of those were scored against a comparatively weak goalie. The forward line had shown considerable skill in getting the puck down the ice, but lacked finish around the nets. ***

Fran Crooks, although she has played defence almost continuously, has plenty of speed, and fits in well on the forward line. Naomi Slater, who took her place on the defence, showed up well, and with Adele Statten and Betsy Burruss teaming up with her, the team's defence suffers little, if at all. ***

The basketball game scheduled for this evening between Margaret Eaton School and Varsity intermediates was called off at a late hour last night. This would have been the fourth in a series of six games for the city championship. ***

St. Mike's and Senior Vic play the last scheduled game in Group II of interfaculty hockey to-night at Varsity Arena. The outcome of the game will have no bearing on the standing in the group as Senior Vic have 5 wins and no losses to their credit. ***

There are still some games to be played off in Group I. Household Science have two yet to play but are established in first place by reason of 3 wins and no losses. ***

EDDIE SINCLAIR EXCELS IN MANY SPORTS

Dentist Senior Leads in Accumulation of "T's"; Granted Bronze "T"

Eddie Sinclair is probably the most outstanding all-round athlete on the campus. He played football with the Orphans and we understand that he was unable to make the intercollegiate squad only on account of his eyes. He has been a member of the swimming and water polo teams ever since his freshman year. He has also represented the Blue and White on the track and wrestling teams. He is also an oarsman of no mean ability. He managed the intercollegiate football team two years ago and played for Dents last year. He seems to be equally proficient in almost any sport he takes up. A heavyweight in sport in every sense of the word, he is a sportsman first and foremost. He is in his last year at the Faculty of Dentistry and his graduation will be a distinct loss to Varsity. He has probably qualified for more "T's" than anyone else at Toronto and has been granted the coveted bronze "T".

BASKETEERS LOSE TO CENTRAL TEAM

Grant came to life splendidly, baffling his check to score two rebounds and a dog shot. Although both teams missed sure chances to score on two occasions, Varsity outplayed Central for the last three minutes but failed to sink a shot for a basket.

For Varsity, Willis was outstanding in the first half, while Grant, Humphrey, Loblaw and Hutcheon deserve great credit for the manner in which they kept up a fighting spirit both on the offensive and defensive. The final

BASKETBALL ISSUE HANGS IN BALANCE

Games Scheduled To-morrow Should Show Superior Skill

DANCE TO FOLLOW PLAY

Two high class intercollegiate basketball games are on the card for Saturday night when Western tackle Varsity senior and intermediate intercollegiate teams in Hart House.

Both the Varsity teams were defeated in London. The seniors were nosed out by 27-25, after a hard fought battle in which the winning basket was scored just as the final whistle blew to end the game. A win for the seniors will put them in a tie with Western for second place in the intercollegiate group, while a loss will practically eliminate them from the championship series. The team will be at full strength with the exception of "Doc" McCallum, who is still out of the game with a torn ligament in his ankle.

The preliminary game will be a battle from start to finish and Coach MacCutcheon's men will be further strengthened by the return of Lotimer, who was out of the O.A.C. game last week. As an added incentive to all those attending the game the team are giving an informal dance after the game, which will be free to all ticket-holders. The dance will be held in the main gym immediately after the second game and the orchestra will play for two hours. The team are putting on the dance in an attempt to increase the attendance at the basketball games. It is certainly strange that at the intercollegiate game with Queen's last Friday night there were only thirty-eight paid admissions while even less attended the exhibition game against Windsor on Saturday.

The preliminary game starts at 7.30, while the senior fixture gets under way at 8.30.

EMMANUEL BEATS KNOX; INTERFACULTY GAME

Keen Checking of Both Teams Holds the Score to 11 to 8

Emmanuel barely edged out Knox by 11-8 in a close checking interfaculty basketball match in the upper gym at Hart House yesterday.

As the score indicates the game was featured by the manner in which the men held to their checks and by the ability of the opposing defences to outguess the forwards whenever they became dangerous. Nevertheless there were enough "almost baskets" recorded to keep the game interesting and the result in doubt until the final moments.

The Emmanuel forwards were a little more dogged in their quest after points and in the end they were rewarded for their aggressiveness although the Knox defence of Anderson and Neilson more than made things interesting for Beacom, Shepley, Morrow and Co. At the other end Ashton and Searle presented an equal puzzle and initiated some fine plays besides nullifying the efforts of the Knox snipers, Cochrane, McKeggan and Varnett.

Emmanuel — Beacom, Shepley, Morrow, Ashton, Searle, Harris and Organ.

Knox—Cochrane, McKeggan, Varnett, Anderson, Neilson, Day, Robertson, Stevenson and Smith.

score was 18-17 when the game ended with the Varsity team still fighting strong as they went down to defeat.

Varsity—Hutcheon, Grant, Loblaw, Humphrey, Willis, Lotimer, Willis, Foxe and Henderson.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By T. A. F.

Central "Y" just managed to nose out the intermediate cage team last night in the playdowns to decide the winner of the second series. The final score was 18-17 and a disputed basket meant all the difference between defeat and victory. Loblaw of the Blues dropped one through the hoop just as the whistle blew to end the first half. It looked as though the ball was in the air before play ended but the referee ruled otherwise. It is hard to say whether the shot was O.K. or not but the decision is final of course. It was a tough break for the men of McCutcheon, who deserve a hand for the great showing they made in reaching the playoffs. ***

The fans will get a chance to combine sport and a little social pleasure on Saturday night. A dance will follow the basketball doubleheader between the Blue intercollegiate and Western. The Varsity Entertainers will provide the music and dancing will be in the big gym. The games in themselves will be well worth the small price of admission and the added attraction makes it a good opportunity for a full evening. ***

The senior "A" team play their last home game of the season to-night with the tail-end Kitchener Greenshirts providing the opposition. The visitors have yet to register a win, while the lone victory of the men of Porter in the O.H.A. race was secured when they took the Twin City aggregation 2 to 1 on the latter's ice. It will be a battle for the cellar position in all probability, since each has but one more game to play, the Blues with Marlboros on Monday and the Greenshirts against Nationals. Don't run away with the idea that the teams will only be going through the motions to-night, however. On form they are pretty evenly matched with the locals having a slight edge and it should be a close contest with plenty of fast, wide-open hockey. ***

The senior "Bees" wind up their regular season to-day with a trip to Hamilton where they clash with McMaster. The Bees have yet to lose a game and should end up the schedule with a clean sweep of six wins. Next week they meet their first real test when they come up against the Windsor Mic Macs in the first round of the playoffs. They travel to the Border City on Tuesday and play the return game here on Friday. ***

So far this season the "B" puckchasers have not run up against very much in the way of opposition and have pretty well walked away with the group title. It is to be hoped that they are not getting swelled heads over their success. Many a good team has been ruined by over-confidence, but if the Blues settle down and continue to play the hockey of which they are capable, they may go a long way in the playdowns. ***

Eddie Sinclair has added one more feat to his long string of athletic achievements in coming out on top in the competition for the Durnan Cup. Eddie is just about the best all-round athlete around the university and we fail to remember any field of sport in which the big Dents man has not tried his hand, usually with success. When Eddie leaves us in the spring and starts pulling teeth for a living he is going to leave a big gap in sport circles. ***

VARSITY HOCKEY SENIORS APPROACH FINAL GAME

Kitchener to Put Up Stiff Fight in Last Struggle with U. of T.

Varsity seniors will make their final appearance to-night at the Blue Arena when they take on Kitchener in a senior O.H.A. group "A" struggle. Both the Blue and White and the Greenshirts occupy cellar positions, with "Red" Porter's squad having a slight edge over the Twin City aggregation by virtue of their one and only win in the schedule over the team from Western Ontario. Kitchener, as yet, have not entered the win column and if they succeed in downing the Blues to-night it will place the two teams on an equal standing in the basement position.

Looking over their past encounters with the leading teams in the group, some of which were lost by a single goal, it can be seen that the Blues have been dogged by hard luck. To-night the team is determined to kill the jinx and hang up an impressive win at the expense of the lowly Greenshirts.

Kitchener, while at the bottom of the heap, have a formidable array of players who can offer stiff opposition to produce a smart tussle. They secured a new goalie, A. Schmalz, for their last game with Marlboros and he received considerable comment on his brilliant display. The forward line possesses a speedy attack, while the defence can hand out heavy body-checks.

Varsity came through their game with the Battling Bengals in good shape and if they can produce as good an exhibition as they displayed against the Tigers there will be no doubt but what they will end their home games with a win.

FARM HAND FINDS NEW PLANET PLUTO

Use Telescope and Microscope Seeking Late-ly Unknown Body

"BABE RUTH" REJECTED

A young farm hand vitally interested in astronomy had the supreme experience of discovering a hitherto unknown planet, according to John Blewett, III Vic, who spoke before the M. & P. Society yesterday.

Both telescope and microscope were employed in the search and when located, a contest was instituted to find a suitable name for it. "Babe Ruth", was suggested, since the planet was a kind of outfielder in the solar system, but the appellation Pluto, cabled from England, won. The clever originator of the title was a girl of 11.

The name Pluto was considered very appropriate since Pluto in classical mythology, was god of darkness and was able to make himself invisible at will. The parallel is drawn from the planet being brighter at times than others.

Pluto is a yellowish colour and has a temperature of 380 degrees below zero. Hence, if any nitrogen or oxygen is present it must be in a solid state.

For practical purposes the discovery is a dead loss, but it demonstrates how accurate prediction by mathematicians can be. "It gives us a pleasant feeling," he ended, "to have another member of our family of planets."

Professor T. R. Pounder, speaking on Postulates in Algebra, explained something of mathematics, "that subject of which we never know what we are talking about or if what we say is true".

"Hours 10 to 3"

A few people think that a bank wakes up at 10 a.m. and goes to sleep at 3 p.m.—a few, but very few.

Most people know that behind "banking hours" are many hours of hard work, when the machinery for the transaction of the nation's business works at top speed.

It is working to ensure that at no time will there be any letting up in the financial efficiency of the country.

Think of that when you pass a bank's closed doors.

M.P. CHIDES ANTI-FOREIGN COMPLEX

Immigrants Bring Much Good to Canadian Life, Factor Tells Liberals

"TOO LITTLE THOUGHTS"

"Get rid of the anti-foreign complex," admonished Samuel Factor, M.P., to the Liberal Club at the luncheon in Hart House yesterday. "Fair and sensible people in other ways have this one inexplicable fault,—hatred for the foreigner. Help him to overcome his radical transformation when he comes to this new land."

Even if we are clever people, we can learn something from the immigrant, according to Mr. Factor, who spoke on "Canadianism and the New Citizen". "The newcomer should forget his native land and sign his allegiance to Canada. However, he should be transformed to our ideas by reason, rather than by force," said Mr. Factor. "Modern life has become fast and furious economically as well as socially." Political thought is following (Continued on Page 4) is a movement whose object is the assistance of needy students in every corner of the world, either by direct aid or preferably by helping them to aid themselves. It is supported by students and friends.

Dr. Kotschnig, who is addressing the men and women of the university during the week on student conditions in Europe, is the secretary of I.S.S., and has been active in student movements on this continent and in Europe. He became interested in this work after receiving much-needed aid by European Student Relief Societies in which Toronto students participated.

Miss Margaret Wrong, daughter of Professor Wrong, and a Toronto graduate, will speak in Wycliffe Chapel Sunday on some phases of the world situation. She has been one of the secretaries of the World Student Christian Federation and is now secretary of the International Committee on Christian Literature for Africa.

Northrup Frye, Faculty of Music. "Their sole use is helping to fill in the social side of college life. Personally I wouldn't mind at all if co-education were abolished to-morrow."

"An equal number of men and women should be maintained in college, and the extra co-eds turned away," maintained George Birthe, II Vic. "I do not believe that the majority of co-eds at the university are in the least disturbing. Some do cause a flutter but I think the women are fully as dignified as the men."

Male students of the campus hold varied opinions on the subject, but lack the courage of their convictions. They refuse to be quoted. However, it was admitted that few tears would be shed if co-education were abolished.

Whitman College has recently devised an activity point system. Students there may exceed the allotment of points only by petitioning. With this rule more students may participate in the activities of the college.

The Table Round

Intellectual Nationalism

My eye was caught by the dispute between G.G.B. and J.M. upon the propriety of intellectual nationalism; and I am far from convinced that G.G.B. has won his point. As I understand him, he believes that a Canadian book is of no more importance to us and has no more claim upon our time than an English or Abyssinian book of equal aesthetic value. I am eager to know how he would comment upon the following passages from Mr. Lawren Harris's paper Creative Art and Canada:

"A people must become individualized before the universal can have any meaning for it. It must give life to its own particular attitude which depends upon the interplay of its time, its place on earth and its capacity, before it can become aware of the universal spirit that informs all great manifestations and all noble living. . . . What is termed 'the great traditions' that informs all great art cannot be taught. It is innate and can only be evoked by great love of the in-dwelling spirit of one's own land and people and an unconquerable faith in the presence of the creative spirit here and now."

I do Mr. Harris a deplorable injustice in detaching these sentences from an argument as remarkable for its clearness and closeness of thought as any of his paintings. But even in themselves I think these sentences suggestive. They suggest to me that intercourse with foreign writers will be most fruitful when it has been preceded and prepared by intercourse with their native analogues. And it is my own experience that the way to Green Apple Harvest takes one by Jahne; and that a cruise with Dr. Pratt's Cachetel lends a new vividness to Dauber.

—E.K.B.

A Literary Tariff

I think it is quite possible to concede the justice of Mr. Harris's remarks without retreating at all from the attitude which I have taken on the general state of Canadian literature. The development of a national intellectual tradition is a far different thing from the narrow self-centred attitude which is current in certain pseudo-literary circles. These people would inflict work upon us which has no other claim upon our time than that it is Canadian. The reductio ad absurdum of their attitude would be the imposition of a prohibitive tariff on all foreign books. It was the attitude of complacent self-admiration on the part of certain of this fraternity that inspired my original statement.

The Russian policy was mentioned. "Russia is carrying on a daring but misunderstood economic experiment. Under its Five Year Plan, it aims at the cultivation of millions of acres—a very sensible move," he said.

TOLERANT SPIRIT LAUDED BY MULOCK

at the time. The committee was formed and resulted in the union of St. Michael's with the university, and this led indirectly to the subsequent federation of other colleges. "From the very beginning," he stated, "the students were imbued with a spirit of tolerance toward other religions, other people and outside organizations, and now I feel that since the organization of this university I can recognize a more tolerant spirit among the majority of the people of this province." With regard to this federation, Sir William said he rejoiced to see how smoothly the relations of this college as well as of the other colleges were carried on.

Following the dinner, J. J. Clancy, the toastmaster, introduced the various speakers. A toast to the King was made, and then K. F. Noxon, president of the University of Toronto Schools' Old Boy's Association proposed a toast to the winners of the Jimmy Douglas Cup. This cup was won by the junior team of St. Michael's College after a hard and close battle with U.T.S. The reply was made by J. McGoe.

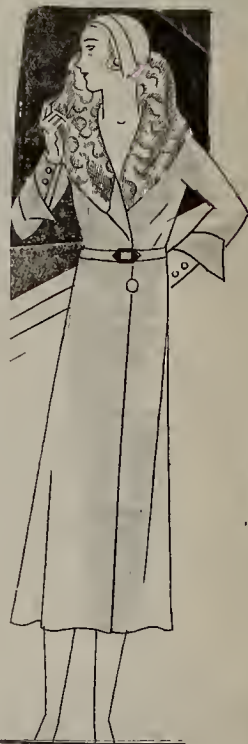

A toast was then made in honour of the winners of the Mulock Cup by W. Mogan, a member of St. Michael's team in previous years. This speaker drew attention to the fact that "the Irish" have waited 33 years for this coveted trophy and since it remained out of reach during all that time, the team which finally captured it deserved highest rank in the athletic life of this faculty for the year.

In the interval following this presentation the college Glee Club offered a clever ditty on "The Mulock Cup" to the tune of "Clementine".

Introducing Sir William Mulock, the Reverend Father McCorkell, superior of the college, also welcomed the committee just recently formed for the expansion of St. Michael's.

The last address was made by Mr. Justice Kelly, in which he paid sincere tribute to the men of the past who had done so much for St. Michael's College. He also commended very highly the recent organization of the Institution of Mediaeval Studies under the supervision of Professor Gilson.

The program was then closed by the National Anthem, the college and university yells.

SENIOR "A" TEAM EVADES CELLAR WITH 4-1 WIN OVER KITCHENER

CONN TALLIES TWO GOALS

Visitors Present Fast Squad

By Tory Fleming
Special to "The Varsity" by Norman

Hamilton, Feb. 13th.—
Varsity seniors entered the win column in the O.H.A. race for the second time this season with a 4 to 1 victory over the last place Kitchener Greenshirts at the Bloor Street Arena Friday night. As a result the visitors are shoved down permanently into the cellar position and the Blues are just one rung above them.

For the first time this year the men of Porter displayed a certain amount of scoring punch in their efforts and they clearly deserved the win. The Twin City crew were the equals of the locals when it came to skating and stickhandling, but they faltered badly when they got within striking distance of the net. On the other hand Varsity earned every one of their tallies and might have had one or two more but for the work of Shirk in the Green and White citadel.

Despite the fact that nothing but the doom pact in the standing was at stake the teams set a fast pace for the most part and gave every effort. Kitchener placed a squad of speedy, tricky stickhandlers on the ice and in the first frame it looked like anybody's game. Molson put the visitors one up when he beat the Blue defence alone for a neat tally, but Conn retaliated just two minutes later. The teams skated miles in the second stanza without getting anywhere in particular until Ferguson took a pass from Bill Stewart with less than a minute to play and planted one behind Shirk. The Blue wing man was camped in (Continued on page 3)

MANY LIVE IN HOPE

There appears to be no excess of prunes at Knox or Burwash as alleged at Trinity. At least no complaints regarding too much of any such delicacy could be found by "The Varsity". Both residences persist in avowing that they have "the best meals on the campus".

When asked to explain the meaning of such good meals at Burwash, Miss Falconbridge, dietitian there, said: "I guess there are no complaints because the boys are too nice to complain. I certainly believe in variety, but we can't always have good variety in a residence".

W. McLean, III Knox, said: "We have no cause to grumble here. The students are well satisfied, but there are always a few grumblers in every residence. I have eaten here for 3 years and have found no need to complain."

"Students often ask for prunes at Burwash. I think we get just enough of everything," said J. E. Newberry, IV Varsity.

A timid freshman at Knox, afraid to divulge his name for fear of a tapping, said: "There are many students who do not like certain dishes, but they just wait and hope for something better."

APE COMMON ANCESTOR

The brain of man is increasing in size and power, his cranium is becoming larger and his face is gradually becoming less prominent, showing a marked tendency to recede backward beneath the brain case, stated Prof. J. C. B. Grant of the department of anatomy of the University of Toronto in his address to the Royal Canadian Institute in Convocation Hall Saturday night.

"The evolution of other animals may be traced a long way back, but man, unfortunately, cannot be traced as other animals. Man, the monkey and the ape all have a common arboreal ancestor whose form was less specialized than either of his descendants. We imagine that he had a larger cranium than other animals of his own size, that he had no chin, that his eye sockets were round, that he had eye ridges, that he walked less erect, that he had two extra projecting teeth, but none of these ancestors have been located yet."

HART HOUSE POSTER COMPETITION

Election Placards Will Hang on Walls of Lobbies in Hart House

Arrangements have been made as in past years by the Sketch Committee and the House Committee for the display of election posters by candidates in Hart House during the week before the elections on 4th March. Each candidate who so desires may place one poster in the long corridor outside the East and West Common Rooms any time after 8 a.m. on Thursday, 26th February. The names of members of Hart House who are prepared to design posters may be procured at the Warden's office.

It has been the practice in the past to select a few of the outstanding posters to add to the permanent collection owned by Hart House. These will be judged by Professor H. Wasteneys and Professor B. Fairley on Tuesday, 3rd March. Only posters done by members of Hart House will be judged and the designer of the poster is asked to place his name, faculty and year on his poster.

An exhibition of election posters done in past years is now on view in the Little Sketch Room.

Debates Committee

The election of the Debates committee will take place at the last debate of the year to be held on Wednesday, 25th February. Nominations open at 9 a.m. on Wednesday, 18th February and close at 6 p.m. on Monday, 23rd February. Nomination forms for this committee may now be obtained at the Warden's office. The completed form must bear the names of the mover, seconder and nominee.

VICTORIA AT-HOME GLAMOROUS EVENING

Amid Subdued Harmonies Vic Climaxed Its Social Year

HART HOUSE RESPLENDENT

To the lifting lilt of music and the silent harmonies of tinted spotlights, Victoria's bravest and fairest whiled away a glamorous evening beneath the Gothic arches of Hart House on Friday last. The occasion was the annual Victoria At-Home, modern prototype of the now historic Promenade, and for decades past the culminating event of the Victoria College social year.

Dancing in the big gym and in the east common room provided outlet for the desires of the apostles of tinseltown, while an effectively subdued lighting arrangement in the swimming pool, and a blazing grate fire in the west common room lent attractiveness to these retreats of the less energetic. A sit-down supper in which the Hart House cuisine excelled itself made the mid-evening break more than customarily worthwhile.

Patronesses for the evening were Lady Falconer, Lady Flavelle, Mrs. N. W. Rowell, Mrs. Vincent Massey, Mrs. D. A. Dunlop, Mrs. E. W. Wallace, Mrs. George H. Locke, Mrs. R. S. Mills, and Miss M. E. T. Addison. The committee in charge was headed by Mr. W. A. Clarke, and included Miss W. M. Mahoney, H. J. Howard, Miss M. E. Keys, E. B. Jolliffe, Miss O. L. Ives, A. E. S. Davidson, Miss D. L. Bishop, J. W. Binning, J. J. R. Grills, G. E. Beavers.

Laurier Nemesis For MacDonald-Cartier Liberal Majority Dissolved Tory Club

The MacDonald-Cartier Club, recognized Conservative organization of the university, celebrates its seventh birthday this month. A search through the files of "The Varsity" for the year 1923-24 reveals that an organization meeting of the proposed "Conservative Club" was held on February 12, 1924, and the club took definite form shortly after.

The movement had from the beginning more success than an earlier attempt to form a Conservative Club in Old Trinity College, in the years before it occupied its present site on Hoskin Ave. Old-timers will remember that when Trinity Conservatives held a meeting in the old building on Queen Street, Liberal enthusiasts invaded the gathering to such an extent that they out-voted the Conservatives and elected Dr. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier as Honorary President. The club snubbed under the honour and soon died.

The original purpose of the MacDonald-Cartier Club, it was learned by "The Varsity" last night, was the reconciliation of the French-Canadian element in Canada. At that time the Conservative party was distinctly hated in Quebec and it was hoped that the organization of Conservative Clubs in various Canadian universities would help to ameliorate the condition.

Since that time this object has been lost sight of, with the Conservative

CANADA, AMERICAN ARBITER

Miss Margaret Wrong, speaking last night on the difficulties which are being faced by students in various countries, pointed out the obstacles which lie in the way of the achievement of the ideal of the Student Christian Movement to bring together the peoples of all nations. In this matter she envisioned Canada as having a great opportunity to act as an intermediary between the States and other English-speaking nations, Canada being in the position of a sympathetic auditor of the troubles of both parties.

Probably in Russia the members of this movement are meeting the greatest difficulties, it being punishable by law to hold meetings for the discussion of the work for which the movement stands. In spite of such hardships, however, old members of the S.C.M. are meeting together and are determined to keep the movement alive in their country.

Miss Wrong felt that in India the present racial trouble has been largely ameliorated by the friendships which have sprung up between British and natives when at college together. In many cases the natives are in an unfortunate position, being drawn hither and thither by the claims of friendship on the one hand and of race on the other. Miss Wrong hoped that students in Canadian universities might embrace, in friendship, students among them from other countries, and in this manner pave the way for better understanding among the nations. "In view of the strains to which Christians are being put to-day, it is necessary that the students understand each other," Miss Wrong said.

Displaying a fast brand of basketball Varsity defeated Western seniors by 35-32, while the intermediates turned the tables on the Londoners by winning 22-13 in intercollegiate basketball fixtures played in Hart House on Saturday night before the largest crowd of the current season.

Both the Varsity squads made up for the defeats handed to them by the Western teams in the last meeting of the pairs in London, the seniors being beaten on that occasion by only two points, while the intermediates were nosed out by a few points. The victories put both Varsity squads back in the running for intercollegiate honours.

Varsity and Western are by no means the class of the senior intercollegiate series but they certainly provided a great scrap from a spectator's point of view on Saturday as the game was close all the way and the issue in doubt until the final whistle. Play was lightning fast and the game developed into a wide open affair, leaving plenty of chances for combination plays the length of the (Continued on page 3)

Ohio State University recently held their annual "Farm Week", to which farmers from all Ohio subscribe. Students and tillers vied with each other how they would make whoopee. Then the spouses of the farmers arrived on the scene and the whoopee became more restrained.

Before they came, however, a dance was arranged in the gymnasium for the entertainment of guests and hosts. Truick gardeners, fruit growers, and big apple men fairly swung the co-eds of the university off their feet. The dance became a "hoe-down". It looked like a cross between a Varsity drag and a track meet, according to the (Continued on page 4)

Controversy

A strong desire that the controversy over the letter written by 68 University professors on free speech recently should be discontinued was expressed by Canon H. J. Cody, Chairman of the Board of Governors, in an interview with "The Varsity" last night.

"I have no public statement to make on the matter," he said, when asked if any action were being taken by the Board. "Let it die."

Canon Cody refused to affirm Press rumours that a letter had been sent by the Board of Governors deploring the action of the "68", or that certain of the professors had been dealt with privately.

J. J. Gibson, another member of the Board, had no statement to make when interviewed. An attempt was made to get in touch with Angus MacMurphy, also a member, but it was stated at his home that he was "out of town".

CERAMICS SCHOLARSHIP

At a meeting of the Senate of the University of Toronto, held on Friday evening, February 13th, a communication was received from the Senate of Knox College stating that Dr. W. W. Bryden had been appointed as the second representative of Knox College upon the Senate of the University.

The Robert Bruce Bursary was awarded to H. B. A. MacFie, enrolled in the first year in the Faculty of Medicine.

The Charles Mickle Fellowship was awarded to Sir Charles Scott Sherrington, Professor of Physiology, at Oxford University.

The Diploma in Public Health was awarded to G. B. Moffat, M.B., and the degree of Bachelor of Applied Science to J. M. Higgins.

The Diploma in Public Health Nursing for the one year course was awarded to Miss Frances Lee, and the Diploma in Public Health Nursing for the two year course to Miss E. M. MacLaurin.

The Ceramics Scholarship was established, the gift of the Canadian National Clay Products Association of the annual value of $50 for ten years, commencing with the session 1931-1932; this scholarship is to be awarded to the student of the third year in the Department of Metallurgy Engineering, enrolled in the Ceramics option, who has obtained the best academic standing.

A communication was also received from the Council of St. Michael's College stating that T. M. Mulligan, Esq., B.A., of Sudbury, Ontario, had been appointed as the representative of St. Michael's College in place of the late J. F. Power, Esq.

DEBUNKING HISTORY

Some years ago Rupert Hughes arose in his wrath and told the truth about George Washington, and now another American writer has taken up the cudgels to smash the halo around that other great idol, Abraham Lincoln. This latest "debunker" is Edgar Lee Masters, the poet, and author of the Spoon River Anthology, probably the most widely read volume of American poetry to-day. His book, "Lincoln the Man", is a five hundred page philippic against the Illinois lawyer's virtues. He might have saved himself the trouble for if he is really sincere in trying to change the nation's mind, he will be disappointed. Of course, if he is interested in publicity and royalties, that is another matter. But the great American public, and that goes for Canada too, do not welcome iconoclasts. They must have their revered national idols, both past and present, be they statesmen, business men, or talkie stars. All that Rupert Hughes succeeded in doing was raising a storm of resentment, and incidentally getting his name before the public. Washington still remains the Father of His Country.

We, here in Ontario, have already deified a canny politician, sometime of Kemptville. An adulatory biography of the great man was dashed off in really record time, and he is soon to be invested with the title of Saviour of the Empire, or something equally good.

Which brings us to the larger subject of the debunking of history as a whole. We have already shown the uselessness of it, as far as the adult mind is concerned. Old John Public simply will not have it, and since he controls our schools the children cannot have it. And would it be such a good thing if we did have it? If there are not some figures of the past or present, whom we rightly or wrongly consider greater than ourselves, what hope is there for self-betterment? Everyday life is drab and hopeless enough; what would it be if we had no Olympian gods to admire, envy and emulate.

By the same token, we do not hold with realism in modern art. There is enough of it in our lives. What we need is to be lifted out of our lives and sniff the air of a better land when we see a picture, read a book, or view a play.

"Magie easements opening on the foam,
Of perilous seas in fairy lands forlorn."

But that is digression. Even if Washington did tell lies, even though Lincoln was not all he might have been, they were acclaimed as great men by their contemporaries and the judgment of posterity still calls them such. It is not the faults of the great that should be remembered, for they did not really matter. What are we to teach our children: exclusively the good things about our historical personages or exclusively the bad? We have a choice for most of them had a little of the old Adam. Most sane thinkers will agree to teach the infant minds about their finer qualities, for, as we said before, they are the ones that count,—that last. Like gold they exist forever, while baser metals disintegrate. As the rhymes of Berton Braley, who is almost a poet, puts it:—

"As through the ancient world he plodded,
'Tis said that Homer sometimes nodded.
But get this about the poet-roamer,
It wasn't nodding made him Homer.

"It's said that Alexander drank,
And was at times a sot, a tank.
But set this also down with candour,
It wasn't drink that made Alexander."

So let us leave our heroes intact; we shall be better for it. Let the good men do, live after them and the evil be interred within their bones. All else is folly.

Teeth?

Editor, "The Varsity".
Dear Sir:

A rumour is circulating to the effect that the tea and coffee served in the Great Hall, Hart House, contains a measure of saltpetre.

It is known that saltpetre has a detrimental effect on the teeth, and for this reason alone we feel that the matter should be probed, and the practice discontinued!

Trusting that we have your co-operation in the matter, I am,

Friday Afternoon Recital

David Dubinsky, pianist, was a student in University College, was the artist for Friday afternoon and drew the largest audience of the year. For one so young he has developed quite a good technique and he has infinitely more musical taste than many older performers. It is a pleasing departure to have worthy members of this University contribute to this series.

His program opened with Beethoven's famous "Moonlight" Sonata, and his rendition of the delightful Andante demands particular commendation.

Several numbers by Chopin of the less "frilly" sort were very popular and played with considerable restraint. The Fantasia Impromptu which is heard on so many first class recital programs received creditable treatment.

The final group was devoted to pyrotechnics. Godard's Valse Chromatique was quite charming and a Valse Brillante by Manna-Zuca provided some rather exciting pianism. The Sixth Hungarian Rhapsody by Liszt received a tremendous ovation. Another little Valse Caprice by the artist himself provided an attractive encore.

From the effects he seeks and from a few other playing characteristics one would believe him to be a pupil of Mr. Seitz.

"The Three Sisters"

The Trinity Dramatic Society's production of Anton Chekhov's The Three Sisters, was perhaps not an inspired production, but it was certainly a most intelligent one. Following upon the Guild's The Way of the World and the Memorial's The Dybbuk, the Trinity offering was the third definitely experimental Hart House piece done by undergraduates this season. As such, it possessed claims to fame quite apart from its own merits. Its own merits, however, proved amply sufficient to carry it.

There was an attention to detail evident in Mr. Dixon Wagner's direction seldom seen in an amateur production. The lines were, without exception, I think, read with due appreciation of their dramatic significance and implication. There was no difficulty in following even the most obscure passage. In a play carried almost entirely by conversation, this was a feature in itself sufficient to send a critic into raptures.

The entrances and exits were handled with precision, while the walking—a most important department of stage technique seldom considered even in the best amateur circles—had evidently come in for considerable of the director's attention. Only in certain minor circumstances, such as the tendency of some of the male members of the cast to back cooly into their chairs when they wanted to sit down, was an element of gaucherie noticeable.

The Three Sisters is the quintessence of Chekhov, as it is the essence not only of nineteenth century Russian realism, but—if we are to believe what we are told—an uncompromising reproduction of the tone of pre-revolutionary Russian society. The piece does lack the terrifying grandeur of Gogol or Dostoevsky; it does not possess the sweep of Uncle Vanya or that Cherry Orchard which Mr. Wagner did with such striking success several years ago. But it succeeds on its limited canvas in projecting the mood of hopeless futility fully as well as such a piece as Eugene Onegin with all its trappings. It was not merely that these members of the Russian privileged classes had nothing to do; that they were bored,—but they were entirely unfitted mentally for the limited world in which they found themselves. They were too Oriental for purely Occidental society, yet they were much too well educated for the vitiating narrowness of their little scene.

This play has, it is true, an emotional appeal which is universal; but it is not to be properly understood unless considered as an essentially Russian document. And it was in the amazing fidelity with which the Trinity players achieved the Russian atmosphere that they gained their most signal triumph.

The story concerns the lives of three sisters and a brother, the surviving heirs of the landed family in the garrison town of a rural community. The desire of these people to escape from their environment provides the central theme. The brother and one of the sisters succumb early to circumstances. The other two fight valiantly against the inevitable, only to meet complete frustration at the end. One or two of the people in the play escape easily by refusing to think. The others think themselves into morbidity, they struggle pitifully, and they are tired. "They keep on talking, talking all day long!" one of the sisters exclaims finally in desperation. They talk easily, endlessly, often beautifully; but it only seems to plunge them deeper into their abyss.

Such exquisite care appears to have been observed in the casting of the production that it is difficult to select the outstanding performances. The women of the cast were, without exception, notably good. Miss Margot Clarkson as Irina, the youngest of the three sisters, was possibly the best, although Miss Erica Mundy as Olga and Miss Loetitia Wilson as Masha, the other sisters, were really too excellent to permit successful comparison. Miss Wilson gave easily the best performance she has given in Toronto. C. R. Parmenter as Andrey, the brother, did a very sensitive piece of work throughout. The building up of his soliloquy in the third act was a fine handling of a difficult passage. A. R. Little as the old Army Doctor was responsible for a piece of sharp characterization, even if his youth did shine through his white beard on one or two occasions. Other notable characterizations were those of Dorothy Livesay as the aged nurse and of J. O. Damm as the old rustic.

L. M. Sommerville as Lieutenant-Colonel Vershinin gave the most finished performance of the men. His diction and easy stage presence made him look like a genuine find. Excellent.

CHAMPUS CAT

Pansy has been very worried lately about the number of women that are running after us. She says it isn't safe. She thinks we should be vaccinated against them or something.

Now the question is, where to get it done so the mark won't show.

We had the treatment in our first year, but it didn't take. Possibly she wasn't what these Meds call an "active subject".

It just goes to show that you never can tell.

Speaking of activity, reminds us of the two old maids that took a tramp through the woods. . . .
The tramp died.

All of which means nothing at all, except perhaps that even the country isn't safe these days.

There was a young fellow from Ghent,
Whose neck was exceedingly bent;
To save himself trouble
He turned it round double,
And instead of coming, he went.

There was a young man from the Sault,
Who was looking for something to dault;
He found a baboon
By the light of the moon,
And its offspring he put in the Sault.

They were probably the Curran nine-days wonder.

And as a parting shot, we would assure the girl down in Woolworth's that she's not Pansy either.

CAGE TEAM NOSES OUT WESTERN 35-32 TO STAY IN TITLE RACE

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

The intercollegiate hockey team continued the good work by defeating Aura Lee 2 to 0 on Saturday night. In the last two games they have displayed the form which was expected of them early in the season. In the first few games they did not seem to be able to find the net, but in their last two appearances they have overcome this difficulty and are going strong.

Their brilliant showing lately is especially encouraging in view of the fact that the team journeys to Kingston next Friday to take on Queen's in the second game of the home and home series. They will have a two-goal deficit to face, by reason of their 3 to 1 loss here last week, but judging by the way they are travelling now they should make good.

Fran Crooks, captain of the team, was not on the Varsity line-up on Saturday night, due to an attack of the flu. It is certainly to be hoped that she will recover in time to take the trip to Kingston, since her work is always a feature of the team's play.

The game scheduled for Friday night last between Margaret Eaton and Varsity seconds had to be postponed because the M.E.S. outfit had to go to Whitby for a demonstration of gymnasium work. A date for the game will be decided later.

The senior and intermediate basketball teams clash to-night for the second time this season when they meet at U.T.S. at 6 o'clock. The seniors had no trouble disposing of the intermediates last time, but it was anybody's game for the first period. After that the seniors ran wild. If the seconds can keep up the good work a little longer to-night the result will be quite interesting.

The senior basketball, intercollegiate hockey, intermediate basketball, and the junior and senior "T" holders, are to have their pictures taken for Toronto-nensis at Freeland's between 1 and 2 o'clock on Tuesday. It is important that all those eligible should be there. The interfacuity hockey tournament is almost over, although there are still a few postponed games to be played off. Due to soft ice quite a few of the games had to be delayed. Household Science and Senior Vic are on top of their respective groups so far and look to have a good chance to meet in the finals.

BLUE SENIOR BEES TROUNCE McMASTER

Varsity Squad to Meet Windsor —win Group Leadership with 5-1 Victory

HENRY NETS THREE GOALS

University of Toronto senior Bees made a clean sweep of their group by defeating McMaster University by 5 goals to 1 Friday afternoon at Hamilton.

Varsity were a much faster and a better drilled team and earned the right to meet Windsor next Tuesday.

Henry opened the scoring for Varsity in the first period with a nice shot from the corner after six minutes of play. At the start of the second period Copp batted Clute's rebound past Subbards for the second counter. Henry put the third in on a pass from Cunningham, and four minutes later got his third goal of the game on a shot from centre. Lawson ended the scoring for the period with McMaster's lone tally. McPherson missed a sure goal by flipping the puck over the net, but came back immediately to score from the blue line.

Varsity—Goal, Kress; defence, Williams and Robinson; centre, Clute; wings, Mulvihill and Copp; subs, Hendry, Cunningham and McPherson. McMaster—Goal, Subbards; defence, Dick and H. Stewart; centre, Walther; wings, Hale and Lawson; subs, A. Stewart and Dunean.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By T. A. F.

The senior hockey team kept clear of the cellar position in the final standing of the O.H.A. senior "A" group by handing the Kitchener Greenshirts a 4-1 trouncing on Friday night. The faithful few (and they were mighty few) who filled about two sections of the Arena to capacity, saw a fast game. The way those Greenshirts could skate and handle the puck was worth watching. But their ability stopped right there. They shot like a bunch of wild men and passed the puck all over the ice. However, if the game had been a playoff or some crucial league contest the fans would probably have been raving about it.

There is an outside chance that the men of Porter can upset all the dope and ruin Marlboros' chances for the playoffs by defeating them to-night. We wouldn't like to bet on the chance, but stranger things have happened and will happen again as long as hockey games continue. The Dukes had a hard struggle up in Port Colborne Friday and they are none too fresh just now. They may find the Blues a harder nut to crack than they expect.

The senior "Bees" finished up their regular season on Friday with a win over McMaster. This gives the locals a clean sweep in all their league games with six wins and no defeats. They board the train for the first playoff game with Windsor to-morrow, the return game being played here next Friday. On their last appearance here in the S.P.A. series the Mic Macs did not look like world beaters and they drew a bye in their group so it is hard to tell just how good they are. The "Bees" themselves are also pretty much of an unknown quantity since they have yet to meet first class opposition.

Three of the star forwards from Frank Sullivan's Blue juniors stepped up to the "B" team and accounted for four of the five goals in Hamilton on Friday. Hendry got three and McPherson the other. Meanwhile Conn, the scoring ace of Dr. Smylie's team moved up (or down, whichever way you look at it) to the "A" team and notched two of the goals against Kitchener. With material available from all three teams we should be able to wangle out some kind of a line-up which will either win us the Intercollegiate senior title or get the "Bees" into the Ontario finals, or perhaps both.

What a big difference a little music makes. A week last Saturday the Queen's-Varsity senior basketball game drew exactly thirty-eight paid admissions, despite the fact that the teams were evenly matched and both still in the running for the title. Saturday night the Varsity Entertainers were added to the program for the Western-Varsity senior cage struggle and the gate came to over 350. Whether the fans' interest in basketball increased to that extent in a week or whether the dance was the big attraction we leave it to your imagination.

Perhaps Ross Workman should have hired Joe DeCourcy and his boys and staged a dance after some of the senior hockey games during the past season.

Some of the attendances at sporting events this year haven't spoken well for the loyalty, or whatever you want to call it, of the fans. It seems that you have to produce a winning team all the time or else the boys lose interest. Or perhaps it is the economic depression working on the pocketbooks of the fans.

floor for baskets. Both teams played a passing game and gave a real demonstration of the art of ball-handling, working the ball in close before attempting a shot and practically every basket was scored from close in.

Varsity's points were evenly divided and the forward line of Riggs, Collins and Hynes was working better than it has done in any game this season, while on the defence Sakler and Cook had their plays down perfect, scoring no less than fourteen points between them. Both Huhn and Sniderman filled in the relief roles to perfection and were effective both on the defence and offense. Western's best threats were Gunn on the defence and Beaton on the forward line, while Ward engineered many of the plays which resulted in baskets.

In the intermediate game Varsity held the upper hand throughout, leading by 13-9 at half time and pulling away to win handily by 22-13. Carr was the best man on the floor, scoring exactly half of Varsity's points, while Forsythe, Newman and Sullivan were effective. For Western, Hauch was outstanding and Evans and Ruskin were good on the forward line.

Varsity Seniors—Forwards, Collins (5) and Riggs (4); centre, O'Leary (2); defence, Sakler (7) and Cook (7); subs, Hynes (8), Sniderman and Huhn (2).

Western Seniors—Forwards, Beaton (7) and Farquharson (1); centre, Manness (3); defence, Gunn (7) and Ward (6); subs, Zavitz, Barbour, Lee and Young (8).

Varsity Intermediates—Forwards, Sullivan (3) and Carr (11); centre, Pasternak; defence, Newman (2) and Forsythe (4); subs, Coles, Burns (1) and Scott (1).

Western Intermediates—Forwards, Evans (2) and Ruskin; centre, Guginio (2); defence, Vatz (2) and Hauch (6); subs, Johnson, Clark and Lepine (1).

VARITY WOMEN BEAT AURA LEE 2-0

Blue Team Takes Offensive from the Start of the Game

MANY LONG SHOTS

Displaying great form Varsity women's intercollegiate hockeyists outskated Aura Lee to administer a 2 to 0 whitewash in a city league game at Varsity Arena Saturday night. Varsity took the offensive right from the first, and had a distinct edge all the way through, especially in speed and team work on the wing line.

Betty Carter opened the scoring early in the second period, when she banged the puck past the Aura Lee goalie from close in. Margot Thompson, Varsity wing, missed scoring only by inches.

In the third period Dot Starr added the second goal for the Blue and White from a scramble in front of the net after five minutes of play. Led by Billy Mackenzie, Aura Lee made a persistent attack on Varsity's net, but their attempts were broken up by Varsity's excellent defence work.

Adele Statten played a heady defence game and was also good on individual rushes. Betty Carter was outstanding and Margot Thompson deserved at least one goal. Billy Mackenzie was best for Aura Lee.

Varsity—Goal, Betsy Burruss; defence, Adele Statten and Naomi Statten; centre, Betty Carter; wings, Dot Starr and Margot Thompson; sub, Bliss McQuarrie.

Aura Lee—Goal, Lu Braden; defence, Mollie Trinnell and Rita Fox; centre, Billy Mackenzie; wings, Janet Allen and Bette Barr; sub, Beverly Grant.

front of the net when Stewart shot one out to him from behind and the rest was easy.

Varsity's superiority became more apparent in the final chapter when they counted twice to put the game away. Bill Stewart notched the first one on a brilliant individual effort which carried him through the whole Kitchener team for a close-in shot. The goal came one minute after the face off. The Blues missed several golden opportunities in this frame. More than once Stewart, Bennet and Conn apparently had Shirk at their mercy, but they slipped up by trying to carry the puck in too far instead of shooting. A three-man attack netted the Blue and White the final goal. Smillie to Dewar to Conn and the senior "B" scoring ace ran in his second of the evening.

Ames in the Varsity nets had a comparatively easy night, but once or twice was called upon to handle hard shots from close-in. As usual goals were hard to get with the curly-haired one guarding the posts. Stewart at centre was just about the pick of the locals. He accounted for one goal and would have had at least one more with a little less stickhandling when close in. Conn, who was drafted from the senior "Bees", fitted in well at right wing and had two markers to his credit. Lenahan worked hard all the time he was on and Leake and Ferguson contributed some nice back-checking. The defence pair of Dewar and Smillie made a fair job of looking after the visiting stick artists and also made several dangerous looking rushes.

Roth at centre for the Greenshirts showed a world of speed and his control of the puck was a treat to watch

ACADEMICA

The best of collegiate journalists have their bad evenings. But the best of collegiate journalists offer no alibis.

The Ubsysey of the University of British Columbia is anxiously looking forward to becoming a daily. One warns, the small young daily is most trying to its editors. It is self-conscious and so are its readers. Criticism and hard feelings are rife. Readers demand what the paper cannot give—what only the metropolitan collegiate journal can give—erudition, sophistication on a grand scale, and a bigness in every department that overawes the critic. The transition from the bi-weekly to the metropolitan collegiate journal is very hard.

Students at the University of Washington have just had a "dad's weekend". The invitation to the "old scouts" was printed in the Daily and one dad wrote, saying, "I guess I won't be down. Son says, 'I won't have time to see you—busy, you know—but I hope you'll be able to get to the game.' Good of dad, he thought he wasn't wanted."

Some years ago, one received the story from an authentic raconteur, of the dandy and dude of Queen's who refused to recognize his dad. He came to town to see his son at college and called at the boarding house. There his polished finger nails vied with the lustre of the ivory of the piano keys while he and his chums sang the Queen's song. With five fingers on his hip, one imagines, he strolled to the door to see his shabby dad. "Hello, son," the proud father said. Embarrassed, the sham smoothed his hair and chirped, "Why! I don't know you!" It's a phrase that sticks in sordid, bitter unforgetfulness. And the kindly old man crept away, disillusioned, back to the farm. Yet he slaved to complete his son's education. It's a true story.

Here's to a certain waitress. She's a knock-out—pure, unblemished, lovely, clever—in short, one might say, off-handed, that she has no peer—You say you love?

One-eyed, I see you wished to shove me
Into brink that yawns above me,
And now on rocky pillar stressing,
Transfixed below I pose distressing
And prove you're lovely.
I crave the red, red rim above me
Where you dance and beg you love me—

Dance! As you come from tea and tea
In your frolics there's solemnity,
For it actuates your love for me.
I marvel at the paradox: your innate inhibition
And the obvious exhibition—
You have no peer.

different Universities in the country have a very great influence on the political life, the dominion organization of the Conservative party hope to start a club in each in order not only to unite those of its party who may be in attendance, but to win the support of those who have not yet taken sides with either party. Hon. Howard Ferguson, Premier of Ontario, has accepted the honorary presidency of the organization, and Sir Thomas White, while not being able to promise any active support, has signified his pleasure at the move.

"It is proposed to hold meetings from time to time during the year at which men prominent in the Conservative party will speak and who should give interesting light on the political situation both in the province and in the dominion. The organizers of the club plan that it shall be university-wide in its scope and hope that once started it will have in its ranks at least twenty to thirty men from each faculty.

"At last evening's meeting a provisional committee consisting of one official member from each faculty of the university, and one each from the different Arts colleges, was appointed, with B. W. Howard of University College as its convener, to organize the different bodies of the University. A further meeting of this committee will be held next Monday night to arrange for the opening rally, some time near the end of the month. It is expected that this will take the form of a smoker, at which some prominent politician will give an address.

"The members of the provisional committee are, B. W. Howard, U.C.; A. McKel, Medicine; Mr. Heyward, S.P.S.; K. R. Wilson, Victoria; N. Taylor, Trinity; A. McKeown, St. Mike's; A. Huband, Knox; A. B. Sutherland, Dents.

With the exception of the last act, the settings were adequate—although the line of the table in the first set was palpably too high. The most striking thing about the staging was the immensely courageous and successful use of candles in the second act.

Despite the fact that it was a perhaps laudable desire to follow the tradition of the English universities, I cannot but decry the use of initials on the program to designate the male members of the cast. There are various other people who persist in following this procedure at Hart House. It is most unprofessional and I cannot think it is defensible even when the initials are as numerous as those of —A.E.F.A.

There was, in fact, not a hitch, all during farm week. On the campus farmers enjoyed good-natured joshing with students as to which were the worst drivers. Permanent ties of sentiment are forged between country and college during the Ohio State U. farm week.

RUSSIAN METHOD MEANS SACRIFICE IN ECONOMIC LIFE

Capitalism Need not be Sacrificed to Exemplify Socialism

RATIONALIZE INDUSTRIES
Trade Menace from Russia Remote as Home Market Will Absorb Output

By Milton Shulman

"If the five year plan succeeds in Russia, the only way to combat it in other countries would be to give the workmen the same advantages as the Russian workmen will be getting," stated Professor W. M. Drummond of the department of economics, when asked by "The Varsity" as to the best way of combating the five year plan of Russia without war. "But this does not necessarily mean that we adopt Socialism. I don't think capitalism need be sacrificed to exemplify socialism as in Russia. All we need do is raise the efficiency of our industrial output as high as that of Russia's, and we will be able to put our working men on an equal basis with theirs."

"How advantageous would it be for other countries to adopt Russia's five year plan?" was the next question asked, to which Professor Drummond replied:

"So far as the Russian plan represents a more complete experiment in centralized scientific planning or rationalization of industry and in so far as it is possible for other countries to rationalize their industries more completely, it is only natural to say that it would be advantageous. But if copying Russian methods means a lowering of living standards or a great sacrifice in economic liberty in other (Continued on Page 2)

RUMOURS CONCERNING TUNNEL ARE GROUNDFLESS

"The tunnel is in," stated Colonel LePan, superintendent of the buildings and grounds in the University of Toronto, when interviewed by "The Varsity" concerning the rumour that the Women's Union must be torn down to allow the heating tunnel to reach the new women's residence.

"The matter is quite simple. The tunnel is carried up as far as 79 St. George Street, and then breaks, the pipes continuing through the basement of the Union in such a manner that should a new building ever be erected, the heating system of the residence will not be disturbed."

Dutch Dates Deny Dignity to Dandy Dudes Fastidious Females Feel Financial Feuds

What is a Dutch treat and why? The ignorance of some people is appalling! There are evidently still some somnolent specimens of humanity sleeping while the world spins around them. To have such a question hurled at one in this day and generation is quite disconcerting—a Dutch treat is something with which every-one should be familiar or else his education has been neglected!

The first part of the question is easy. But the latter—why?—is not so easy! One inspired individual suggested that the origin of the phrase might have been Scotch treat, then by changing the first letters in the course of time it became Dutch. In the States it is called Yankee treat.

On this topic, as on every other, opinions differ around the university campus. Statistics up to date show only 25 per cent of the men not in favour, while the remainder are de-

North House Attempts To Correct Morals

North House of the University of Toronto residences has taken upon itself the task of keeping the morals of the campus in the immediate vicinity of the residences.

"Stop that necking. You in the ear over there. Time to move on," and such unfeeling or envious shouts were belched through a megaphone from one of the upper windows of the residence shortly before midnight last night.

After a long last good-night, the ear moved on to explore further parts.

NORAH BOWERS WINS ORATION

Second Annual Oratorical Contest Was Held at Women's Union

CONTEST CLOSE RACE

Norah Bowers, II U.C., speaking on the subject of the proposed Women's Building, was the winner of the second annual oratorical contest for women of the University of Toronto, held at the Women's Union last night.

Miss Bowers opened her address with a reference to the two-cent-a-throw ink wells stationed at strategic points about the campus and ended with an appeal to the women to start counting up their rich relations and to find out which one wanted to have the honour of endowing the women of such an honoured institution as the University of Toronto, with such a useful gift.

The contest was a close race, with all the speakers of a high calibre. Other contestants were B. Zahler, who spoke on Canada and appealed to graduates to forego the greater mercenary attractions of the United States to benefit their own land; Lois Beach, who pleaded for universal disarmament; Elsie Wilson, who delivered an address on Friendship which she claimed was being superseded in the modern rush, by teas, lunches and bridge parties; Gertrude Acker, who gave a biographical sketch of Rupert Brooke; and Harriet Clark, who presented a psychological account of the principles underlying free speech.

The judges of the contest were Mrs. T. Grubbe, representative from St. Margaret's Alumnae Society which gives the annual prize of twenty-five dollars for the event, Professor Cochrane and Miss Grace Hunter.

JUSTICE IS ALSO CONCERN

Police Department Fulfills the Ideal of Good Citizenship

By Henry N. Gladstone

"Justice is the greatest concern of all mankind." This sums up the purpose of all government. And with these words made famous by that great statesman, Sir Edmund Burke, Chief of Police, Brigadier-General D. C. Draper opened his talk last night at Hart House on the subject "Co-operation between Police and Public."

"The Toronto Police Department is seriously undertaking to uphold and support the rights of the citizens as expressed in the law of Canada, Ontario and Toronto. In order that the citizen and his property may be protected the police must maintain a secure and enduring watchfulness," the General continued.

"The police department fulfills the ideal of our good citizenship, but it serves the bad as well. Every crime prevented is a benefit to both. To carry out efficiently these ideals, the police must be intelligent and put forth a persistent effort in the performance of their duties. The object of force is not to punish, but penalties must be inflicted to prevent crime; for the reason that every evasion of the law causes more law-breaking and more law-breakers. Wherever honesty is seen to prosper, the incentive to do right is not so strong."

"The object of all police work is to prevent crime and to render a sense of safety to all the citizens. Every crime that goes unpunished is an incentive to more crime. Punishment (Continued on Page 2)

FASHION FAD FADES FOR FIGHTING FEMS

Modiste Faculty Disapproved as Unimportant Diversion by Co-eds

FEMININE FEMINIST WHICH?

"I certainly think it would be great to have a school of fashion here. At any rate I wish there were more study of fashions in connection with the U. of T. Instead of a Household Science option in Pass Arts I would be heartily in favour of a fashion option," said Miss E. L. Bray, third year Household Science, when asked her opinion on the advisability of instituting a fashion school, similar to the one in Paris, at Toronto.

"I, for one, wouldn't be interested in such a school and I haven't seen any need around the university for one," vigorously declared W. Clarke, IV Vic.

"Women spend enough time on fashions now and I don't think girls should major in such a subject. With people who would go in for it it would likely become an obsession. What is necessary in this line can be learned otherwise if the woman in question is interested. There are other things so much more important," stated Miss I. Clare, II Vic.

"I, at least, would find a course in fashion designing practical and most interesting," said Miss E. McCaul, III Household Economics.

"A fashion school? Utter nonsense. Fashion and learning are two separate things and should remain so," was the decided opinion of one co-ed who wished to remain anonymous.

VALUABLE EDITIONS

"There are an average of 360 books used per day," stated Rev. F. L. Barber, Bursar and Librarian of Victoria University, "out of the some fifty thousand available volumes. The books cover nearly every phase of reference needed by the university student."

"We have three main divisions," Dr. Barber continued, "namely, the daily circulation to Victoria Arts students, the Theological department for students of Emmanuel College, and the Extension Library Service to all graduates and ministers of the United Church free of charge. We have many interesting and very valuable first editions and manuscripts. Our shelf room is slightly inadequate, but this will be much overcome by the space available in the Theological reading room of the new Emmanuel College. Our chief concern is in the lack of accommodation for students wishing to study at the library, especially at examination times. Even with the addition of the new reading room we can accommodate only 30 per cent of those in attendance. Victoria University library is much in need of greater seating capacity."

IDEA ALL RIGHT

Is prohibition an atrocious example of civil interference in men's rights? This statement, appearing in "The Varsity", appears to be a little too drastic in its wording, according to the interpretation given it by several undergraduates and professors.

"The statement denies that man has the right to go to the devil," said Mr. Day of the Classics department of University College. "But the idea is all right," he continued. "The state should prevent a man from drinking too much, just as it should prevent him from committing suicide. Students of public opinion, however, should guard against letting the state rule in things which are a matter of (Continued on Page 2)

ENGINEERING IS MERE HORSE SENSE

W. J. Davidson of Detroit Tells Engineering Society About Iron and Brains

ILLUSTRATED BY CHASSIS

W. J. Davidson, of the General Motors executive, Detroit, and engineering Society of McGill, spoke to the Engineering Society of S.P.S. yesterday afternoon on "Where do we go from here?"

The talk was illustrated by means of a Buick chassis. Incidentally, it took considerable engineering ingenuity on the part of certain S.P.S. students to get the chassis into the room. He went carefully over the whole chassis, describing briefly the function of the different parts, why they are where they are and not some other place.

Mr. Davidson stated that engineering is applied horse sense. He went on to point out that machines of a technical nature are made of a combination of iron and brains; the more brains, the less iron.

General Motors cars are now thoroughly insulated from heat and sound generated by the engine. Synchronism transmission permits shifting of gears without sound.

Mr. Davidson's definition of intelligence: Intelligence is the wise application of what you know and can find out.

NEW ATLAS UNDERTAKEN

Ohio State Lantern.—Professor Hans Kurath of the department of German, and chairman of a special committee appointed by the American Council of Learned Societies, announced that a study of New England dialect will be the initial step in the mapping of a linguistic atlas of the United States which will be the first study of the kind in this country.

English dialects spoken in the United States and Canada by native born residents will be the scope of the present study which was first considered by the council a year ago.

The data secured will probably show the influence of movement of population, of topography and arteries of communication, of the stratification of society, and of the rise of the lower classes to positions of importance.

THREE CORNERED TIE CREATED BY MARLBORO SENIORS

Defeat Porter's Varsity Seniors 5-2 in the Last Scheduled O.H.A. Game

PLAYOFF BERTH IN O.H.A.

In Second Session Launched into Offensive that Swept Varsity off Their Feet

By J. M. Chorlton

Marlboro seniors made sure of a playoff berth in the O.H.A. senior A race and also created a three-cornered tie for first place in the group by defeating Jack Porter's Varsity seniors 5-2 in the last scheduled O.H.A. game at the Arena Gardens last night.

After a scoreless first period Marlboro launched an offensive to open the second session that swept Varsity off their feet, running in three goals in the first four minutes and adding another two before the period finished. While Varsity's best threats were one or two close shots by Stewart and Lenahan. In the third stanza, however, Varsity sent four men up the ice and continually swarmed around Harris in the Dukes' net, their efforts being rewarded by two sensational goals by Stewart, one on a pass from Smillie and the other on a lone effort.

Although the collegians were not expected to even extend the fast-starting and heavy checking Dukes, they put up a mighty fine argument and, given any breaks at all, would undoubtedly have made the score much closer. "Doc" Ames played his usual stellar game in goal and on numerous occasions stopped impossible shots (Continued on page 3)

SINCLAIR DENIES USE OF SALT PETRE

Only Cooks Tamper with Food in Hart House Kitchens

STUDENTS SATISFIED

"That salt petre is contained in the tea and coffee served in the Great Hall, as mentioned under Monday's 'Correspondence', is absolutely untrue." This denial was given to "The Varsity" by E. G. Sinclair, V Dents, secretary of the Hall Committee. "There is nothing in it and I've been trying to find out the author of the letter."

Asked if there were any cautions taken toward watching the kitchens, he replied, "It is absolutely impossible for anybody except the cooks to tamper with the food and anybody would be fired at once, if he were found to be unnecessarily tampering with the food. The Comptroller and Assistant Comptroller are at all times in close touch with the kitchen and are well able to take care against any matter of this kind. That letter is purely a figment of a ribald imagination. As a matter of fact, as far as salt petre goes, it has no detrimental effect on tea or coffee at all."

J. R. Gilley, Comptroller of Hart House, on being interviewed, said: "Of course it's not true. I think it is only the imagination of a student whose taste is not satisfied. This is the first complaint that we have heard yet."

Inquiries on the campus show that all students are perfectly satisfied with the food and drink served in Hart House.

THESE SMART YOUNG MEN

One hesitates timorously before venturing opinions upon sacred Oxford, or even holy Cambridge. One is reared to believe in the eternal rectitude of these shrines of learning set in their grey aura of mediaeval mellowness upon the wise and ample bosom of the Old World. In a sophisticated age which sloughs its illusions considerably faster than it digests its discoveries, these wise old emblems of the everlasting verities are much too precious a metal to risk on a chance throw.

But the men of Oxford have decided that their sisters in Minerva must go.

It is not that the sisters in Minerva have been tolerated beneath the spires of Oxford for a sufficient number of years to become a part of the tradition. It is not that the strange hybrid we know as co-education exists there in any degree which we would recognize. Nor is it that we are entitled to even a modicum of self-righteousness, in the light of a co-education which simply does not exist on the local campus.

It is merely that one feels that these smart young men of Oxford have, by their action, placed themselves in much too uncompromisingly revealing a spotlight for the weal of our last great cherished illusion. Our souls cry out in shuddering horror at the bare thought of the implied asexuality of the Oxford male. Surely, even Oxford cannot dispense with one of the fundamental facts of life!

It is not reasonable, we tell ourselves, that the languor of post-war British high society has carried itself to such an extreme as this. With tenacious valour we battle against the suspicion that the sagely grim old towers shelter a race of beings whose remarkably civilized decadence has carried them to the last sweet stage in which once glorious empires rot in beautiful boredom.

All the fine, frank cleanliness of our New World intelligence revolts against the horrid suggestion.

It is not so! It must not be made to appear so . . . even if it happens to be the momentary whim of the smart and elegant young dons themselves.

countries the advisability of copying Russia is much more questionable."

When asked if it would be advantageous for other countries to adopt Russia's plan, Dr. Morgan of the economics department stated: "For years to come Russia home market can and will absorb practically the entire output of Russian industry. Hence any trade menace so far as Russia is concerned, is to my way of thinking, remote. There is a possibility, however, that if Russia does succeed in materially increasing the standard of her working class that certain sections of working people in the other parts of the world may seek to emulate the Russian experiment." Dr. Morgan declared that he did not know of any way to combat this state of affairs.

For a period before the crime he has been losing his grip on the moral values of life. The citizen who would save his friend has every opportunity to befriend him during this period.

"Humanity is ever the concern of the police. Within the past four months the police of this city have given over $6,000 to charitable organizations in the city.

Reducing. (1-)-Marie Dressler and Polly Moran in a melodramatic farce with a wierd mixture of slap-stick comedy, high romance, and old fashioned sentiment about love and snoring husbands and the man who had to marry the girl. Could not help laughing.

Imperial.

The Criminal Code. (1-)-Not as good as The Big House, but Walter Huston and Phillip Holmes do some nicely restrained acting as the prison warden and the young man redeemed by love. One fine photographic sequence of prisoners yelling their heads off that the noise may cover the murder of the man who double crossed his pals.

Shea's.

Loose Ends. (1-)-Another English picture with a murder background. The story of the convict trying to make good and of the girl who nearly failed him. Of course the acting is o.k. Only laughed once as Owen Nares let his heart break. But there are so many close-ups the faces became almost obnoxious. Don't like watching a pair of mouths constantly opening five inches in five foot heads. Couple of good vaudeville numbers also.

Uptown.

Murder. (1-)-A British production adapted from the prize novel "Enter Sir John", by Clemence Dane and Helen Simpson. Herbert Marshall does very well as the charming Sir John and Norah Baring is the beautiful victim of circumstances saved by Sir John. The mystery is weak and in an American production probably failed, but the acting atmosphere and attention to detail of the English film save it. One peculiar episode shows Sir John in soliloquy before a mirror, his lips unmoving but expressing his thoughts aloud. Shorts are a poor average.

Tivoli.

The Man Who Came Back. (1-)-Another weak picture for Charles Farrell and Janet Gaynor. An interesting picture, with atmospheric effects, but overlaid with melodrama, and a weak plot. Even so it is the best thing they have done since "Seventh Heaven".

DUTCH DATES DIGNITY TO DANDY DUDES

It is also claimed that men usually have (or should have) more cash, due to their opportunities to earn, and they take more delight in a grand spree at the end of the week. Here it is in the word of a poet:

"I'm fizzy and fiery, and fruity and tense,
So let's have a sundae and hang the expense!"

The following bold opinion might be put in a class by itself: "I don't approve of Dutch treats at all—the girl should pay the whole thing!" As a matter of fact, she sometimes does!

These days she often feels under considerable obligation to a boy, but some argue that there is no need—instead of spending money in extravagant luxury, why not ramble through slushy woods under the icy sky enjoying the sweet song of the sparrows? This would solve the whole problem.

In any case, a boy cannot (if he is a gentleman) suggest a Dutch treat—that is a girl's privilege, and it depends entirely on their relationship and circumstances. No one's pride should be hurt because of the ordinary, everyday, modern "propolition." "Let's . . . and go Dutch!"

Mary Wigman

who will appear at Massey Hall on Friday of this week.

Mary Wigman, who comes to Massey Hall, Toronto, Friday evening, February 20th, and whose every one of ten New York appearances have been sold out to the doors, is accredited the most adored dancer in all central Europe and her influence is being felt in music and dance circles all over the world.

Her art consists of visualizing movement first of all, and then selecting the melodic accompaniment. This often calls for original musical scores. "Franklin Wiegman did not begin to dance before the public until she was twenty-seven years old, and much of her inspiration must have been derived from Isidora Duncan; but within six years she was dancing before a bewildered, enthusiastic, defiant audience in Berlin and her career was launched.

Miss Wigman continued her school in Dresden, where the now-famed Kreutzberg and Georgi were trained, but she dauges alone in concert, giving a full and most fascinating program. Her great hold on the attention and the affections of central Europe, of dance connoisseurs and laymen as well, is said to be an inexplicable thing until one sees her.

Miss Wigman is perfectly poised, with a breadth of vision and a balance which apparently see that wisdom and humility have much in common. But behind the cool gentleness of the dancer's exterior there is a smoldering fire—a "dark" flame, but a devastating one. She is one of the greatest personalities of the day, say the leading foreign and American critics. (Adv.)

MARLBOROS QUALIFY FOR PLAY-OFFS WITH 5-2 WIN OVER BLUES

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

The intercollegiate basketball team scored their second win over the intermediates last night when they defeated the second team in a close game by a score of 31 to 21. The game was featured by good play on both sides, and some smart combination work.

The seconds will meet Margaret Eaton for the first time this year on Wednesday of this week. As the M.E.S. outfit did not show up so well in their second encounter with the seniors, the seconds look to have a fair chance to hand them a defeat.

Hamilton Normal School Grads will come to Toronto to play a game with the seniors on Friday, February 20. This is the game which was to have been played on the 6th of this month, and was postponed because the Hamilton team were unable to make that date.

The Normal team showed plenty of speed and some really good combination in their game with the seconds a few weeks ago, and the seniors will have a tough job on their hands disposing of the Hamilton squad.

Plenty of enthusiasm has been aroused over the University College swimming meet which is being held on Wednesday night at U.T.S. tank. There will be keen competition in all the events, and there should be some really excellent exhibitions of swimming.

Members of the senior basketball, intercollegiate hockey, intermediate basketball teams, and senior and junior "T" holders are reminded that Torontoensis pictures will be taken between 1 and 2 o'clock to-day at Freeland's. Everyone is requested to be on time.

The intercollegiate hockey team is practicing hard in preparation for their game with Queen's on Friday. They are holding a workout to-night at 5 o'clock on the outside cushion instead of on the artificial ice at the Arena as usual.

VARSITY 'BEES' MEET WINDSOR

First Home Game To-night for Right to Enter Final for "B" Title

MIC MACS UNKNOWN

To-night the Varsity "Bees" meet the Windsor Mic Macs in the Border City in the first of home and home games for the right to enter the final for the senior "B" title. Belleville have already won their group and are marking time while Varsity and Windsor are declaring a winner. Dr. Rod Smylie's crew held a light workout yesterday afternoon at the Arena Gardens and left last night for the border town for a good night's rest before the battle.

The Mic Macs are an unknown quantity. Their only appearance here this season was in the S.P.A. series, but they gave a good account of themselves. They showed the makings of a real good team. In Foot, their centre ice star, they have a brilliant performer. He also takes a turn on the defence.

Varsity will line up with LeBarr in goal and Williams and Robinson on the defence. LeBarr has proved himself to be one of the best net-minders in the O.H.A. and with the help of a sturdy defence, the Blues have had few goals scored on them this season. The attacking division will be composed of Clute, Conn and Charlebois on the regular line, and the erstwhile junior first-string front line of Cunningham, McPherson and Hendry in reserve. Hendry and McPherson accounted for four out of five goals against McMaster on Friday last.

The "Bees" are Varsity's last chance for an O.H.A. title and they may duplicate the success of the famous Orphans and bring home a championship from a source least expected.

SENIOR VIC BASKETEERS DEFEAT SENIOR DENTS

Senior Vic defeated Senior Dents 30-16 in an interfaculty basketball game played yesterday in Hart House. Dents' defeat may be put down to their inability to take advantage of chances offered them as they had plenty of opportunities to score but could not net the ball.

Vic showed better finish and ball-handling, which gave them the margin of victory. For the winners Levit at centre and Vaughan on the defence were outstanding, scoring eight points each, while Bowles and Hendershot played good games.

Senior Vic—Forwards, Hendershot (5) and Davison; centre, Levit (8); defence, Vaughan (8) and Cowle (2); subs, Barrs (1); Lautenslager (2); Clarke and Bowles (4).

Senior Dents—Forwards, O'Shaughnessy and Buchanan (6); centre, Mitchell (1); defence, Howitt (5) and Stafford (2); subs, Shaver (2), Dore and Hackett.

Crooks will be able to make the trip to Kingston with the team. She is recovering from an attack of the flu, and while better, Friday is rather soon to expect her to be fully over the effects of it.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By T. A. F.

Well, there was no miracle last night and the Blue seniors failed to down Marlboros. All of which is in no way to the discredit of Red Porter's charges. They put up a great struggle and finished off the season with a good showing against one of the strongest simon-pure teams in Canada. Despite the fact that the team finished only one rung from the bottom of the ladder and had a fairly disastrous season, no one can accuse them of not giving their best efforts in every game. The competition has been keener this year than for several long seasons and amateur hockey looks to be in for a return of some of its old-time popularity.

Bill Stewart, veteran mid-ice star on the seniors, came into a bit of his own last night and scored the two goals. Bill is the leading goal-getter for the Blues in the O.H.A. race with five markers and three assists. Incidentally we want to say here and now that, although Bill has come in for some harsh words from one or two self-appointed critics in the past two years, he has been the hardest working player on the team in nearly all of the games this season. Stewart has few equals when it comes to stick-handling and although subjected to some hard battering by opposing defencemen, he never stops trying.

Once again we wish to state that we will back Doc Ames against any goal-keeper in the O.H.A. for all-round consistent brilliance. Ames turned in another fine effort last night as usual.

All the seniors have to do now is step into Montreal Thursday night and get back the intercollegiate title from McGill. It will be some job to down the Red and White all-stars in their own ice-house, but it can be done. The McGillmen did not look nearly as good as they were rated in their appearance here and with a little bit of luck, plus some much-needed scoring punch, Varsity can do it.

McPherson, Hendry and Cunningham, who shone on the front line of the Varsity juniors, have been added to the line-up of the senior "Bees" for the game in Windsor to-night. With Conn, Clute and Charlebois as regular forwards the team will certainly not be lacking in goal getters no matter who is on the ice. Added to that is a strong rearguard in the persons of Hal Williams and Robinson in front of LeBarr in the nets and you have a real team and no mistake. Whether they are good enough to take the Mic Macs or not is another matter. As we said before the latter are "dark horses". However, the "Bees" look good enough on paper to give almost any team a battle.

Sammy Longert, one of the best bets for a Varsity win in the coming Intercollegiate assault, earned a close decision over Freed of Hamilton in the St. Agnes Club tourney last night. Sammy reversed the verdict gained over him by the same man some time ago. It will certainly be a big surprise if the clever Longert does not come through and win the 175 pound title for the Blues Saturday night. It will take a real man to beat him.

The rest of the Blue hopes in the B. W. and F. meet are just putting the finishing touches to their training grinds, although some of the entrants are not decided for one or two of the classes. Ted Fell, Murray Wilton and Longert in the feather, middle and light-heavy classes respectively, look like the pick of the squad to date among the boxers. The lightweight, bantam and welter entries are still doubtful and will not be decided till later.

INTERCOLLEGIATES WIN FAST GAME

Varsity Intercollegiate Basketballers Defeat Intermediates by 31-21

CITY LEAGUE GAME

Varsity intercollegiate basketball team defeated the intermediates by a score of 31-21 in a city league basketball game at U.T.S. gym last night. The game was an exhibition of fast basketball, featured by close checking and smart combination.

The intercollegiates had the edge in the first period, coming out on the long end of a 16-8 score. The play was closer in the second half, with the intermediates working hard all the way. Pat Palmer was moved to the forward line and with this change the intermediates succeeded in coming within 5 points of the intercollegiates. With 3 minutes to go the score was 26-21 for the seniors, and then they broke away to score 3 baskets.

Eleanor Sedgewick was Varsity's high scorer with 12 points to her credit, and Wilma Hazlett was a close second, accounting for 9 points. Jean Allen was good on the defence.

KNOX DOWN FORESTRY IN INTERFACULTY BALL

The Knox baseball team defeated a short-handed Forestry team in an interfaculty fixture last night in the big gym by 11-2.

The Wood-cutters played three men short and provided little opposition to the Purple and White. Bush pitched a nice game for Knox and was well supported in the field.

Knox—Wilson, Caslor, Adie, Weir, McGinn, Heddon, Knowles, Bush, McDermid.

Forestry—Howard, Acheson, Townson, Patterson, Choate, Bier, Jackson and Flatt.

Vic Quinlan scored 9 points for the intermediates and Mary Stewart 8. Beth Jenkins turned in an excellent game on defence.

Varsity Intercollegiates—Forwards, Wilma Hazlett (9) and Louise Crouch (3); side centre, Eleanor Sedgewick (12); centre, Loretto McGarry; defence, Jean Allen and Eleanor Wallace; subs, Sally Ballard (7) and Ben Longley.

Varsity Intermediates—Forwards, Vic Quinlan (9) and Mary Stewart (8); side centre, Bessie Lowry (2); centre, Pat Palmer (2); defence, Beth Jenkins and Grace Gristwood; subs, Hilda Layman, Pat McLean and Margery Wright.

THREE CORNERED TIE IS CREATED

from the sticks of the Marlboro sharp shooters after they had worked their way around the Varsity defence. Alex Levinsky apparently decided to go easy on the puck-chasers from his alma mater and did not hand out the usual stiff bodychecks for which he is noted.

The first period was a tame session with no decided advantage to either squad, but the Blues opened up in the second frame and taking Varsity unawares, ran in three quick goals, Thoms scoring two on lone efforts while Gracie counted on a smart pass from Radke. Levinsky made several rushes the length of the ice and finally drove a long shot in which gave Ames no chance at all and before Varsity could recover had rounded the defence on the face-off to push the puck into the net again. Stewart's first goal came after a minute and a half of play in the last period when Smilie carried the puck down the boards and passed to the Blue centre, who promptly drilled the puck into the net. Again ten minutes later Stewart got possession of the puck at the blue line, rounded the defence and sent the rubber into the corner, giving Harris no chance to save.

Although Stewart featured the Varsity attack with his two goals, Lenahan, Smilie and May never gave up trying, their rushes and combination plays being a continual worry to the Blues' defence. For the winners, the forward line of Gracie, Thoms and Davey had their famous rushes working to perfection, while Levinsky and Radke played a good game on the defence.

Varsity—Goal, Ames; forwards, Ferguson and Lenahan; centre, Stewart; defence, Dewar and Smilie; subs, Leake, Bennett and May.

The Table Round

Nationalism and History

Recent press despatches indicate that Il Duce is making a violent effort to Italianize history. Text books which are now being introduced into Italian elementary schools portray the whole history of the world as an unimportant adjunct to the history of Italy. For example, the outcome of the great war was decided, so the histories have it, by certain battles which took place on the Austro-Italian frontier, and the battlefields of Flanders assume the status of minor theatres of war. All of which is decidedly hard on truth, but well calculated to arouse a militant nationalism.

This relation of history and national ambition in the elementary schools is by no means a new one. The republic to the south of us is blessed with an astounding number of people who are entirely ignorant of world affairs as a result of the same system, and it is by no means dead yet. When a racketeering mayorality candidate can be elected on the strength of a hatred of King George there is something lacking in public education.

Canada is by no means above criticism in this regard, but of recent years there has been considerable improvement in the attitude of our educational authorities, and we may reasonably claim that our people are, on the whole, much better informed than their southern neighbours. But unless nationalism disappears entirely it is very doubtful that we will ever have unbiased tuition of history in our elementary schools.

Lynd on Criticism

Writing in John o' London's Weekly of February 7th, Robert Lynd attempts to solve the perennial question, "What is wrong with modern criticism?" Admittedly he does not succeed, but he hits upon some interesting aspects of the question. This is his dictum:

"The real vice of criticism, indeed, is not the toleration of books of a rubbishy but harmless kind, but the praise of books of a pretentious kind. These he must measure by a severer standard. These attempts to deceive the reader into the belief that they are works of art, profound studies of psychology, and so forth; and it is the critic's duty to make it clear that they are not what they seem and to expose them as the species of solemn humbug they really are. Far more critics fail through being unable to distinguish between a real masterpiece and an imitation masterpiece than through an easy going toleration of readable rubbish."

That of the 3600 students at the University of Sofia, Bulgaria, 52 per cent. are tubercular and one-sixth are forced to live and work in garrets and cellars; that in South Africa no dark-skinned student is permitted to work for a medical degree with the result that in all the country there are only five or six native medical doctors; that the horizons of a majority of Vienna students are completely hemmed in by nationalistic political creeds; these are a few of the little-known conditions with which foreign students are faced, and which International Student Service, the I.S.S., is working to rectify.

I.S.S. is holding its annual campaign for funds to carry on its work this week with a university tag-day on Friday. During the week, addresses are being given by Dr. Walter Kotschnig, its secretary, to the men and women, outlining present student conditions in Europe and the aims which lie before I.S.S. Its purpose is mainly to aid needy students throughout the world by promoting self-help and co-operative enterprise, and also to encourage mutual understanding between students of various races and religions throughout the world.

Calls upon the organization's resources come in from every quarter of the globe. From Dresden, in Central Europe, from Wales, from India and from China come appeals from needy students, appeals which must be answered with loans, individual scholarships or advice and education which will teach them to maintain themselves by their own efforts. To meet these and other demands, I.S.S. has an annual budget of over $100,000.

but They Persist in Making Noise

NOT ONLY FRESHIES

Varsity women who frequent the libraries on the campus agree with a recent editorial in "The Varsity" in denouncing free speech in the sanctums of study. Not only the buzz of the odd conversation, but the slapping of books and squeaky chairs hinder the studious. "The time I went to the university library I discovered, from the conversations buzzing around that everyone had forgotten that brevity is the soul of wit," stated Betty Doyle, IV Household Science.

Marj Tucker, IV Vic, admitted: "When I'm at the university reading room, I help make the noise, but when I want to study I go to the Seminar," while another Vic junior declared her preference for the Victoria library to the university one.

The president of first year U.C., Jean Hummsett, thinks the blame should be shared with the upper years. "It isn't only the first year that makes a noise in the library. The senior years who should set us a good example make quite as much noise as we do."

Professor Brown Speaks

The U. of T. Psychology Club held a delightful dinner party on Monday evening. E. K. Brown of the department of English, U.C., spoke on "Psychology and the Literary Critic", pointing out that a deeper study by psychologists of the aesthetic emotion would be an invaluable aid to the literary critic.

Keen interest was shown by the bombardment of questions. Discussion had to be cut short to bring a most profitable and enjoyable evening to a close.

NO TRUE CO-EDUCATION

As a result of the move that certain Oxford men have taken to exclude women entirely from any connection whatever with their university, "The Varsity" sent a reporter among the men of Hart House yesterday to find out the feelings of the following opinions on the subject of co-education in general were gleaned: men here on the subject. The

"I don't think that there is any improvement in these days of co-education from the good old days of 30 years ago," said one third year School man, "as I believe there has been an increase in the ratio of the consumption of whiskey to beer. This is a very serious state of affairs, and it should be looked into," he said.

D. T. McKerracher, III Meds, said that he believed Knute Rockne was right when he ascribed the athletic success of Notre Dame to the complete absence of women from that institution.

PLACE PATRIOTISM BEFORE THE TRUTH

The majority of students agree with "G.G.B.", who wrote in yesterday's "Varsity" under "Table Round", that Canadian high school text books are biased towards Canadian patriotism, often placing it before truth.

When approached by "The Varsity" in this regard Earl Lautenslager, IV Modern History, stated: "I feel they are. I have seen a little of both American and Canadian and unfortunately they are both biased by their own prejudices. Those that I have seen of our own are quite as bad as theirs."

Parking Paradise of Enamoured Invaded By Residence Puritans

The police of the university are receiving splendid support from the men living in residence in their campaign to eliminate promiscuous necking in cars parked around the precincts of this institute of learning. A report in the issue of "The Varsity" for Tuesday told that the men of North House, university residence, ably assisted Col. LePan by shouting at a clandestine parked car outside their windows and finally succeeded in driving them away.

Yesterday afternoon "The Varsity" went on a tour of the houses of residence around the campus to learn how the other men who "live in" treat the situation. At the university residences there seemed to be an exceptional lack of interest in the family hearth, for not a solitary undergraduate appeared in ten minutes. The quadrangle formed by East House, South House and North House, seemed in the eyes of "The Varsity" an

Week

The elections for the standing committees of Hart House, the House, Hall, Library, Music, Billiard and Sketch Committees, will take place by ballot in Hart House on Wednesday, 4th March. Nominations will be accepted from 9 a.m. on Friday next, 20th February, until 6 p.m. on Wednesday, 25th February. Nomination forms, which must be completed with the name, address and signature of the nominee, as well as of his mover and seconder, can now be obtained at the Warden's office. Names will appear on the ballot paper in order of the receipt of nominations at the Warden's office. No member may hand in more than one nomination form at a time.

Nominations for the Camera and Squash Raquets Committees will be received within the same period as those for the other committees and the elections will be held at a meeting of all those interested in the activities of these two committees in Hart House on Thursday, 5th March.

The elections will be held on the same system as last year. With a view to giving the smaller faculties and colleges a chance of representation on the committees, the candidate from each faculty or college receiving the highest number of votes (provided

Mill Building in Fall

"The Mill building may not be entirely completed until next fall," replied Prof. F. C. Dyer of the Department of Mining, to "The Varsity's" query concerning the progress of the work on it. "Although the walls and floors are there, little else is yet done, temporary lights and water piping being used until permanent fixtures can be installed. The ore dressing laboratory is in operation but even it is not nearly finished. It is to be somewhat larger than it formerly was."

"The first and second floors are to be devoted to ore dressing, the fourth for the assaying laboratories now in the Mining Building, while provision will be made throughout for study rooms, libraries and rooms for special research. The basement is to be used for the storage of the ores used in the experimental work."

"We are trying to give the women an education in eating," Miss J. Barber, the dietitian at the Women's Union said. "Anything new that comes on the market we try, for instance that soup cockade which everyone had heard about but never tasted." Miss Barber also explained that individual attention was paid to each diner and that those who are not a normal weight are told what things they should eat.

Pastry is taboo and meat almost is at Wymilwood "The Varsity" was told by Miss Van Allan, the dietitian. "I try to keep meals from repeating themselves, and I have never heard any complaints, although I cannot tell what the girls say of them behind my back," Miss Van Allan explained, saying that students generally get tired of meals at this time of year. "We do not try to influence the girls in what they eat, but put a well balanced meal before them and they choose what they want. Of course as all the delicate women are sent to Annesley Hall we have only the healthy normal ones to deal with."

Bremmer, in agony, ran from the supply room in the organic chemistry department for first-aid treatment. Another assistant, finding a small bottle of grain alcohol and oils inadequate to counteract the bromide, and not knowing the kind of liquid it was, poured water on Bremmer.

Windsor Ties Game in Final Period of Play When Patterson Tallies

Special to "The Varsity",
By DeC. H. Rayner

Windsor, Ont. Feb. 17.—After holding the lead until the last four minutes of play, the University of Toronto Senior "B" hockey team tied the Windsor O.H.A. senior hopefuls at one all, in the first game of the senior "B" playoffs at the Arena here to-night. A goal scored by Patterson on a pass from Foot in a scramble in front of the Varsity net with only a few moments to go took victory from the grasp of the Blue and White team, and means that the Blue and the Border squads enter the game at the Varsity Arena on Friday with an equal chance to win.

Except for occasional flashes of brilliant play the game to-night was a listless demonstration of the ice sport, as heavy ice and close checking made fast action out of the question for both teams. The stellar work of LeBarre in the Blue and White net was the high point of the game, and he stopped more than one shot that looked well nigh impossible. The strong defensive play of the Varsity Bees and the smooth style of combination that their two forward lines played gave Coach Doc Smylie's team the lead on the play most of the way through the game. The heavy defence of the Windsor seniors upset many Blue attacks, and when the Border boys began to function around the Varsity net towards the close of the game they made the Varsity goalie prove his worth.

WELL-KNDWN RABBI EMPHASIZES PEACE

Eisendrath Stresses Value of Peace in Speech on Progress

WAR IS GREAT LOSS

"I believe in peace," was the many times reiterated reply which Rabbi Eisendrath made to the questions put to him by students regarding the pacifist policy which he was urging at Miss Dorothy Kilpatrick's open tea at the Women's Union yesterday afternoon.

Speaking on "Progress", Rabbi Eisendrath stressed peace as the one essential without which all other efforts to progress would be futile.

"The point of view generally taken regarding existing evils," he declared, "is that mankind is in the position of a dog barking at a relentless and ruthless Niagara, helpless to stay the waters or do anything tangible and creative to remedy existing evils."

This feeling of inferiority and incapacity he considers, is a wholly fallacious viewpoint. It lies in our power to change things as we will. Poverty, which, because it has always existed, we consider as inevitable, is unnecessary. Conditions have changed and where formerly we had more mouths to feed and society living on a margin of deficit, to-day we control production and are producing more than enough food for all. We live on a margin of surplus and yet one-third of the world's population is starving.

To the question of what was to be done in self-defence against possible

CALLED SOCIAL SUICIDE

Ohio State U.—"Compulsory military training is a futile philosophy of despair, and military science, as the profession of war must, in the nature of the case, be a single-minded profession taught by army officers, necessarily prejudiced by the limits and philosophy of their own profession," said J. Huntley Dupre, junior dean of the College of Arts, when he addressed the members of the Sophomore "Y" Council recently.

Mr. Dupre declared that, besides being a social suicide, compulsory military training is a bore to the student, and since this is a free university, a student ought to be allowed to choose whether he will be bored or not.

RIGOR MORTIS

It is rumoured that a daily newspaper in a small city not far from Toronto is about to find itself on the financial rocks and cease publication. This particular newspaper is the sole survivor of a day when the same small city had two flourishing dailies and a population half the present figure. To-day the city boasts some 25,000 persons, the majority of whom represent families subscribing to one or more of the quartet of Toronto dailies. The local rag must go, because it no longer has a circulation and because it is now considered completely moribund as an advertising medium by national advertisers.

This case is typical of the gradual passing of the small town newspaper as an institution.

There is another small provincial city, not more than seventy miles from Toronto, which once boasted four thriving newspapers, each alive and literally burning with the competition which existed. There was a lot of plain speaking in the columns of the four papers in those days. The gentlemen of the press weren't missing any bets. There were live editorial pages, and there were editors who were not afraid to say something. The war saw the amalgamation of two of the papers. The post-war depression saw the ruin of one. A few years ago outside pressure had become so great that the stronger of the two survivors ate up the weaker—and then, in the language of the nursery rhyme, there was one.

To-day there is one newspaper in this particular small industrial centre. It reports local afternoon teas, bridge parties, births, marriages and deaths. It runs long and burning columns on the words of wisdom drooled across the stiff napery at service club luncheons. Its editorial page is stiff and cold in the calm serenity of death. The rural section of its area has now been captured by the high-pressure subscription agents of one of the Toronto evening journals. Its editor is growing haggard and wan as he shivers in the threatening shadow of his major advertisers.

With almost no exceptions to-day finds that the only newspapers in Ontario which are in a position to show any signs of editorial life exist in Toronto, the largest city. It is not exactly a cheerful observation. We have four papers. We have The Mail and Empire, which is a newspaper and nothing more. We have The Globe, which is no longer a newspaper. We have The Evening Telegram, which never was a newspaper, but a block-party. We have The Toronto Daily Star, which with admirable cynicism makes no pretence of being a newspaper.

What spasmodic evidences of editorial virility we are afforded, usually give rise only to the fervent wish that they had been still-born.

A VOICE CRYING IN THE WILDERNESS

"It would be interesting to know, says The New Liskeard Speaker, referring to the 'free speech' letter of the 'sixty-eight professors' who wrote that manifesto, and how many of those who signed it are foreigners. Such is the thought in one part of the country where the alliance between Bolshevist 'free speech' and the foreign element is a matter of common knowledge."

The above gem of purest ray serene is gleaned from the editorial page of The Globe, that doughty warrior. Pueritia in excelsis...

But, after all, something must be done about these here, now, furriers. Free speech is all right. It's a fine thing. It's Christian and British. But it should be confined exclusively to Christians and fine, upstanding, one hundred per cent, red-blooded Brits. Or perhaps not red-blooded—just fine and upstanding and one hundred per cent. Free speech is a fine thing. But not "free speech". There's Bolshevists and furriers lurkin' in them that quotation marks.

And as for these sixty-eight professors, let them form in humble line up to the front door of the eminent New Liskeard Speaker, with suppliant mortar-boards in one hand and birth certificates in the other.

Such is the thought. . .

Art, Music and Drama

Organ Recital

An organ program that includes a number by Bach and a sonata by Rheinberger is reasonably sure to be well received by the average audience, in the opinion of this writer. After hearing Dr. T. J. Crawford, organist at St. Paul's, play Carl Piutti's "Finale from the G minor Sonata", at Convocation Hall yesterday afternoon, one might for a moment include that, too, in the above statement.

Bach has never been equalled in choral preludes for grandeur and dignity, and the two played yesterday have the characteristic simple seriousness, that convinces the hearer of the deeply religious source. The Adagio and Finale from Rheinberger's little known sonata in F sharp was well done by Dr. Crawford. The scherzo movement and the majestic finale stood out especially.

Running passages with supporting chords seems characteristic of the Prelude and Fugue of Buxtehude. The lack of coherency and of the fixed laws that distinguish the later prelude and fugue forms, was escaped very nicely by the organist.

Dr. Crawford's own composition, "An Evening Melody", illustrating some particular organ stops, received abundant applause from the audience. It was interesting to note Dr. Crawford's treatment of Karg-Elert's

"Harmonies du Soir". Picturesque scenic painting was the outcome of an application of Debussy's methods to the organ, in the use of old modes and the whole-tone scale and a definite avoidance of conventional progressions.

The program ended on a high point in the Piutti number. Dr. Crawford's rendition of this rather dry and academic piece was really remarkable, especially in the pedals.

M.C. Players' Guild

The only Pierrot play, and indeed the only play of a fantastic nature to be presented at the Guild this year, will be seen this afternoon under the direction of Miss M. E. Watts. This is James Mahoney's The Mourner (not The Moon as announced elsewhere), a play in which charm of conception and of line is united with amusing tricks of characterization to merge into an originally handled ending. Though it retains the attractive features of the traditional Pierrot play and the ageless flavour of the humour, reference and technique gain greatly by a subtle modernization.

The roles are being taken by Jim Watts, Betty Holland, Dee Livesay, Jocelyn Moore, Jim Agar and Colin Jarvis.

Possibly the Stadium officials could use the information too.

If the Duke of Devonshire ever comes to Toronto he'd better bring snow-shoes and waders.

We have another contribution: BY CUSPID! He clasped her tender cubiform In his rectangular embrace, He gazed on her rhomboidal charm With passionate, prismatic face, He fondled her trisecting locks And with a sound like tearing strips From off a trapezoidal box He kissed her squarely on the lips. —Napoleon

We thought of calling that A Voice from the Tomb, but in view of the circumstances surrounding the author's demise, we feared it might be a sensitive subject tomb.

It is a fact which has long been concealed from the public, but we must disclose the truth at all costs.

Napoleon died from drinking Hart House Soup, Burwash Prunes, Trinity Tapioca and other Knoxious concoctions.

All right, Keeper, we'll go quietly.

As a matter of fact, we are crazy. Ask Pansy.

Winky tells us he's been too busy to write a Cat lately because he's starting a fund to buy Pansy a one-way ticket to Siberia.

We suggest he make it Dresden, China.

That's where the people are all Dresden funny costumes.

I bet China my way about there, too.

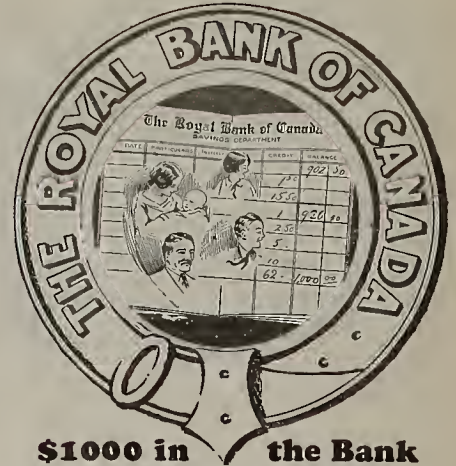

We always were cosmopolitan, ever since the summer we sold magazines in Weston.

The next time you hear from Winky, you'll know we're on our way to Dresden.

With Pansy! —Chaz.

WINDSOR TIES SENIOR "BEES" 1-1 IN FIRST OF PLAY-DOWNS

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

The intermediate basketball game with Margaret Eaton will be played at 5 o'clock at the M.E.S. gym. The intermediates played an excellent game against the seniors on Monday night, and should put up a great battle against the M.E.S. outfit tonight.

The University College swimming meet takes place to-night at U.T.S. at 8 o'clock. There should be lots of competition and some very good swimming. Betty Edwards who holds a large number of Ontario and Dominion titles, should be an outstanding performer, and there are plenty of others of ability to make the meet an interesting one.

Miss Phyllis Griffiths, who is well-known in university and city basketball circles as a capable player and referee, has definitely accepted an invitation to officiate as one of the two referees at the intercollegiate basketball tournament in Kingston on the 27th and 28th of this month. The other official will be from Brantford.

WIN BY NATIONALS MAKES SERIES TIE

Sea Fleas Barge Into Four-Cornered Tie for Lead

PLAYOFF ANNOUNCED

Nationals' victory over Kitchener last night created the long-anticipated four-cornered tie for first place in the O.H.A. senior "A" series and now Port Colborne, Hamilton, Nationals and Marlboros will battle for the title. Varsity finished the season with only two victories but it must be remembered that this year has been the most successful in senior amateur hockey from the standpoint of competition since the famous Varsity Grads dominated hockey in Canada, and Varsity have been up against the finest amateur teams in Ontario in their group this season. Several of their games were lost by one-goal margins and Jack Porter's pucksters are deserving of every credit for the showing they did make.

Secretary Hewitt of the O.H.A. has made the draw for the playoffs and as a result of the draw, Marlboros meet Port Colborne in home-and-home games and Hamilton tackle Nationals. The winning teams in the two series of games will meet in the finals. The schedule is as follows:

Friday, Feb. 20—Marlboros at Port Colborne; Hamilton at Nationals.
Tuesday, Feb. 24—Port Colborne at Marlboros; Nationals at Hamilton.

FINAL STANDING

	P.	W.	L.	Pts.
Port Colborne	10	7	3	14
Hamilton	10	7	3	14
Nationals	10	7	3	14
Marlboros	10	7	3	14
Varsity	10	2	8	4
Kitchener	10	0	10	0

ADAMS APPROACHES MARK IN CENTURY

U.C. Clinches Championship With All Points in Mile Relay

DORE SHOWS SPEED

By taking all the points in the mile relay and one point in the 100 yard dash, U.C. practically assured themselves of the championship at the fourth session of the indoor intercollegiate track meet, held yesterday in Hart House.

Ralph Adams came within a fifth of a second of the indoor intercollegiate record in winning the 100 yard dash and the first U.C. team made very good time in the mile relay.

Dore, Dents, Brooks, U.C.; and Smith, S.P.S., tied for second place in the 100 yard dash. When they re-ran the race it was found that Dore had equalled the mark set up by Adams in winning the event. This mark was not considered in the final standing.

The final meeting of the indoor meet will be held next Tuesday when the shot putt, pole vault and standing high jump will take place.

RESULTS

100 yard dash—1st, Adams, School; 2nd, Dore, Dents; 3rd, Brooks, U.C. Time—10 4-5.

Mile Relay—1st, U.C.; 2nd, U.C. Time—3:47.

Standing Broad Jump—1st, Lealie, School; 2nd, Adams, School; 3rd, Dore, Dents. Distance—9' 1-2".

LEAGUE LEADERS DEFEAT JUNIOR U.C. CAGERS

Victoria Pile Up Lead Against Weaker Team and Win Handily

Junior Victoria vanquished Junior U.C. in an intercollegiate basketball fixture yesterday afternoon in Hart House to the tune of 27-16.

Although Vic had already cinched the group they again trounced the University College team handily. Starting off well for a change Vic piled up a big lead and at the same time held U.C. scoreless till after half time when the score stood 17-0.

In the second stanza Vic slackened off with the game already in the bag, and U.C. netted sixteen points before the game ended. The final score was 27-16 for Vic.

Junior Vic—Vinnels, Morrow, Ford, Wood, Ferguson, McCaig, Read, R. Bates, J. Bates, and Misenar.

Junior U.C.—Koretsky, MacLean, Tindale, Maer, Skilling, Schuch, Agnew, Scott, and Fowell.

"Co-education as at present does not mean a thing. At present students are almost afraid to ask members of the opposite sex for information in class. I went to a country school where my idea of true co-education was in effect, and there was no self-consciousness between boys and girls, and then I came to the city, and Jarvis Collegiate and the stilted prudery of the sexual segregation there made me sick," said one second year Vic man.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By T. A. F.

Well, the "Bees" and Windsor failed to arrive at any conclusion last night and played to a one-all deadlock. What a game the one here on Friday night should be! Reports state that the slow ice at the Border City made the contest listless at times. The teams must be fairly evenly matched and when they step out onto Ross Workman's sheet of frozen water on Friday there should be plenty of action.

The Varsity entry in the welterweight boxing class for the Intercollegiate tourney was decided yesterday as the result of a neat little bout between Johnny Keith, who is more familiar to us when he is breaking up some line play in a football game and Hugh Rapsey of Trinity. Rapsey came out on top in a slug-fest and got the decision. Keith is new to the mitt game and has had little more than a week to get into shape, but he tore in right from the start and showed a great desire to mix matters. He made up for a lack of science by aggressiveness, but Rapsey who is much the better boxer outclassed him and weathered some heavy punching. Neither man was any too fresh at the finish and one good shot in the last round would have ended it either way. Hugh is facing a tough assignment in the Intercollegiate, as Porteous, the champion who represents McGill is back better than ever this year.

Field gets the job of looking after the flyweight class and he will also have plenty of opposition. Kussner of McGill, defending title-holder, will be hard to beat. It should be a real bout if the two meet in the final. However, Grant Baker of Queen's is somewhat of a dark horse and may pull a surprise on both of them.

The loss of Jack Rapsey, who is unable to compete owing to a broken nose, weakens the Blue chances in the 118 pound division. However, McKay, who gave Field some real tussles in the 112, is stepping up a notch and should be able to give a good account of himself. He won a nice bout from Roy yesterday with a strong finish.

Eddie Dore, Dental sprint star, is having some tough luck in the indoor track this season. At one of the first meets of the year he ran the 50 yards dash in the same time as the winner when he had to re-run his event to break a tie and yesterday the same thing occurred in the 100 yards dash when he was tied with two others for second place and in the run-off equalled Ralph Adams' time.

TWO WINNERS DECLARED

Two group winners have been declared in the intercollegiate basketball series, although the schedules have not yet been completed. In Group II, Junior Victoria have three victories against no defeats to their credit and cannot lose. St. Mike's are also undefeated to date and are conceded first place in Group V. Wycliffe have secured two games from Graduate Studies in Group VII, but the latter can tie it up by winning the remaining games.

U.C. SENIORS CINCH GROUP IN FACULTY BASEBALL

University College seniors made sure of their group title by easily defeating Graduate Studies 14 to 1 in an intercollegiate baseball game played yesterday at Hart House. Behind remarkable pitching the U.C. batsmen pounded out 18 hits in five innings. Herbie Moran in the U.C. box, showed excellent control and plenty of speed in striking out 12 men and allowing only 4 hits. Upbrech led the U.C. men at bat with four hits in as many times at bat. Caldecott and Moran each scored three hits and Doherty hit a home run in the fourth with no one on the bases. For the losers, Musgrave secured two hits and scored their only run in the last inning.

BERRY ADDRESSES CHEMIST'S CLUB

Engineering was the speaker.

Dr. Berry was the first graduate of S.P.S. to obtain the degree of Ph.D. He secured this through post graduate work in the School of Hygiene.

Speaking on "Public Health Engineering," he outlined the part played by engineers in this work. This department was organized chiefly under the supervision of medical men, but since it is now devoted almost entirely to the prevention of disease rather than its cure, the engineer has also been called upon. "The valuable basic training," stated Dr. Berry, "which technical graduates receive when supplemented by a knowledge of biology, biochemistry, etc., renders him a very useful public health official."

Dr. Berry then outlined the organization of the Public Health Commission, pointing out the numerous openings for technical graduates. He stated that in that department, university graduates only are employed, a large majority of which come from Toronto.

Correspondence Wants Inquiry

Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

A rumour has reached my ears to the effect that the minor staff of Hart House are being inadequately remunerated for the length of time spent on duty. The wages paid, according to my informant, seem very poor indeed—unless some other compensation is allowed to offset the discrepancy (and we are told that tipping is taboo).

I should not like to criticize the powers that be unless I was assured that the rumour was well founded. Might "The Varsity" enquire into the matter? Is it true that waitresses in the Great Hall are being paid only $12.00 per week? Or that men with families do fifty to sixty hours' service for $21.00 weekly? If an unfair condition does exist due to a shortage of funds I feel sure that there are many conscientious men at Varsity who would pay an increased Hart House fee rather than have it continue. At any rate, "The Varsity" would do a good service by investigating and silencing the rumour, if false, but raising Cain if the occasion demands it.

VARITY AND WINDSOR PLAY ONE-ALL TIE GAME

Williams led the offensive tactics of the Blue Bees in the first few moments of the game, and succeeded in beating the Black and White defences several times before they began their heavy checking. The first score came after three minutes of play, when Conn was lucky to slide a shot past Tice for Varsity's lone counter. The shot was made from out in front of the blue line, and the puck bounced just in front of the Windsor goalie before it rolled between his legs to the back of the net. The Varsity forwards kept him busy for the remainder of the period, but without making any of their shots too dangerous. The Blue team had the edge on the play all through the initial period, with the Border team only getting one close shot on the Varsity net.

After the bell the Windsor seniors set out to make things interesting, and led by Water and Robson, their forward line swept down the ice time and time again. Only the neat checking of Williams and Robinson behind the blue line kept them from doing any more than threaten the Varsity goalie. After seven minutes of play Anderson shot from in close to flash the red light, but the referee overruled the decision of the goal umpire when LeBarb protested that the rubber hadn't passed him. Robson had the fans on their feet in the last two minutes of the period when he rounded the net and took a shot at the Blue goal, but LeBarb beat him to it.

In the final frame both the Bees and the Border team worked hard for goals but only after sixteen minutes of play did the score come which tied the teams. In a scramble in front of the net Patterson took the rubber from Foot when the latter picked up a rebound and bulged the twine. Two minutes later McPherson beat Tice on a pass from Cunningham, but the referee called the pass offside and called back the play.

For the Varsity Bees the second string forward line, Clute, McPherson and Hendry, played a fast and effective style of combination and appeared to have the edge on the other three forwards. Williams, on the defence line, broke up a lot of plays, and was ably assisted by Robinson. LeBarb with his brilliant saves, was the star of the game. For the locals, Robson, Patterson and Foot played well, although the Border team was slow in getting under way, and has been seen to play more effective hockey than the brand they exhibited to-night.

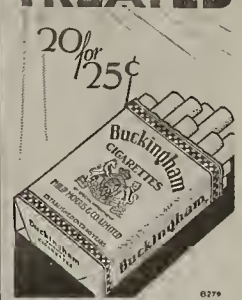

Varsity Senior B—Goal, LeBarb; defence, Robinson, Williams; centre, Clute; wings, Conn, Charlebois; subs, McPherson, Hendry and Cunningham. Windsor Seniors—Goal, Tice; defence, Foot, Robson; centre, Anderson; wings, Fitzgerald, Walker; subs, Irwin, Patterson and Kennedy.

Referee—Tom Munro, London.

First Period
1.—Varsity—Conn 3.00
No scoring.
Second Period
2.—Windsor—Patterson (Foot) 16.00

If lectures were broadcast it would help the people who miss classes on account of illness a good deal. Of course, it would encourage staying off the hill. This might be corrected by having a question about the lecture given during some unannounced part of it. Those who expected to claim radio listening attendance credit would be expected to mail an answer so that it would be postmarked shortly after the lecture ended.—University of Wisconsin.

Taking the last great war as an example, he stated that if we had followed a policy of non-resistance the worst that could possibly have happened would have been to have German rule to-day. This would have been preferable to the loss which we experienced in men, money, economic disturbances and the growth of a spirit of militarism and hatred.

WHERE NATURE DWARFS MAN

Visitors to Jasper National Park, in the heart of the Canadian Rockies, stand close to the very act of creation. In this beautiful area, life once was eradicated. Convulsion seized the land and reared rock upward to the skies. Out of the welter came the glorious peaks to defy ice and time, their rugged beauty a magnetic attraction for thousands of sight-seers. EMPLOYEES UNDERPAID

Relevant to recent charges that employees of Hart House are drastically underpaid, and that the meals served daily in the Great Hall do not measure up to satisfactory standards, the editor of "The Varsity", has received the following strongly-worded letter. The author of the letter has communicated his identity to the editor of "The Varsity", and his request that it be held in confidence has been respected.

The text of the letter follows:

Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

I was very much interested in the letter published yesterday re the wages paid Hart House employees, since I didn't dream the students considered such matters within the realm of their curiosity. However, it was grossly inaccurate in that the $21.00 a week men are rather the exception; $21.00 every two weeks would be nearer the figure for most of the employees—

ROMEO OFTEN HITCH-HIKES

University of Florida students travel 29,000 miles a year and spent at least $1600 to go see their fair ladies at the Florida State College at Tallahassee.

Records show that at least 50 students travel to Tallahassee each semester. They go to the fair ladies' city at least three times in the course of the semester. That makes 150 trips and twice that, because there are two semesters in the year, is 300 trips. Multiply the 300 by 330, the number of miles from Gainesville to Tallahassee and back, and the total number of miles travelled is 99,000 miles.

This distance is almost four times the distance around the world and almost 28 times the distance from New York to Paris. In covering 99,000 miles the motorist must use up at least 4,950 gallons of gasoline. At an average cost of 23 cents a gallon the motorist would have to pay $1,138.50 for the gasoline. Of this amount, $297 is the state tax on gasoline.

University students spend at least $30 for drinks on the way to Tallahassee.

M'GILL DEFENDING SQUAD

Toronto Boxers, Wrestlers, and Fencers Seek to Regain Lost Laurels

By T. A. Fleming

With both Queen's and McGill bringing strong squads for the Intercollegiate Assault-at-arms, Varsity's B. W. and F. stalwarts have been putting the finishing touches this week to their hard training grind. The Blues have high hopes of regaining the title which they lost to McGill in Montreal last year, but they will have to travel a rocky road before they get back the lost laurels.

Only once every three years are the fans at Toronto favoured with the opportunity of seeing one of the most colourful sporting events of the season, and this year's tourney promises to be one of the most hotly contested for some seasons past. At the 1930 show in Montreal the fans were turned away at the door, and the lucky ones who were able to see the bouts witnessed two nights of stirring battles.

Teddy Fell, Intercollegiate champion at 126 pounds, will again wear the Blue and looks like a sure point winner for the boxing team. Fell is one of the fastest and shiftest boxers at his weight seen in college competition for years past. He packs a punch like a welterweight in each hand and is going better than ever this year.

The return of Sammy Longert to the ring adds another bright prospect to the Varsity hopes. Longert is favoured to carry off the honours in the light-heavy division, although he is stepping up a class in weight.

Murray Wilton, who tips the scales under the 160 pound limit, is one of the cleverest ring artists to represent the university since the famous Jimmy Jackson left, and the Tricolour and McGill entries will probably find him a big stumbling block to the championship.

Field gets the assignment in the fly-weight class and promises to give all and sundry a battle, despite the fact that an ex-champion, in the person

REDUCE MEMBERSHIP OF CUE COMMITTEE

The Board of Stewards announces a change in the number of members of the Billiard Committee of Hart House. The customary quota of ten undergraduate members is to be reduced to six. Instead of two, only one will be elected by the present committee to serve during 1931-32. Therefore five members are to be elected from the candidates at the elections on 4th March. The two-hundred-vote rule will be applied in the case of the Billiard Committee insofar as it is possible.

Candidates for all committees are reminded that permanent election posters may be hung in the main corridor of Hart House after 8 a.m. on Thursday, 26th February. Space may not under any circumstances be reserved by a temporary poster. All posters must be permanent ones and must not exceed 24 by 36 inches in size.

MISTAKE IN LABEL IS ALMOST TRAGIC

Dr. C. H. Best, Demonstrating Drug, Recipient of Overdose

A mistake on a label came near proving fatal to Dr. C. H. Best, Professor of Physiology, in a demonstration research lecture before fourth year B. and M. in the Medical Building yesterday morning. Dr. Best was demonstrating his researches with "Histamine", a physiological drug, the uses of which are not fully known, but which has no bad effects if taken in the right proportions, but after taking an inoculation the doctor was seen to become seriously ill and almost collapsed, holding his hand to his head as if in great pain.

After treatment and a few hours' rest, Dr. Best was quite recovered and showed no ill effects. It was later discovered that the cause of the accident was, that through some error, the prescription was one hundred times as strong as it should have been. It was the intention of Dr. Best, who, with Dr. Banting, won international fame as the discoverer of insulin, to inoculate some of the students with the drug and it was in order to show its perfectly harmless effects that he took the first dose.

IGNORANCE BALKS PEACE MOVEMENTS

Kotschnig Calls for Survey of World Problems by Students

COCOA AND BREAD SYMBOL

"Only a really intelligent knowledge of international problems will form a firm basis for the spirit of friendliness and collaboration in Europe and keep back the strong national feelings that might lead to war," said Dr. Walter Kotschnig, General Secretary of International Students' Service, addressing a noon hour group at the Women's Union.

He told a story of a woman who, not long ago, insisted upon seeing the General Secretary of the League of Nations. She said she thought the League a wonderful society and she wanted to join it. "That," said Dr. Kotschnig, "is symbolic of the student situation in Europe to-day. We have no definite knowledge of conditions outside our own countries."

Life is not easy for the European student. Their incomes are small, ranging from twenty-five dollars a month in Germany to a group of about three hundred in Bulgaria who have only six dollars a month. A large number of them suffer from tuberculosis. These economic and social difficulties are at least partly responsible for the restlessness which prevails among students all over the Continent. This revolutionary mood is expressing itself in extreme political parties, either nationalistic or left wing.

"The outlook does not seem bright," continued Dr. Kotschnig, "when youth is active in extreme policies that are not constructive. But these groups are the noisy sides of student opinion. There is a central group working hard and silently for real understanding between the universities of the world."

This positive central group goes back to 1920 when the World Student Christian Federation began to bring aid to students in Austria.

Special to "The Varsity" by Art Child, Sports Writer, Queen's Journal, Kingston, Ont., Feb. 18.—Queen's again presents the strong boxing and wrestling team which has given the other two universities such strong opposition in the Intercollegiate assault-at-arms in the last few years. With fencing reduced to one point, the Tricolour mentors, Jack Jarvis and Jimmy Bews, consider that the squad from Kingston has more than a chance to annex the title this year. Since the advent of Jack Jarvis, Queen's boxers have been outstanding for their hitting ability and aggressiveness due to superb condition and training, and this year is no exception. The wrestling squad still retains last year's two champions and most of the remainder of the team are veterans who have been out other years due to sickness and ineligibility.

Joe McQuade's shoes will be amply filled this year by Grant Baker, a fly-weight who has speed and science and has won all his bouts this year by the knockout route. There is no need to say much about Bobby Scright, Queen's premier 118 pound fighter, who has won the title for the last two

Connaught Laboratories Work Effectively, and Without Fuss

"No, there are no new important researches going on at present, but we are very busy with our everyday work," "The Varsity" was told yesterday in an interview with one of the assistants at the Connaught Laboratories.

It was further stated that if Premier Henry decided to assist in the fight against cancer as present reports indicate, the Connaught Laboratories would not be affected in any way as they had nothing to do with cancer treatment.

Each year the Laboratories export many kinds of serum, vaccine, antitoxin and insulin to all corners of the earth, from China to Ireland, and from Roumania to Newfoundland. In addition to these services, enough diphtheria toxoid has been distributed by the Laboratories to render immune 700,000 people. Dr. J. G. Fitzgerald, head of the Laboratories, has stated that diphtheria can be brought practically under complete control in any community.

OPEN NOMINATIONS FOR HOUSE BODIES

Forms Will Be Received After the 20th

45 VACANCIES OPEN

Nominations for the six standing committees of Hart House (i.e., Hall Committee, House Committee, Library Committee, Music Committee, Billiard Committee, Sketch Committee) open at 9 a.m. on Friday, 20th February. Nomination forms may now be obtained at the Warden's office but will not be accepted until Friday morning next. Only one nomination may be handed in at a time. Forms must be complete, bearing the signatures of the mover, seconder and nominee.

Nominations for these six committees close at 6 p.m. on Wednesday, 26th February.

Eight members will be elected to each of these committees with the exception of the Billiard Committee to which only five will be elected. Not more than three men, and in the case of the Billiard Committee, two men, from any one faculty or college can serve on a standing committee. No the kitchen help at any rate—and they

CAMPUS OPINIONS CONCUR

That the small town newspaper is gradually being driven out of existence by the advent of the large city newspapers, is the almost unanimous opinion of out-of-town students interviewed by "The Varsity" yesterday. Following up the editorial in yesterday's "Varsity", "The Varsity" interviewed several out-of-town students on the campus and the general opinion was that, though these small newspapers were of some value as to social gossip of a local nature, yet it

OPPORTUNISM

What is the difference between opportunism and preparedness? According to the system of differentiation now in general use, if someone with whom you happen to disagree takes advantage of an opportunity, he is an opportunist; but if a supporter of your own opinions uses the same technique, he is wide awake, alert, and altogether on the job.

Many large organizations urge something akin to opportunism. Boy Scouts are prepared for it. Moralists say solemnly: "Opportunity knocks but once." Advertisements for correspondence schools assure the unsuccessful that the big thing in commercial and professional circles is to be ready for auspicious moments. Biographers tell how the heroes of their countries leaped into the breach, how the names synonymous for opera stars were made because the languishing understudies got their chance while the principals were having sneezing attacks. Quite a famous dramatist once wrote: "There is a tide in the affairs of men—"

But now it seems that we are once more to be disillusioned about one of the pet mottoes on our wall. Emily Post to date would be forced to say, sadly but sternly: "When opportunity knocks at your door, the correct procedure is to say politely, 'I'm so sorry, but you must have come to the wrong house. Try next door.'" To take advantage of the chances offered by a none too generous fortune is to show to a horrified world the depths of your hard, grasping, avaricious nature, your utter ignorance of the first principles of modesty, generosity and selflessness.

Of course, if opportunity happens to knock first at the doors of the righteous critics who denounce the ways of the opportunist, it is a different story. Anybody can see that this is a divine call, to which the favoured one must assent if he would do his duty for a depressed humanity, a significant proof of his true virtue and worth, a forerunner on earth of future reward in heaven. The correct etiquette here is to usher in opportunity with a welcoming smile, and to say: "Certainly this is the right address. What can I do for you?" In such a case it would be blasphemy to call the fortunate one an opportunist; he is a public benefactor, a man of eminent merit, insight and character.

It doesn't depend on the circumstances; it depends on the individual.

TAG DAY

The International Students' Service holds its annual tag day on this campus to-morrow. The work which this organization is doing merits the whole-hearted support of the student body which it has obtained in former years. A résumé of this work among the impoverished students of other lands is all that is necessary to assure the success of to-morrow's effort.

Prospective candidates should bear in mind that members of any committee (either standing or special) who are absent from two consecutive meetings or three meetings in all thereby forfeit their membership on that committee.

Nominations for two of the special committees, the Camera Committee and the Squash Raquets Committee, also open and close on the same dates as do those for the standing committees. Nominees for the Camera Committee must be active members of the Camera Club and nominees for the Squash Raquets Committee must be regular undergraduate squash players. Art, Music and Drama

A.C. Players' Guild

The first light play that the Guild has produced this year, was presented yesterday at the Women's Union under the direction of Miss M. E. Watts. The Mourner, cleverly written by James Mahoney is utterly fantastic and whimsical about such things as stars, the moon and green cheese. It was first intended to present only the main act under the title of The Moon, which would have made it rather slight, but amusing. With the epilogue and "the voice from the audience", in his top hat and cane, objecting with fractious quaverings to the lack of reality, the play takes on a saner aspect, especially when the old man disappears off the stage following the funeral of Pierrot.

The cast was large for so short a play, but on the whole did creditably, portraying the light, unrealistic spirit of the author. Jim Watts herself gave a successful interpretation of Pierrot, listless and bewildered; Betty Holland, as Pierrette, though somewhat unconvincing, and Dorothy Livesay as Columbine, both played up to Pierrot, showing the proper detached spirit. Colin Jarvis as Mephistopheles was very debonaire and Andrew Allan, a "voice from the audience", was excellent. The other members of the cast were Jocelyn Moore and Jim Agar as the father and mother. The stage settings were simple, but effective, especially the ladder up to the moon.

As an afterthought, we would like to remind our friends of the Guild that drama critics are not privileged to express their opinions other than in print. —J.P.M.

would have to work about 150 hours for that. Then can, however, earn 25c an hour overtime if there are any big banquets on. They are probably doing fairly well at that since the alternative is the prospect of starving. Besides, some of them still think they are working for the students, and so their work is enriched by the thanks they don't get from us. They get no other.

Then, sir, allow me a word in regard to the published fact that "all students are perfectly satisfied with the food and drink served in Hart House". I ate in Hart House under the management preceding Mr. Campbell's and I remember the small number who came in to the nearly impossible meals. I remember the shock meals Mr. Campbell suddenly served us and the speed with which everyone knew about it and hurried to enjoy them before the inevitable happened. I remember that at the last Hall Committee meeting of the spring three years ago, the statement was made that Mr. Campbell would have that job as long as he wanted it. Nevertheless he was let go within the week "in order that Hart House Dining Hall could be used to train other such men".

The meals since have been very much worse. Much the same menus are used, but the beans, the macaroni, etc., are unattractive some days. Ask any one of the many residence boys who used to eat three meals a day there and still find it the handiest place. There will be more than 68 of them too.

What good does it do to complain? None. The food is pronounced fit

With the Theatres

Ruth Draper at the Royal

Ruth Draper is coming to town. The Queen of all the devotees of the monologue will be here next week.

Crowded stages, elaborate settings, thousands of props—these fade out of the picture. Ruth Draper, single handed, with scant props and fragments of costumes, tells her stories and draws her characters, for all the world to understand and recognize. Probably no other modern actress so appeals to both the intellect and the emotional imagination of an audience.

Three Women and Mr. Clifford, a three-part monologue which takes over an hour to perform, and is her most famous sketch, will be featured on seven out of her eight programs. Through the eyes of the private secretary, the wife and the friend, the personality and character of an American magnate are etched with penetrating delineation.

Ruth Draper will appear next week at the Royal Alexandra Theatre.

SMALL TOWN DAILY BEING SUPERSEDED

was to the large newspapers that the average public turned to learn the news of the day.

M. A. MacKay, II S.P.S. of Ingersoll, Ont., stated: "Personally I have no use for a small town newspaper. As a rule, it consists mostly of personal gossip and this even applies to towns as high as 20,000 people. The majority of the people are inclined to follow the larger papers, so as to get the political news, while it is yet fresh. One reason why the large town papers cut out the smaller newspapers is because the editorials of the former are written by a higher grade of thinkers and are more to the point."

J. R. Smith, III Trinity, said that in his opinion a small town newspaper was of more harm than good, due to its local gossip. As for himself he was perfectly satisfied with the modern Toronto papers.

by a dietitian and that ends it. You used to be able to go up to the high table with a committee-man friend, where you got more than one glass of milk, extra service and extra dainties. Now even they can't get anything but what's already prepared in the servery.

The only thing left is to eat somewhere else and we're doing that. Note the large number who bring their lunches and eat at the Tuck Shop. Note the large number of campus coffee shops newly opened and thriving greatly. It would certainly be interesting to compare the increased figures of registration with the decreased attendance at Hart House. Meals in a day (not just at the noon rush).

Where does the trouble lie? Can't the dietitian taste or can't the cooks cook? It would be interesting to hear the honest opinion of those who are below stairs. Perhaps a good deal of useful knowledge would be picked up.

Yours sincerely,

FAIR PLAY.

MONTREAL VENUE OF CRUCIAL GAME

Blue Hockeyists go in Search of Intercollegiate Title

LENAHAN INELIGIBLE

Varsity's senior hockey team invades Montreal to-night for the intercollegiate championship tussle with the McGill puckchasers. The teams will enter on even terms, each having scored two goals in the first game here, and a rare old battle should result before the squads skate off the ice. The McGillmen are confident of retaining the title which they won last year for the first time in many seasons, but the Blues also have high hopes of bringing back the lost bacon.

Coach Porter will drop a strong sextet over the boards despite the fact that several of the men are on the injured or sick lists and Lenahan, who has been turning in good efforts in his last appearances, is ineligible owing to the freshman rule. Ames, net-minder extraordinary, will guard the twine, with Smillie and Dewar contributing the stonewall work in front of him. Bill Stewart, brilliant centre-ice star, will patrol the pivot position, flanked by Ferguson and Leake. Bennett, the versatile Billy Bell, and Conn, scoring ace of the "Bees", will form the second string front line. If the Blue defence holds up its end of the work the team may bring back the championship again.

McGill will present part of the stellar crew which is crowding M.A.A.A. for the leadership in the Quebec League. Several of the stars, among them Jack McGill and Crutchfield, are ruled out by the freshman clause, but the remainder of the squad shows plenty of strength. The veteran Powers will look after the Blue sharpshooters and goals will be hard to get.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By T. A. F.

So far this year major Intercollegiate championships have been scarce around Varsity, but we still have two hopes left. To tell the truth neither of these hopes are any too rosy, but since you can't predict the result of any sporting event, no matter how certain it looks, we might walk off with both the senior hockey and the assault titles. We lost these to McGill last year and both will be decided before the end of this week.

The chance that the senior "A" team can down McGill at the Forum to-night is not as remote as might be imagined. McGill did not look as impressive here, when we tied them 2-all, as they were cracked up to be. If the Blue defence can give Doc Ames adequate protection to-night it's a cinch the Redmen will not get many goals. The "T" forwards have shown considerable improvement of late and if they can break the jinx which has been following them when they get in close to the net, they may run in enough goals to carry off the game and the title. The front line men have been backchecking well, which helps to bolster up the defence (the latter not being the strongest in the country by any means), but they have not shown any great scoring punch.

As for the assault which is slated for Hart House on Friday and Saturday nights of this week, we are sure of one thing; no matter who wins the title it will be a great show. Queen's and McGill are bringing an exceptional array of talent this year, and while the Blues are not as strong as they have been in the past, the three colleges should provide enough action between them to satisfy all and sundry for some time. We only get a chance to see the Intercollegiate once every three years, which is about one-third as often as we would like.

On looking over the entries in the boxing, Varsity looks good enough to come across in at least three classes. Longert looks like a good bet in the light-heavy. Sammy has been doing a lot of boxing since he left the Varsity ring two years ago and he is greatly improved. In fact he looks almost good enough to step in with some of the pros. Fell is another practically certain winner. Teddy is king of the featherweights and it will be the biggest surprise of the year if he doesn't add to his string of knockouts this week.

Murray Wilton, who lost an unpopular decision in the 160 pound final last year, should come through this season. Murray is facing some tough opposition, however, and any bout he appears in will be a real battle. The Blues' chances in some of the other mitt classes don't appear quite as good, though. Field should go a long way in the 112, but McKay at the same weight is stepping up into the bantams and will meet a tough man in Seright, the champion from Queen's. In the lightweight division, the great Merve Pever, sensational knockout artist from Queen's, should repeat this year. Pever has a record of twenty K.O.'s in twenty-one fights and is rated one of the best amateurs at the weight in Canada. Porteous of McGill gets the call to retain his laurels in the welter class as does Wilson, also from Montreal, in the heavy. Strachan, the hard-hitting engineer, is entering in Wilson's class despite the fact that he only weighs about 167 pounds.

BETTY EDWARDS SWEEPS BOARD IN U.C. TOURNEY

By virtue of taking seven first places in the University College swimming meet held last night at U.T.S., Betty Edwards, II year, was declared individual champion of U.C. Betty Holton and Adele Statten were the runners-up, tying for second position. Diving honours went to Miss Helen McGibbon, also of second year. All the events were keenly contested, and some of the races were very close.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

The remarkable showing of Betty Edwards at the University College swimming meet last night was the feature of the whole meet. She took first place in every event in which she was entered, and gave a fine exhibition all through.

Miss Edwards holds a number of Dominion and Provincial titles, and is in constant training due to the fact that she competes in aquatic events all winter. The girls who competed against her are to be congratulated on their excellent showing.

Fran Crooks, captain of the intercollegiate hockey team, is recovering slowly from a serious attack of the flu which has kept her out of hockey for over a week. Whether she will be able to make the trip to Kingston is still a matter of doubt. If she is unable to go, the team's chances of coming through with a victory over the Tricolour are considerably reduced.

The team will practice to-day at the Arena, and they will endeavour to round out their plays and strengthen the defence. The squad showed great strength in their win over Aura Lee last Saturday.

Due to a regrettable error, it was stated in this column yesterday that the intermediate basketball team would take on Margaret Eaton yesterday afternoon. The game is scheduled for next Wednesday, the 25th.

of Kussner of McGill, has returned to competition. McKay, actually a fly-weight, is stepping up into the 118 pounders, owing to the loss of Rapsey, and is expected to put up a real fight against the defending title-holder, Seright of Queen's. Strachan, the heavy-hitting light-heavy, has been moved up to the heavy division.

The elder Rapsey gets the call in the welterweight limits as a result of his win over Johnny Keith in the eliminations. Deeks, the best man at the weight in the university, is ineligible. With most of the best light-weights on the injured or sick list, Campbell, a new man, but aggressive and willing, will carry the Varsity standard at 135 pounds.

The wrestlers are right at the top of their form, as their showing against the O.A.C. "starks" in the senior assault indicated. Brownlee and Rundle, at 112 and 118 pounds respectively, look good enough to make the best of the opposition step. The 123 and 134 pound weights will be in the capable hands of Bannister, last year's champion, and McKinnay. Fletcher gets the job of subduing the rival 145 pounders and should acquire himself well, while Eaton, the Meds strong man and university title holder, looks like a winner at 158. Watt, who weighs in at around 174 lbs., is confident that Hoskings of Queen's, present class champion, is going to have more than he can handle. With the giant Newell of O.C.E. entered in the heavy division, Varsity's chances of gaining a much-needed point in this class look exceedingly bright.

They Were Thrown Into Confusion But They Couldn't Throw The Bull

By C. L. Coburn

The climax of the annual game between the Oddfellows and the Volunteer Fire Brigade in Carberry's pasture wasn't really reached till the last half of the ninth inning. A slight commotion, it is true, occurred in the third when one of Carberry's cows swallowed a long boarder with three of the Hose-haulers on base. Again in the fifth, when Porky Parkins, the town butcher and heavyweight champion (even Gallusberg hadn't a heavier man, pound for inch, to boast of) made a home run for the Oddfellows with Carberry's bull giving a helping horn from behind, farmers two miles away decided them that Communists must be holding a riot. The Firemen claimed he couldn't have made it without illegal interference and unconstitutional encouragement. The umpire decided, however, that the encouragement was constitutional enough, as it had certainly affected the runner's constitution. If any of them questioned the bull's right to interfere, he said, they could take it up with said bull in person. The Firemen weren't entirely satisfied. They argued quietly with the umpire about it for a time, but eventually things quieted down a little. They agreed to buy him a new uniform and pay for a medical examination, and the game went on with after inning with the score tied, and no one able to make a run. After the bull took up a permanent position near first base, no one seemed able even to hit the ball. The heat and the excitement were intense. Even in the open it was almost unbearable. Invalids in the crowd were fainting to left and right. Ladies to the right and gentlemen to the left.

Finally, in the last half of the ninth, with two out, the bull lost interest and moved away. Porky Parkins came up to bat. The pitcher wound up. Porky shut his eyes and swung. He heard a sharp crack and the bat fell out of his hands. A minute later he was on first base. The ball was rolling between Mister Bull's hind legs. Porky rested to catch his breath and dashed for second. He reached it and headed for third. The Oddfellows stopped breathing as the bull moved away from the ball. The crowd shouted, "Slide, darn you, slide!" Porky slid.

Next day the papers ran a special item: "Great excitement occurred at the annual baseball match in Carberry's pasture yesterday when Porky Parkins, well-known Rotarian and Oddfellow, slid into what he thought was third base."

Two weeks ago the grapplers invaded Norwich University, one of the strongest New England wrestling strongholds, and returned with a 23-6 victory. Norwood, Lapin and Rollit won their bouts with quick falls, in less than two minutes, while Schlesinger scored a fall after 15 minutes grappling. Norwood is intercollegiate champion at 145 pounds, but Lapin is a newcomer to the squad, and weighs in at 126 pounds. Rollit is McGill's heavyweight performer, and was defeated in the lightweight division last year, but Schlesinger is a newcomer who shows a great deal of promise, in the middleweight.

Wolfe, intercollegiate 112 pound champion, won his bout by decision, but Goffman, lightweight champion, lost his bout by the same route, as did Tedford, the new lightweight. No falls were scored against the Red-men. The last member of the squad is Cohen, who did not make the trip.

The three intercollegiate champions in the boxers' domain, are Wilson, heavyweight; Porteous, welterweight, and Kussner, 112 pound winner in 1929. Porteous has been going great guns this year, and was the only member of the squad to win against the crack New Hampshire University team last week-end, but the other two did not make the trip. Sampson will represent McGill in the 118 pound class for the fourth consecutive year, and is a vastly improved performer.

Dey and Thomas are two freshman boxers, weighing in at 126 and 135 pounds respectively, who will wear the Red and White.

While it is admitted that these two are up against crack performers in Fell of Varsity, and Peever of Queen's, Coach Bert Light feels that he holds the trump cards in these weights. Close battles may be expected.

Veitch will represent McGill in the middleweight class, and is a heavy hitter who has speed to burn. He has only been in the game two years, but was only beaten out in the local college assault by a close decision last year by Trudel. He gave the New Hampshire University champion a close run last week-end in a meet fought at the American college.

"Boomey" Greenblatt, lightweight boxer, should prove to be an outstanding fighter in Toronto this week-end. Greenblatt is a smooth working boxer, plenty of science, and ring generalship. Added to this he is in tip-top condition and ready to make things hum the whole route.

years and is going better than ever. Thomas is an aggressive fighter who has made his mark in intercollegiate bouts. The best at his weight in Canada, Merve Peever should have no trouble in adding to his string of 20 knockouts out of 21 fights. Ab Wilson is a chunky little battler and one of the classiest boxers on the squad. After being out of the fight game for two years, Fred Joliffe has staged a come-back and will take on all comers at 160 pounds. Joliffe is a very cool boxer with an effective pair of hands.

Noted as one of the toughest men on the senior rugby team, How Hamlin is the pick of the Tricolour lightweighters, and has acquired a considerable knowledge of the boxing game during the season. Urquhart, the heavyweight contender, is another of Jack Jarvis' products, who is built on the lines of a tank and whose punch would rock a battleship.

Haughton is the best wrestler that Queen's has, but unfortunately he has been out for the last two years through illness. However, this year he is in first class shape and his science and aggression will make the spectators sit up and take notice. Harry Bateman is a newcomer who has everything that makes a wrestling champion at 126 pounds. Hewitt, a Science junior, has plenty of experience in the mat game behind him. Campbell, the lightweight representative, has wrestled for four years and this year, in the local and outside assaults, has swept everything before him.

Bill and Henry Hosking, at 145 and 174 pounds, are two famous brothers who will make their presence felt in Toronto. Henry was last year's champion and Bill got his name in the papers when he took a fall on Lapointe of O.A.C., an Ontario champion.

Roger Wilson, intercollegiate heavyweight champion, who possesses a terrific wallop in both hands, is in better shape than ever this year, and a better performer in every respect. He is one of McGill's best bets.

"The Three Musketeers" of fencing, Wiggers, McKergow and Harvey-Jellie, who won the title last year in a walk, will again defend their laurels. DeMontigny and Perrault, two less experienced but capable fencers, will complete the squad.

DESIRE WORLD-WIDE UNION OF STUDENTS

Dr. Kotschnig, who was one of the first to receive aid from I.S.S. in the famous years immediately following the war, outlined the need of such an organization in Europe. Its leaders feel that there are university reform movements going on everywhere. Three great maladies in the lives of European and Asiatic universities are being realized; the social isolation of the students, who feel no bond of union with the masses of the people; the narrow nationalism which prevents co-operation and interchange of culture and ideas between students of various races, and an exaggerated specialization and professionalism which can produce only intellectual bigots, with no interests outside their own knowledge and work.

In an effort to remedy these conditions, university reform movements are arising everywhere, and it is the aim of I.S.S. to encourage these movements and direct them toward the best ends. Left to themselves, they tend to discuss change on a nationalistic basis, with little interchange of ideas between races. To offset this, I.S.S. is publishing a book containing the ideas and conceptions of what a university should be as found in various countries.

The middleweight grappler, Langford, is one of these spectacular men who always puts on a bout full of speed and action. Ralph Miller is another intercollegiate champion and has been acting as assistant coach all year. He has been an outstanding performer in all the assaults this season.

JOSHI AVERS INDIAN SYSTEM OF CASTES IS MISINTERPRETED

One May Rise from Caste to Caste as Ability Deserves

LIKE PLATONIC REPUBLIC

East is Cradle of Democracy and West of Monarchy

"There has been a tendency to completely misread the caste system of India," said Professor Joshi of Dartmouth University, speaking at the Physics Building last night on the "Social and Political Aspects of Philosophy in India." Professor Joshi is in Toronto attending the Philosophical Conference which is held every four years.

It was pointed out that certain duties are attached to each group in India in much the same way as in Plato's "Republic." The castes are not entirely closed corporations, but a man may rise from one to the other by his ability and efforts.

The first seed of democracy, went on Prof. Joshi, are to be discovered in the political life of the villages of Russia and India. Absolute government is a western conception. From Alexander the Great to Louis XVI despotism ruled in Europe. But there is in modern democracy no secret which is beyond the grasp of a Hindu. It is taken for granted democracy is the best form of government but the institutions of democracy may not be the best.

There is a hope, as seen in the literature and art of India, that there are enough of the seeds from which democracy springs to make her capable of self-government. But the time has not yet come and may never come when England may leave India. With the active co-operation of Great Britain, India may be led step by step to making a rich contribution to the good of mankind.

New S.A.C. Constitution Receives Caput Approval

"The Caput of the University of Toronto gave their approval to the revised constitution of the S.A.C., with only a few slight verbal changes," stated Dean A. T. DeLury, chairman of the Caput which held a meeting yesterday afternoon to discuss the new constitution drawn up by a special committee of the Joint Executive and passed by all three student councils.

"We really only edited the entire constitution and there were only a few unimportant changes and slight omissions to make for a clearer understanding. There were absolutely no changes in meaning to what was formerly published. It was a quite unanimous decision in adopting the report."

EDITOR SHOULDO COOPERATE

"In this particular instance I have no means of knowing all the relative facts, and I do not feel like commenting upon the merits of 'The Ubysey's' position," said Dr. Cassidy of the Department of Social Science, a graduate of the University of British Columbia, when interviewed yesterday regarding the suspension of the editor of that university's undergraduate newspaper.

"It seems to me, however, that a student paper should have a very considerable freedom. Suppression by university authorities is a very unfortunate thing. At the same time it seems to me that an undergraduate editor should work co-operatively with the authorities."

Professor L. T. Morgan of the Department of Economics, who was at one time a member of the Faculty of the University of British Columbia, was also reticent.

OPENOS ON INDIVIDUAL

The men of this university are exceedingly lacking in opinions about the position which wealth plays in a university education. Only three out of over a score interviewed on this subject by "The Varsity" yesterday had enough courage in their convictions to state their beliefs.

"The question as to whether a poor man can get the most out of the university in social, athletic and literary work depends largely on the individual," stated M. Davison, Vic. "I do not believe that a person with financial worries can profit to the same extent as a person of at least moderate means. The man with financial difficulties may possibly be more aggressive, but again this depends entirely upon the individual."

Committee Approves House Wages and Hours

The Hall Committee of Hart House met yesterday and approved of the hours and wages of employees in the Hall. J. B. Bickersteth, the Warden, refused to tell "The Varsity" with what standards the wages and hours had been compared, saying that he had been requested by the committee to make no statement on the subject.

The official statement of the Hall Committee follows:

The Hall Committee at its regular meeting, having carefully considered the wages and hours of the employees in the Great Hall and having reviewed comparative figures of other similar institutions as far as these are available, is of the opinion that the wages and hours in force in Hart House are equitable and just.

The Hall Committee has appointed a sub-committee consisting of: Dr. G. C. Cameron; Mr. G. M. Graham; Mr. E. G. Sinclair and The Warden, to make a further report.

"A GHASTLY SCAÑOAL"

"A ghastly, ludicrous scandal," and "a swindle," were the terms used with reference to the Ontario system of secondary education by Gilbert Norwood, Director of Classical Studies at University College.

These derogatory terms were used in answering "The Varsity" on the question: "Are you satisfied with the intelligence of the students who are now entering the University of Toronto?"

The reply was decidedly in the negative. "The University of Toronto students are not up to the standard that they should be because of the educational system to which they are subjected in their pre-university days. They are handicapped by the system, (Continued on Page 4)

SOCIAL REVOLUTION IMMINENT IN EUROPE

Continent Must Choose Either
Evolution or Drastic Revolution

STUENTS REVOLUTIONARY

"The greatest danger to peace in Europe to-day is not the possibility of international war, but the threat of social revolution," stated Dr. Walter Kotschnig at a meeting in Hart House yesterday afternoon.

"One of two things must take place, social revolution and the rise of a proletarian dictatorship, as in Russia, or a quick and sane social evolution," Dr. Kotschnig continued.

"European students are in a revolutionary mood to-day. They realize the necessity for a change and since European students take a very active part in practical politics, there is a danger of a too radical change. In Germany an increased number of university students are going over to the extreme Nationalist Party led by Hitler."

In Italy a large majority of the university professors and students belong to a sub-organization of the Fascisti. This organization is a strong supporter of the "nationalist spirit" in Italy. In France the extreme Nationalist Party is largely supported by students.

Pointing out by these examples of the power of the "nationalist spirit" in the European countries, Dr. Kotschnig spoke of the work being done by the International Student Service, of which he is general secretary, in fostering international understanding among the students of the world.

"The spirit of vague internationalism must be destroyed," he said. "A passive friendliness is not enough. Knowledge of economic, political and cultural conditions must be extended."

ENGINEERS TO FROLIC AT ANNUAL AT-HOME

University President Warned

STUENTS UPHOLD EDITOR

Question Suspension Right of President; Walk-out Probable

By M. M. Marks

Suspension of the editor, Ronald Grantham, a senior student, from the University, which led to the cessation of publication on Feb. 13th of The Ubysey, official undergraduate paper of the University of British Columbia, until the editor was reinstated, terminated the sensational attempts of one undergraduate newspaper to maintain freedom of expression. A special outline of the affair was received from The Ubysey by "The Varsity" by air mail.

The editor of The Ubysey published an editorial criticizing the Provincial government's proposed policy of reducing appropriations for the University and the cutting down of enrollment. On the following day, the eve of the Legislature opening, President Klindt gave verbal orders to the editor to refrain from criticism, editorially or otherwise, of the University, the Faculty, or the Government until the Faculty had reached a decision regarding the editorial in question.

But the editor considered he was only to refrain from any editorial comments and so published student interviews with leading students, all of which supported the stand of The Ubysey. On that score, the President, without consulting the Students' Council, by whom the editor is elected, and to whom he is nominally responsible, suspended him for direct disobedience of orders and not for the opinions expressed in his editorials.

The Student's Publication Board of the University came to the support of their editor and issued a final two sheet paper with double headlines: "PRESIDENT SUSPENDS GRANTHAM, UBYSEY SUSPENDS PUBLICATION." In a letter to the paper the Publications Board states that it cannot continue publication under these conditions and pledges their support to their Editor.

The students of the University at an Alma Mater Society meeting the same day by a vote of 920 to 421 decided to give no expression of opinion until all aspects of the situation were studied. There were charges of railroaded at the meeting, but the proffered resignation of the Student President, Donald Hutchison, was declined. Since then student and local press feeling has run very high in favour of the editor and a general walkout of students is not unlikely.

The offending editorial after setting out in general terms the University's advantages, declared: "In spite of its good name, in spite of growing public appreciation and support, the University has not received a very generous treatment for mile present government. Expansion is needed. . . The Minister of Education, however, proposes not to encourage the growth of the University of British Columbia, but to check it."

THE VARSITY, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 20th, 1931

THE STRONG HAND AT WORK

Out in British Columbia the official axe has fallen, and another university editor's head has rolled into the basket.

"Defiance of authority" is the pretext this time. Despite its novel turn, the phrase has a strangely familiar ring. Only the absence of such old favourites as "lack of co-operation", "personal malice", and "vindictiveness" draw attention to the fact that the circumstances of The Ubyssy drama differ in detail from our own.

It is impossible to read the letter of suspension written by the President of the University of British Columbia to the Editor-in-Chief of The Ubyssy and retain any very lofty conception of the intelligence of the learned gentleman who guides the destinies of the higher learning on Canada's Pacific coast.

The editor has rallied to the defence of his University with pointed editorial comment when the government has threatened to whittle down the financial apportionment. Motivated, beyond the shadow of a doubt, by the unseen hands that pull the wires of the politico-academic puppet show, the President of the University has directed a letter to the editor forbidding him to "publish any criticism, editorially or otherwise, of the University, the Faculty, or the Government" until the Faculty Council shall have decided upon a course of action on the editorial. The editor has had a news reporter go among the students collecting opinions on the affair. The opinions of the students have been published without comment The editor is suspended from the university. The student governing body is ignored as pointedly as if it did not exist.

That is all . . . as simple as that. This is the strong hand in operation. This is the sort of thing we need at the University of Toronto, if we are to believe our Fotheringhams. God help us if we get it! We had better die decently now while a certain element of self-respect remains to us than wait till we are strangled to death by the strong hand and are left to lie rotting in the mildew of discretion, creating a stench that will make our name a synonym for departed glory and betrayed ideals, wherever freemen gather.

The editorial staff of The Ubyssy has walked out en bloc as a protest. The student governing body as represented by the Publications Board has suspended publication of the student newspaper. These people believe that a newspaper muzzled by official censorship from reproducing the opinion of the public it serves is not worth the ink which must be expended on its printing.

The heaven is at work. Who knows but that the gallant few on the Pacific coast may yet survive the strangle hold of the strong hand and fight through to a day when Canadian universities from coast to coast can pride themselves that freedom of thought and expression is not only a historical shibboleth and so much doctrinal cant, but has a definite and pertinent meaning to living human beings within their walls, whose consuming passion in life is to seek after something which they delight to call truth!

LIVING WAGE

It is understood that the question regarding the scale of wages existing for Hart House employees, raised by correspondents to this paper, will result in a thorough investigation of the matter by the Hart House authorities. There can be no possible doubt, judging from comments heard everywhere on the campus yesterday, that the matter is considered of vital importance by every thinking male undergraduate of this University. From past experience with the gentlemen, this paper has no misgivings regarding the course of action which the officials of the House will take. It can reasonably be assured that the matter will be given a thorough airing and that something very like justice will be done. Nothing short of this can be considered satisfactory now.

Art, Music and Drama

"Out of the Blue"

In Germany there is a playwright, Hans Chlumberg, who has created a sensation there, and soon is going to do so in America.

The New York Theatre Guild has just emerged successfully from a battle royal with half the producers in New York for the acting rights to this man's latest drama; and next fall will produce Miracle at Verdun. In will be the first Chlumberg play to be presented in the United States.

In the meantime the Hart House Players of Toronto, Canada, will present Herr Chlumberg's earlier play, Out of the Blue, all next week in Hart House Theatre. This play is one of the recent London stage successes. Production rights have been secured by special arrangement with Sir Nigel Playfair.

Out of the Blue, which has been translated and arranged for the English stage by Michael Orme, is a most unusual piece that will certainly annoy many purists of the theatre. Actors and stage hands mingle with strangely fraternal familiarity. Traditions as old as the hills are brutally ignored. Dilemma after dilemma arises, and is overcome as stage dilemmas are not usually overcome.

But nothing matters. This is a play written to attract the interest of an audience and perchance to show in some new light, the inner life of the stage. Whether it is a good play or not, whether the payers are first class or second class, it will interest, and it will certainly be discussed in all circles next week.

The cast for the production is as follows: Heasell Mitchell and Colonel Paterson who play the leading roles; and Percy Schutte, Andrew Allan, Jack Barber, Graham Garton, H. E. Hitchman, Margaret Robertson, Marian Scott, Florence Mathews, Bill Wilson, John Coleman, Jack Brockie,

INTERCOLLEGIATE ASSAULT-AT-ARMS AT HART HOUSE TO-NIGHT

THE SPORTSWOMAN

At a late hour last night it was reported that Francis Crooks, the stellar defence player of the intercollegiate hockey team would make the trip to Kingston to-day. "Fran" was out at practice yesterday and indulged in a light workout. Dot James who dropped off the squad early in the season due to pressure of work will also make the trip and her presence will strengthen the team considerably.

The team will leave on the nine o'clock train, arriving in Kingston about one. The game is scheduled for the evening.

At a meeting of the hockey club yesterday it was decided to play off the tie games that Varsity has played this year in order to avoid if possible a three-cornered tie in the group. This means that Varsity will meet both Aura Lee and Silverwoods once more before the season ends.

The senior basketball squad will also be minus the services of one of their star players in their game against Hamilton Normal to-night as Louise Crouch, who plays forward, has been ill all week with a throat infection and while better is not able to take her regular position to-night.

The game will be played at eight o'clock at U.T.S. and should be a hard struggle from start to finish. The Normal outfit is a well-rounded one

COLLEGE PUCK TITLE GOES TO OLD M'GILL

Maimed Blues, with Junior Substitutes, Fight Gamely

LOSE IN MONTREAL 4-2

Special to "The Varsity"

By TORY FLEMING

Montreal, Que., Feb. 19.—For the second successive time since 1915 McGill took the intercollegiate hockey trophy. The Blues were turned back four to two and six to four on the round.

But it was not without a struggle that the McGillians were able to retain the trophy. The Blues, riddled by injuries and illnesses and with Conn of the Bee team and Bennett of the juniors filling vacancies, the Blues fought gamely.

At one moment in the proceedings the Varsity men were down 2 to 0, but after clever forcing and with the courage of desperate men, knotted the count. Smilie, on a pass from Bennett, and Dewar alone, counted.

It was in the third period that the heavy damage was done. Within less than two minutes the Redmen counted two goals which proved to be the counters that won the contest. On the first Farquharson counted on McGillivray's pass, while on the second Ward counted on Johnson's pass-out.

The Blues were marked by their fight, as they seldom have been in previous affairs. Every man on the outfit turned in a brilliant effort, with Doc Ames in goal showing some effective stopping of pucks.

Varsity—Goal, Ames; defence, Dewar and Smilie; centre, Stewart; wings, Ferguson and Bennett; subs, Bell, Conn, Funston and Leake.

McGill—Goal, Powers; defence, McTeer and McGillivray; centre, Ward; wings, Doherty and Farquharson; subs, Taylor, Hutchison, Johnson and McHugh.

Referee—Billy Bell.

First Period
1.—McGill.....Farquharson 18.00
Penalties—McGillivray, Dewar and Taylor.

Second Period
2.—McGill.....Hutchison 7.00
3.—Varsity.....Smilie 13.40
4.—Varsity.....Dewar 16.50
Penalties—Doherty, Leake 2, Farquharson, Bell, Ward (major).

Third Period
5.—McGill.....Farquharson 4.30
6.—McGill.....Ward 5.40
Penalties—Smilie, McTeer, Dewar and Farquharson.

and both combine and shoot well. The Varsity squad has been displaying great strength in their last few games and will be out to add one more to their string of victories.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By DeC. H. R.

To-day we welcome to our midst the boxing, wrestling and fencing experts from Queen's University and McGill. Once in three years is a long time to wait for an opportunity to see an intercollegiate assault-at-arms, and many University of Toronto sports enthusiasts welcome this chance of seeing the cream of the mil, mat and clanging metal artists at work. Clean exhibitions and game battles have been the rule of these intercollegiate sports in the past, and this season should be no exception.

Remember that at five o'clock this afternoon the sale of student tickets closes, and your chance to see two worth-while nights of fighting at reduced prices ends then.

Remember also that the Blue and White is represented by some clever and hard-working contestants this year, and more than one class in the boxing and wrestling divisions promise keen and close competition before the assault ends. McGill's entry is unusually strong, and from Kingston comes the report that the Tricolour will make a valiant bid for honours this season. To prophecy is useless, the bouts themselves will provide victors.

"In some quarters there is a suspicion that Toronto Varsity coaches pulled a 'fast one' in entering their strongest club in the senior B group, thus giving the 'seconds' an easier route to the finals." Such is the statement that came from the pen of Dick Gibson in the sporting columns of the Border Cities Star last Tuesday. Evidently that sports writer is unacquainted with sporting conditions at our university, or he would have hesitated before making such a statement. Perhaps we may be permitted with pardonable pride to say that the Blue and White athletic organizations and officials have always held the game itself above the issue at stake, and have endeavoured to make their best contributions to every line of sport in which the U. of T. is represented.

The Varsity "Bees" as a team may be better than the "A" team, but as individual players they were not good enough to make that team. As a team they have given some great exhibitions of how hockey should be played, and then combination plays are undoubtedly the secret of their success. To-night when they meet the Windsor Seniors at the Varsity Arena they have to make it a victory, and can be counted upon to play real hockey. So the fans of the ice sport are promised a thrilling battle in this playoff.

For the second time in succession McGill University has won the senior intercollegiate hockey championship, and most certainly they have earned the honour which they won this year. The University of Toronto senior intercollegiate hockey team was a medley of stars who played erratic hockey at the best. To the Red and White of Old McGill go the honours, and to her we extend our congratulations.

PUGILISTS ALL SET FOR INTERCOLL. ASSAULT

final result will probably show only one or two points separating them.

In the three competitions, namely, boxing, fencing and wrestling McGill and Varsity appear to have the best teams with Queen's the dark horse. Varsity's strongest bid will likely be in the wrestling while McGill are conceded the fencing and are strong in the boxing classes. The fencing team of Wiggers, McKernon and Harvey-Jellis, which won the fencing title last season easily, will again defend their honours and are strong favourites to give McGill the single point that fencing is to receive this year. Three points were awarded last year.

In the boxing, McGill, Queen's and Varsity all have strong squads and the judges will no doubt be called upon to give plenty of hair-line decisions. Varsity seem to have an excellent chance to take championships in three of the classes with one or two other possible winners. In the 126 pound class the fast and hard-hitting Teddy Fell will be the favourite to capture his second straight intercollegiate title for Varsity, while Wilton is a good bet to come off with the middleweight honours, although he is meeting strong opposition in Veitch of McGill and Jolliffe of Queen's. Longert is the other Varsity favourite. This heavy slugger is competing in the light-heavy class and will be forced to the limit to defeat Greenblatt and Hamlin of McGill and Queen's respectively.

Queen's hopes in the boxing lie in Kussner in the flyweight division, Porteous in the welterweight class and Wilson, heavyweight, while in the 118 pound group Sampson is conceded an excellent chance to win. Kussner won the 112 pound class in 1929 while Porteous was intercollegiate champion in his class last year. Queen's also are not lacking for capable performances and there is no denying the fact that Seright in the 118 pound class is a real threat. This fast little boxer has won the title for the last two years and will relinquish it only after a hard fight.

But it is in the wrestling that Varsity expect to make their best bid for the championship. In the 118 and 158 pound divisions, Robertson and Eaton are given good chances to win, while Bannister in the 126 class is almost a sure thing for the finals. Brownlee in the flyweight and McKinney at 134 pounds are good men and have excellent chances to come out on top. McGill will rely chiefly on Wolfe in the 112 class, Norwood in the welter and Roloff in the heavy for their points. Bill Hosking is expected to repeat his last year's win in the 174 pound group to give Queen's at least one wrestling title. Taking everything into account the assault promises to be a huge success and it is the feature of the Toronto indoor athletic season.

NETMEN HAVE HEAVY BILL OVER WEEK-END

The University of Toronto senior intercollegiate basketball squad faces a tough task this week-end, journeying to Montreal to play McGill on Friday night and back to Kingston Saturday to take on Queen's.

McGill are leading the group with 4 wins against no losses, while Varsity and Western are tied for second place with 2 wins and 2 losses. If Varsity win both games this week-end and Queen's defeat Western, Varsity can tie for the leadership.

McCallum is definitely out and his place at centre and forward will be taken by Huhn, a promising junior. The team will be as follows: Forwards, Riggs, Hines, Collins; centre, O'Leary, Huhn; defence, Sakler, Cock, Sniderman.

evidently a case of student or faculty control," he said. "Evidently the president had the power to suspend the editor and exercised it. The faculty has been in control in any university with which I have ever been connected. Whether it is a good thing or not depends on the circumstances. You can't generalize," he concluded.

The Will to Succeed

It takes more than will power to succeed in life. It takes a healthy vigorous brain and a well built frame with no weak spots. The time to build that kind of a foundation for future success is in early adulthood.

WORRIES OF FINANCE IMPEDE EDUCATION

Asked for his opinion as to the position of a poor man in the eyes of the women, Mr. Davison replied that he believed that many of the girls who were accustomed to going to expensive entertainments, welcomed being taken to a musicale or some other form of inexpensive entertainment.

L. Knowles, II U.C. did not believe that money plays such a large part in a university education as most people suppose. It is no doubt very welcome, but not by any means essential.

Asked if he thought that a person working his way through university had an equal chance of being elected to committees and executives, Mr. Knowles replied with an emphatic "Yes".

Another person, whose identity could not be ascertained stated in a meek tone that money might be an asset under certain circumstances, but he believed a good fight for an education very beneficial.

It has been proven by doctors that 65 per cent of the people in Mexico have a dangerous disease.

B.C. EDITOR SUSPENDED

The Student Council, in a letter sent along with the editor's letter of protest to the Senate, makes no comment on the case, but points out that it is responsible for his actions and is the only recognized medium between the Alma Mater Society and the University authorities.

Leaders of the movement state it is not their intention to question the right of the president to suspend students, but to object to any curtailment of the freedom of the press.

The Ubysey in its final issue ran an In Memoriam: SACRED TO THE MEMORY OF FREE SPEECH, DEPARTED FROM OUR MIDST, FEBRUARY 11, 1931. SHE LEAVES US WOE-BEGONE, FORLORN AND PUZZLED; FREE SPEECH IS DEAD AND ALMA MATER MUFFLED.

The University of Manitoba paper, The Manitoban, sent a wreath which was laid on an effigy resembling a corpse, laid out on a table in the auditorium building, surrounded by lighted candles. As a final gesture President Klinek was recommended for the Oubliette Club.

The Table Round

Geoffrey Riddehough in the "Ubysey"

In a way the room is like any college classroom anywhere: rows of bare seats sloping down to a sort of counter, or barrier to protect the front row of students from sudden attacks of wild professors. The seats are in pairs, and the desks are even cruder than ours. The other chief differences are: tiny windows hermetically sealed, for the French dread "currents of air"; and above the small blackboard a picture of a female figure dressed in a wreath of mist, which is coming off, and a male figure dressed in a tablecloth observing her with interest. This is supposed to be a painting of "La Grece se devolvant à l'Archeologie."

The audience is about ninety per cent girls and ex-girls, all talking except five, one of whom has a sore throat: the four others are Chinese. Suddenly the professor comes up from behind the counter, and everybody applauds. Instead of a gown to give him dignity, he has a decoration in his buttonhole and a long black beard. He begins to address the class in English, as this is a lecture on Burns. He, however, isn't going to lecture, one of his students is to read a paper.

She takes her seat beside him. She is a small creature with large glasses and a conscientious air. First she reads Burns in a small voice and then she translates him. God bless thee, Burns! At first I can't follow her at all, for during the first fifteen minutes about one quarter of the audience decide they know enough about Burns for their immediate needs and walk up the creaking stairs to the door at the back.

The janitor, however, has locked the door on the outside to ensure that the audience will be properly inoculated with Burns. Does this bring the outward bound back to their seats? It does not. They rattle the door till you can't hear yourself think. Half the audience hiss at them; the other half giggle. The student continues her reading, and the professor chips in every so often, in the rude way professors have.

Suddenly the janitor opens the door and the outward bound fall all over him. He tells them what he thinks of them; they respond in suitable terms, while from beyond him and them there floats a conversational roar from the main hall. Bright idea comes to janitor; he shuts door again, this time not locking it.

Attention reverts to the student, who is still expounding Burns. She is approaching a risqué passage. I listen attentively, but she mistranslates so that it sounds quite innocent. The professor wags his head in a way that might mean anything.

Getting near the end of the hour: click of caps screwed on fountain pens, snap of handbaks being closed. Clock strikes on the wall; another strikes in the courtyard outside. Student stops expounding and looks at professor, with inviting modesty. Professor, regardless of the fidgety crowd, congratulates her and then has one word more, that last slow distillation of the academic brain-cells.

But I am too busy trying to get out past the intruding gleaners of the next hour's wisdom.

secondary schools. The Canadian 'teen' age children are being swindled out of two years of their life; and the authorities are aware of it. Mr. Savage, chief inspector of the British secondary schools, was invited to inspect conditions in Ontario schools and in his report to the London authorities revealed the two years' superiority of the British schools! Yet the Board of Education, who had free access to the report, completely ignored it—nothing was done. Our system is a ghastly, ludicrous scandal and a swindle. What the university needs is not a raising of the standard for entrance, but a reorganization of the secondary system."

HEART FAILURE BRINGS INSTANT DEATH TO MEMBER OF GYM CLASS

A. A. Lawrence, II S.P.S., is Victim of Tragic Occurrence in Hart House

Was Passed as A-1 Physical Specimen by Doctor in Fall

A. A. Lawrence of Second Year S.P.S., died suddenly Saturday morning while running around the indoor track at Hart House. The gym class had gone up on the track; they ran around the track three times, walked around twice, and then Lawrence sprinted ahead; in the midst of this sprint he collapsed. In the short time it took Dr. Porter to reach the Upper Gym the last vestige of life had left the boy's body. His physical condition was A-1 when examined during the fall of last year. His death was attributed to heart failure.

WOULD RAISE FEES TO INCREASE WAGE

Students Want Investigation of Hart House Wages Question

'DESERVE FAIR TREATMENT'

Students interviewed on the question of a proposed investigation into the wages paid Hart House employees have told "The Varsity" that if conditions are as alleged an investigation should certainly be made.

"Certainly, we should have an investigation," expressed the opinion of students concerning the charge that Hart House employees are underpaid. Most of those interviewed said they would be willing to have the Hart House fees raised to increase the wages if necessary. A number of the replies are given:

G. A. Seythes, III S.P.S.: "The matter should be settled as there must be some basis for the rumour and even if there is not, no harm will be done. I think we should know what is being paid to each person. We get very good service and we should treat our employees in the same way, consequently a raise in fees if needed would suit me."

YOUNG PEOPLE CORRUPTED

That the minds of the young were being corrupted and that atheism was being taught in the university was the charge laid by the Rev. Dr. Gibson at Cook's Presbyterian Church last evening in an address on "Atheism and Atheists". He deplored the fact that church students entering the university in preparation for the ministry were so altered in their beliefs that, at the end of their arts course, they no longer had any inclination to study theology. He went on to state that a professor of "so-called Biblical knowledge" in the university instructed his first year classes to discard all (Continued on Page 6)

The I.S.S. tag day on Friday netted returns of about $350. "The Varsity" learned last night from Rev. F. J. Moore. This is about $25 less than last year due, Mr. Moore believes, to poorer financial conditions this year.

"I think we've done very well on the whole," said Mr. Moore. "Dr. Kotschnig was very much pleased with the results."

Hart House Employee Reveals "Hush" Fiat

By W. Stafford Johnston

The following is an exclusive interview given voluntarily to "The Varsity" by an employee of Hart House. For reasons which will be obvious to the reader, his name is being held in strict confidence by the editorial board of "The Varsity".

"Employees of Hart House have been forbidden to say anything to reporters from 'The Varsity' about the salaries they receive, or the conditions under which they work."

This is the most striking item of first-hand information given to "The Varsity" over the week-end by an employee on the kitchen staff of Hart House.

"I know that I express the opinions of the majority of the kitchen staff when I say that these instructions seem to us to be the last straw of tyranny. Hart House employees are not well-paid, and they're not satisfied. Ordinarily we don't kick, but when they try to dictate what we shall say, and refuse us the elementary right of free speech on matters which concern our pay envelope and our daily bread, it's going a bit too far."

Of his own accord, "The Varsity's" informant backed up his assertions with definite information as to actual wages paid to men and women working six days a week and nine full hours each day within Hart House. Among the examples cited were those of two ex-service men, both married, who draw a weekly pay cheque of exactly twelve dollars. Other instances include:

Two dishwashers, receiving twelve dollars a week each.

Three men in the main servery, two of them drawing twelve dollars a week, and the third thirteen dollars and a half.

All waitresses, other than head waitresses and assistant head waitresses,—twelve dollars a week.

"Of course, we get twenty-five cents an hour overtime. But even at that, to get a living wage of twenty dollars a week, the twelve-dollar-a-week man would have to put in over fourteen hours a day, six days in seven."

"Do you think you will be in any danger of losing your job if Hart House authorities discover that you have given this information?" asked "The Varsity" point-blank.

"Certainly. I have to take that chance. But if the 68 professors can have free speech, why can't we? At any rate, spring is near. If I'm fired for talking I can take to the road until I find another job."

"And I'm sure that, although some of them might keep quiet to save their jobs, the men I work with feel the same way," he concluded.

Candy and Gum Are Not So Rum But Spare Us Those Med. Cigars

Peace Is Restored On "Ubysey" Front

The Editor of The Ubysey has been reinstated following a sympathy walk-out of his entire staff. "The Varsity" learned by a special wire from Vancouver yesterday. Ronald Grantham, Editor of the student journal of the University of British Columbia, was given two weeks' suspension from the University by the President for alleged disobedience of an order to cease criticizing the Provincial Government.

The wire received from The Ubysey in reply to "The Varsity's" request for information reads as follows:

Vancouver, B.C., 19—Suspended editor reinstated February eighteenth. Apologized to President for disobedience order he did not fully understand. Freedom of press to be settled by joint meeting of Faculty Council, Students Council and Publications Board. Satisfactory settlement expected. Students in full support of editor. Edgar Brown, Senior Editor.

U.C. SENIORS CHOOSE PERMANENT EXECUTIVE

The Permanent Executive elected Friday by 371 U.C. is announced as follows:

President—W. H. A. Thorburn. Vice-president—Miss Minerva Sinclair.

Secretary—W. B. MacMurray. Treasurer—Miss Jean Robertson.

"Here's a blotter—don't forget the name—have some gum—here's a cigarette—want a light?"

"These elections aren't such a bad idea after all," said one freshman as he came out with his pockets stuffed. Most of the frosh took to it like a duck to water.

Three men adorned their election posters with a significant skull and crossbones. One of these was probably the candidate who gave out cigars.

One man was overheard to say "Did he say this was a cigar? It tastes like an incinerator to me."

And there was the candidate who wooed the muse to the extent of a four-lined "poem."

To our surprise there were no election posters displaying nude women. And yet they say "Dirty Meds."

On second thought perhaps they were saving up for the Hart House elections.

Just to put some life into the election some playful engineers tried to start a snowball fight.

Apparently they couldn't find any Meds. to fight with.

The whole front of the Medical Building was plastered with snow and two windows were broken. The Engineering Building did not get touched.

Elections must have a charm for these Meds. They are usually on hand for a battle.

Defending McGillmen Routed; Toronto Secures Six Ring Titles

By J. M. Chorlton

By taking six of the final boxing and wrestling titles on Saturday night in Hart House as well as the fencing championships in the afternoon, Varsity regained the intercollegiate assault-at-arms from McGill and now hold the championship for the eleventh time and the eighth time in nine years. The final standing in the competition was Varsity, seven points; Queen's, six; and McGill, four.

With only two bouts left on the program on Saturday night Queen's and Varsity were tied at six points each and as McGill were conceded the final of the heavyweight boxing bout, the assault honours depended on the outcome of the light-heavyweight bout between Sammy Longert of Varsity, and Howard Hamlin of Queen's. "The question of a Women's Cadet Company has never come up at the university," stated Miss Coventry, Women's physical training director, when questioned by "The Varsity" regarding the move taken in that direction by the women of McGill University. "And I don't know how it would be received here."

Miss Coventry went on to explain that the interest in physical training at McGill is keener than here as they have a two year course in Physical Education independent of an Arts degree.

For the development of this cadet corps a large inside gymnasium and an outside training field would be absolutely necessary—also a special instructor. In the light of this the possibility of organizing this type of (Continued on Page 6)

PUBLIC OWNERSHIP

The one important fact which may be extracted from the Hart House wage scale discussion is that Hart House is not the property of any one man or of any committee, but is—in the truest sense—the property of the thirty-five hundred male students of this University. These men pay their Hart House fees, they make daily use of the House's facilities, they vote in its elections, they make it the centre of their life during their careers as University students. This is what we have been told for years; it is the Warden's most constant theme; it is the House's proudest boast. But it may take a heated dispute, such as the present one appears to be, to make us realize it.

This is the only form of public ownership which a democracy ought to tolerate—control of an institution by those who use it and whose monies support it. In this case it simply means that, if the present scale of wages applying to employees of Hart House is unjust in any particular, it is a reflection upon the members of the House, and it is the duty of these members to demand that rectification be made.

We made the statement in Friday's issue that the gentlemen whose duty it is to administer the affairs of Hart House could be trusted to see that the matter was given a thorough airing and that justice was done. It now appears that instructions have been issued to employees from the office of one of these gentlemen to the effect that no information or comment was to be granted any representative of the press who might approach in quest of a story. This move cannot possibly be taken as that of an individual desirous of contributing to a frank discussion of a matter in which the personal attitudes of the individual employees must of necessity be an immensely important factor. To defend it, after the deed, as a disciplinary measure, will, we are afraid, smack too much of rationalization to be taken seriously by the thirty-five hundred or more members of Hart House who will not be satisfied now until a complete understanding has been reached.

We are told that twelve dollars a week is the prevailing wage for Hart House employees—not counting department heads and their assistants. This, of course, means twelve dollars a week plus three meals a day—the equivalent of certainly not more than twenty dollars per week. This, it may be argued, is a living wage. Is it? It is considered a living wage for waitresses who, theoretically, have no one but themselves to support. It is also considered a living wage for men who have a wife and several children to support. These men, it is true, are ex-service men. It is one of the House's rules to employ ex-service men wherever possible. It may be—the fiat of silence has prevented us from clearing up this point—that these men are also drawing a government pension in addition to their wages. We scarcely imagine that anyone will be so contemptible as to advance the argument that Hart House is justified in paying a starvation wage to war veterans simply because they possess physical disabilities which entitle them to financial aid from Ottawa.

Even those who have no dependents and who are getting what is said to be the equivalent of twenty dollars a week may be pardoned if they question, from time to time, the generosity of the members of Hart House. It probably costs Hart House something like sixteen dollars a week to maintain each of these employees. This is scarcely a fitting contribution to the Canadian standard of living from the Dominion's largest University.

It appears to us that now is the time for the male undergraduates and graduates who are members of the House to make it perfectly clear to the Hall and House Committees and to those who administer the business of the institution, that minimum wages have no place amid the dignity and wealth of the University of Toronto and that to maintain the scale of wages existing at Hart House compares favourably with those obtaining elsewhere is an argument unworthy of those who are supposed to be gentlemen and scholars.

Art, Music and Drama

Mary Wigman

With a brassy clang, the curtain raised on an absolutely bare stage hung only with dull blue draperies, and Mary Wigman, German danseuse, opened her Canadian premiere of the new school of dance Friday night at Massey Hall.

One is almost at a loss to describe her; no beautiful symphonies of famous composers, no stage craft, nothing pretty, nothing delicate, and yet for two hours we were held in a trance as it were, watching, listening to the spell, conscious of nothing, but to understand the meaning of her dance. There was no music. A few drums, timbrels, sometimes a flute or piano, but we did not even hear them. The music, or rhythm interpreted, the dance created.

It was arresting, dramatic. The beauty and perfectness of the art impressed us. We said it was not pretty; we might say it was handsome, however. Wigman has mastery in her art, and finish. She knows her school and she is a modern.

The most impressive numbers were without music, nothing but the monotony of a hidden drum. Face of the Night, when she wore a long black outfit, with head-dress, almost filled us with horror in its reality; Storm Song was a blizzard of movement, quivering limbs, whirling veils of red; Witch Dance filled us with awe—horrid mask, motley costume—as she writhed about in agony upon the floor of the stage. The other numbers all had some accompaniment, whether piano or flute, continuous monotony, interpreting every move of arm, head or body. The program had been opened with Innovation, in which she wore a metallic garb and helmet. We did not like this number, too eurythmic. Of course her whole work is based on Eurythmics, but in such a refined form that it is hardly recognizable, as in Pastorale, which breathed beauty and quietness. Festive Rhythm and Summer's Dance were both beautiful with effective costumes. Her costumes were all effective, emphasizing but not detracting. The last two numbers were really beautiful, one, Monotony, Whirl Dance, when she kept up a continual whirl for five minutes, sometimes fast, sometimes slow, moving only her arms to complete the expression, at other times her whole body in an agony of motion. The last dance was in two short numbers, from a dance cycle, Shifting Landscape, which was very pretty, and as near to the old traditional dancing as she allowed herself to come all evening.

In her dancing we could almost feel her personality, like an actor upon the stage, or a musician interpreting into music what he feels in his soul. She wears no shoes, has beautiful arms, a pretty face on the stage and somehow we hardly expected the semi-long bob, brushed back from her forehead. Altogether we were very impressed, as was all Toronto, judging by the terrific applause. And then we went home and read what the "New Yorker" said about her and laughed in spite of ourself. —J.P.M.

Friday Afternoon Recital

One of our most interesting of Friday afternoon recitals was supplied by Winnifred MacMillan and Kathleen Irwin. While they are the third two piano duo which has performed in Hart House this form of musical expression is still sufficiently rare to retain some measure of novelty.

The feature of the program was an excellent arrangement of the Bach Fantasia and Fugue in G Minor. The dramatic fantasia with its recitative character was handled with considerable imagination and the wonderful fugue, one of the finest in all the Bach works was well played and really quite thrilling.

Donor of Medal

"The Varsity,"
Dear Sir,

A few lines from J. W. Geddes, well known Varsity Sports Official and donor of the "Geddes Gold Medal," which was given for about twenty years at the Annual Varsity Athletic Meets. After nearly three months in the General Hospital, after undergoing two operations, he has resumed work again at 445 Spadina Avenue.

Yours truly,
J. W. GEDDES.

At Last! A Real Issue!

The Editor,
"The Varsity,"
Dear Sir,

The existence of the Varsity has at last seemed to be justified.

As this is being written the Librarian in the "lower reading room" of the University Library, is taking the names and addresses of those individuals who are overcome by the desire to talk.

We are at last to have a chance to "study". And those of us who are also affected with a desire to talk are more than likely to be deterred in the future.

If you have ever used the lower reading room (I have never seen you here) you will be aware that owing to absolutely inadequate ventilation we either freeze or suffocate. The same thing might also be said about the upper reading room. The public schools have more up-to-date ventilating systems than the Provincial University.

Can you not start an agitation to have at least a moderate change in this conditions? Fans for the windows should not cost more than about $200 or $300 at the outside.

Thanking you for your space, and anticipating a healthier atmosphere among the "students,"

Yours,
A SUFFOCATING ICICLE.

CHAMPUS CAT

Study the illustration at the head of this column. Turn it upside down and you will observe that it becomes a futuristic impression of a Hart House employee receiving justice.

C—C

Normally it represents a cat giving an imitation of the accomplished danseuse, Mary Wigman, giving an imitation of a cat. The cat is holding what appears to be a fishing rod, but it is not a fishing rod. It is a primitive instrument obtained at great risk in the wilds of Oshawa.

C—C

"What," you ask, "is the purpose of the bottle of ink?" How surprised you will be when we tell you that it is not a bottle of ink! It is a cubistic sketch of a Hollywood star selecting her coffin before going on a diet.

C—C

Now look at the bird in the cage. Well it is no bird at all but an agent from Moscow in disguise. He is trying to overthrow our institutions. As soon as it grows dark he will sneak down to the Zoo and preach communism to the monkeys. Only time can tell what may happen then.

—Winky.

McGILL WINS INTERCOLLEGIATE HOCKEY & BASKETBALL TITLES

BASKETBALL CHANCES DISAPPEAR AS SENIORS DROP TWO FIXTURES

Lose to McGill, 45-24, and to Queen's, 42-26, During Week-End

DEFENCE WEAKENED

Captain Sakler Absent through illness and MacCallum Injured

Special to "The Varsity"
By A. C. Cochran

Another intercollegiate title went west, or rather east to McGill over the week-end when Varsity lost both of their basketball games with the Redmen and Queen's. The Blues lost the Montreal fixture 45 to 24 on Friday night and went down before a furious attack by the Tricolour the following evening 42 to 26. The local collegians deserved to lose both games and were outplayed but McGill and Queen's playing on their own floors turned in inspired efforts.

The Blues were severely handicapped for both games by the absence of Captain Benny Sakler, star left guard. When the team reached Montreal, Benny was sent to bed with a temperature of 103 and a mean dose of the flu. A week ago MacCallum tore a ligament in his ankle and was forced out of the line-up for the rest of the year. With two of his best defencemen out, Coach McCutcheon was short-handed. George O'Leary, who has performed regularly at centre, played guard and at the pivot position alternately, while Sniderman relied on the defence and on the forward line. The team was completely disorganized and no matter what combination Coach McCutcheon tried out, it was equally ineffective. Against McGill they were impotent and not had elapsed did Gordie Cook score Varsity's initial field basket.

The Redmen took full advantage of their greater height and gobbled up all but two of the rebounds from their own back-board. That is the factual indication of how helpless the Blues were on the offensive. Bill Huhn, a junior, relieved at centre and played a great game. He collected Varsity's (Continued on Page 5)

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

The Varsity hockey team put up one of the gamiest fights in years on Friday night in Kingston when they were faced with the double handicap of a two-goal deficit and strange ice. In spite of this, they defeated Queen's by 2 to 1 and should have had at least one more goal. They were right in there fighting every minute and made Queen's struggle to hold their lead.

The showing of Fran Crooks, who was not really over a serious attack of the flu, was particularly good and although her play was not up to her usual standard, she played a steady game and her presence did a lot to strengthen the spirit of the team.

Betty Carter, stellar Blue winger, scored both goals for Varsity and one of them was an especially pretty effort, when she went right through the whole Queen's team, and completely fooled the goalie. The second was scored from a scramble in front of the net.

After their excellent showing in the last few games, the hockey team should go far in their remaining games in the city league. They will play off their tie games with Aura Lee and Silverwoods, probably on Wednesday and Saturday of this week.

The intercollegiate basketball team had a hard time defeating the Normal School Grads at U.T.S. on Friday night when they came out on top in a very close game 33 to 31. The Blue team were minus one of their star players, Louise Crouch, and her place was taken by Sally Ballard, who played an excellent game.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By DeC. H. R.

The intercollegiate boxing, wrestling and fencing honours hung in the balance in the light heavyweight boxing match last Saturday evening and for a moment the Blue and White's chances to bring the title back home looked slim. The famous "How" Hamlin of Queen's showed some real slugging ability in the first round of the fight, and had Sammy Longest so groggy once that Toronto fans were holding their breath. However, the same Sammy Longest staged a great rally in the last round of the bout and not only out-boxed the Queen's rugby star, but also lifted him through the ropes for the count of ten. Incidentally Longest stepped up fifteen pounds to compete in this class.

The pluck of MacKay, the fair headed Varsity lad who moved up a class to give Field a chance, and to stand up for three rounds against the Queen's champion, Seiright, took the fancy of the spectators. They gave him a well-deserved round of applause as he left the ring.

"Knockout" Peever of Queen's showed that he had earned this nickname when he put Porteous of McGill to sleep with one of the prettiest punches of the evening. At any rate it was painless.

Murray Wilton sustained his reputation as a clever boxer when he out-pointed Jolliffe of Queen's to carry off the middleweight intercollegiate championship. Wilton has done a good deal for the mit sport in his years at Varsity and deserved the honour which he won.

McKinney won his bout only after an overtime round, but the Victoria grappler had no easy job of it, and Golfman gave up the 134 pound title only after a real tussle. Eaton fought well too and his match with Langford was one of the liveliest of the evening.

It was a bad break for the Blue and White when Newell had the misfortune to dislocate his shoulder early in his match. Newell was expected to give Miller, the Tricolour heavyweight wrestling champion, a real tussle for the honours.

Teddy Fell gave a smooth display of boxing in both his bouts, and undoubtedly is one of the best men in amateur ranks at his weight. Field extended Kussner in royal fashion before letting the McGill man take the 118 pound title back to Montreal.

The great surprise of the assault-at-arms was the elimination of Wiggers of McGill, the intercollegiate fencing champion of last year. Joe Lee, the Ontario champion, did some skilful work in the foils contests, and far outclassed his nearest opponents to win the lone point for Varsity.

In all the intercollegiate assault-at-arms was one of the best ever held, and most certainly was satisfactory from our point of view. McGill was called to win again this year, after the fine showing that the team of practically the same personnel made for the Red and White last year. After Friday night the Queen's mit and mat men became quite optimistic and until late in the tournament the race between the Tricolour and the Blue and White ran almost point for point.

The trophy strayed from its resting place here last winter for the first time in seven years, and should get a warm welcome on its return. Phil Rivers and Jimmy Jackson deserve credit for their persevering efforts in training the Varsity boxers, and Coaches Martin and Cliff Chilcott for their success with the wrestlers.

NEWELL

Newell's unfortunate accident in dislocating his shoulder prevented him from giving Miller of Queen's the battle that was expected in the heavyweight class.

The team as a whole turned in a fine exhibition and seem to be going strong in preparation for the intercollegiate tournament at Kingston next Friday and Saturday. So far they have lost only one game in five starts and improve every time out.

RALLY IN THIRD PERIOD

In a hectic exhibition game of basketball, Varsity's women's intercollegiate team eked out a close decision over Hamilton Normal School Grads by the score of 33-31 at U.T.S. gym on Friday night. The game was closely contested as the score indicates. The play was fast and furious but the passing tended to be wild at times and Varsity had very hard luck with their shooting.

Varsity scored a run of baskets in the first few minutes of play only to have Hamilton overhaul them gradually to lead at quarter time by 10-8. At half time Varsity were still trailing the Grads by 19-15 and at the end of the third quarter were three points behind, 24-21. In the last quarter Varsity showed more of their old form and played spectacular basketball to pull away steadily from Hamilton, who scored two baskets after three minutes to go, but were unable to overtake the lead Varsity had established at the first of the period.

The forward line combination was very effective with Wilma Hazlett scoring 13 points, Eleanor Sedgewick 10 and Sally Ballard 6. Jean Allen played a clever game on the defence. Frances Dunkin was high scorer for

CARR LEADS OFFENSIVE

Completely outplaying the Guelph Aggies in every department of the game, Varsity intermediates defeated O.A.C. 29-15 in an intercollegiate fixture played on Friday night in Guelph and as a result of the victory stay in the running for the intercollegiate title.

Varsity played a steady game all through and more than made up for the defeated handed to them by Guelph the last time the two teams met in Toronto. From the opening whistle Varsity jumped into the lead and were never seriously threatened. The score was doubled on the Aggies at half-time, the count then being 14-7 for the Blue and White, while each team scored one more point in the last period than they did in the opening session. Varsity's victory was featured by the passing and playing of the team which at times ran rings around the Aggie defence.

In almost doubling the score on their opponents Varsity showed that they are yet a threat in the intercollegiate competition and stand a good chance on the basis of Friday night's play to match the title. Behind the sensational play-making and shooting of "Mike" Carr on the forward line, the Toronto outfit could not be beaten. Carr turned in one of his smartest performances of the season while his play-making from centre had the Aggies baffled and more than once the Guelph team sent two men to look after the flashy forward.

Equal in brilliance on the night's play was Harry Newman, who besides sinking five out of seven foul shots and just rimming the loop on another two turned in a hard checking game and counted, in all, nine points.

Burns, subbing on the forward line in the first period, let loose for a couple of minutes to score three successive baskets for six points which gave Varsity a good working lead. Scott and Pasternak turned in good games, while Sullivan played his usual role in feeding passes under the basket. Coles and Forsythe were both effective, the former chalking up four points.

For Guelph, Golleham was the most effective, scoring six points, while Hull and Brown turned in nice efforts. Munroe was held in close check and as a result counted only one foul shot.

Varsity — Forwards, Sullivan and Carr 9; centre, Scott; defence, Newman 9 and Forsythe 1; subs, Burns 6, Pasternak and Coles 4.

O.A.C. — Forwards, Hull 3, and Brown 3; centre, Munroe 1; defence, Golleham 6 and Folland 2; subs, Finbow, Elliott and Crane.

Referee—Percy Miller, Toronto.

WOMEN PUCKSTERS DROP TITLE ROUND

Win Game by One Goal, Losing Series to Queen's by Same Margin

BETTY CARTER SCORES TWO

Special to "The Varsity"
By Willie Ann Luckett

Kingston, Ont., Feb. 20.—Queen's women's intercollegiate hockey team won the Betty Ramsay trophy, emblematic of the intercollegiate hockey championship, in spite of a 2 to 1 defeat at the hands of Varsity on Friday night, by virtue of a 3 to 1 win over Varsity in Toronto on February 7th. Play was fairly even most of the way, with Varsity having a distinct edge in the third period. The game was quite slow, individual rushes featuring the play most of the way.

The game started fast, and play ranged from one end of the rink to the other, both goalies making great saves. Varsity opened the scoring about half way through the first period on a nice solo effort by Betty Carter, who took the puck at her own defence, went right through the whole Queen's team, drew the goalie to one side, and flipped the rubber into one corner. With two minutes to go in this stanza, Naomi Slater, Varsity defence player, was benched for tripping, and Doris Snell, Queen's winger, knotted the count on a close-in shot while Varsity were still short-handed.

There was no score in the second period and play was much slower. May Mills, for Queen's, and Fran Crooks at centre for the Blue team, featured the play in this period, and there was some nice combination work on both forward lines.

The third stanza was a repetition of the second, with Varsity trying hard to make up the two-goal deficit. Their efforts were unrewarded until near the end of the period, when Betty Carter again banged the puck in the net from a scramble in front of the net. With three minutes to go to the end of the game, Varsity sent four men up in an effort to get the tying counter, but the game ended with Queen's down one goal and winners of the round by 4 to 3.

Betty Carter was the star of the game for Varsity, scoring both their goals, and playing a great game all the way. Her first goal was one of the prettiest seen this season. Margot Thompson teamed up well with Betty Carter on the wing line, and the Blue defence turned in a fine effort. Gladys Simmons, centre, and May Mills, defence, were best for Queen's.

Queen's—Goal, Beth Patterson; defence, May Mills, Jean Nelson; centre, Gladys Simmons; wings, Betty Adair, Doris Snell; subs, Marion Guest, Mary Ewart.

Varsity—Goal, Betsy Burruss; defence, Adele Statten, Naomi Slater; centre, Fran Crooks; wings, Margot Thompson, Betty Carter; subs, Bliss McQuarrie, Dot Starr, Dot James.

LAST HOCKEY HOPE FADES; WINDSOR CAPTURES ROUND WITH 5-2 VICTORY

Senior Bees Overshadowed by Smooth Border Town Combination

TRAIL 4-0 AT ONE TIME

Two-goal Dash in Final Canto Raises Temporary Hope for Tie

Varsity's last chance for a hockey title vanished on Friday night when Windsor Seniors scored a decisive 5-2 victory over the Bees to win the round 7-4. The two teams began the game on an equal footing as a result of the 2-2 tie game at Windsor.

There was no question as to which was the better team. Windsor's front line worked smooth combination that brought the puck carrier in on Lebarri while on the other hand Varsity's combination did not begin to function until it was too late. At the end of the second period Windsor were leading 4-0 although the play hardly warranted such a score. In the last session the Blue team fought back hard and scored two goals in less than ten minutes, to put them back in the running. Just before the end of the game Varsity were caught flat-footed and Anderson tallied to put the game on ice.

Varsity had four members of the junior team in uniform and they were the outstanding players for the home team. Conn was playing his second game in two nights and looked tired.

Fitzgerald opened the scoring for Windsor in less than three minutes on a pass from Lowery. May missed a close one when Tice made a neat save. Foot scored on a pass from Anderson to make the score 2-0. Varsity were not making much headway against the close checking of the Windsor forwards. Robinson went right through the Windsor team, but Tice made a sensational save on his backhand shot. Varsity continued to make individual rushes while Windsor played a smooth passing game. Windsor got a lucky goal to put them three up on the game and round. Robson shot between the defence and the puck was deflected off one of the defence-men and bounded over Lebarri's foot into the cage.

In the second period the brunt of the battle was borne by the junior forward line of Cunningham, Hendry and McPherson. They made many nice plays but couldn't bulge the twine.

May and Fitzgerald went off for mixing it and while they were off a pass from Lowery to Anderson caught the defence napping and Lebarri had no chance. This goal practically settled the issue.

Williams was injured and retired. Shortly after Robinson was penalized and Varsity had no defence men on the ice but Windsor could not score.

At the outset of the last period the "T" sextet forced the play. Cunningham scored Varsity's first goal when he retrieved the puck at the Windsor blue line, stickkanded his way through the defence and held his shot until he was right in. It was the prettiest play of the night. Four minutes later Cunningham and Hendry rushed and the latter scored on Cunningham's rebound. Windsor bucked up a little and Anderson stickkanded his way right into the goal mouth but Lebarri went to his knees to make a great save. The Bees pressed hard and with six minutes to go they put five forwards on the ice. Varsity were bombarding their opponents' net and Windsor were shooting the puck down the ice. Just before the end of the game Anderson scored on a lone rush to finish the scoring.

Varsity—Lebarri, Robinson, Williams, Clute, Conn, May, Cunningham, McPherson and Hendry.

Windsor—Tice, Robson, Foote, Lowery, Fitzgerald, Anderson, Fauria, Irwin, Patterson.

MCGILL PLACES SECONO

Winning all six of his bouts, Joe Lee, Varsity, added to his string of past triumphs by capturing the individual intercollegiate foils championship held in the big gym at Hart House Saturday afternoon. McKergow and Harvey-Jellie, both of McGill, tied for second place. Varsity won 13 bouts, McGill 9 and Queen's 4.

Despite the fact that Varsity won the tournament by a comfortable margin, the contenders from McGill and Queen's were always in the running. The bouts were close and interesting, with the tilts between Adamson, Queen's and Harvey-Jellie, McGill, and Lee, Varsity and Kwiecien, of Queen's, being outstanding.

The big disappointment of the tournament was the fact that Wiggers of McGill, former intercollegiate champion and member of the Canadian international team who has a victory over the American fencing champion to his credit, lost every bout in which he took part.

GOALTENDERS BRILLIANT

After thirty minutes of fiery hockey the group playoff between St. Michael's College and Pharmacy at Varsity Arena, Friday afternoon, resulted in a scoreless draw and as the ice was not available for overtime, a second game is necessary.

Although they showed marked superiority in the early stages of the game, St. Mike's found themselves in at their own end for almost the entire last session. The poor work of both teams around the nets spoiled some fine chances to score. The game was clean and the play spirited throughout although neither sextette showed very good offense.

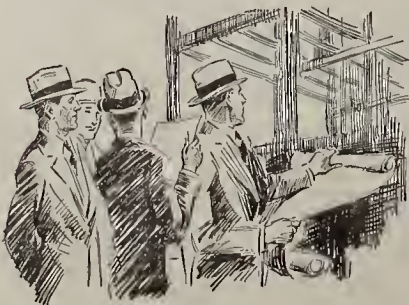

Willett, on the Irish defence, was the best man on the ice. His rushes were always dangerous and several times he missed goals only by poor shooting. Kehoe and Cerre were the pick of the forwards. For Pharmacy, Robinson checked well and was fighting all the way. Peacock and Harrison in the opposite nets, turned in good games and some of the latter's saves in the last stanza were brilliant.

VARSLITY REGAINS ASSAULT HONOURS

In the first round Hamlin caught the Toronto batter napping and sent him flying across the ring with a straight right hand punch. The least punch would have ended the fight right there and given the championship to Queen's but Hamlin did not take advantage of the opportunity to rush across the ring and finish the bout. He waited just a fraction of a second too long, perhaps because he did not realize that he had his opponent at his mercy or perhaps because his muscles would not respond to his thoughts quickly enough and that fraction of a second besides giving Longert an opportunity to cover up and weather the round, cost the Kingston team the assault title.

How Sammy Longert finished out the first round, went on to out-box Hamlin in the second and finally scored a clean-cut knock-out in the final session will long be remembered by the throng that crowded the main gym to witness an event which comes to Toronto only once in three years.

Half-way through the evening it was easily seen that McGill did not have a chance to retain the title they won last year in Kingston and it was also seen that Queen's had an excellent chance to win their first intercollegiate assault since 1912. As events proved the Kingston team came within one point of winning the title.

The downfall of the Redmen started on Saturday afternoon when the fencing team of Wiggers, McKernon and Harvey-Jellie who won the title last year with ease and were conceded it this year, went down to defeat before the Varsity team of Lee, Porter and Sculley. That victory for Varsity eventually proved the margin of victory. In the boxing and wrestling bouts Friday night, McGill made a poorer showing than expected and fared even worse in the finals on Saturday.

The assault produced some excellent bouts both nights and altogether six of the boxing bouts ended with knock-outs. On the whole the wrestling was not as good as expected and except in the heavier classes most of the bouts required a decision. Saturday night's bouts produced better competition than the previous night, and the competitors showed more willingness to mix things on the final night.

The poor showing of McGill and the form displayed by the Queen's battlers was the feature of the assault as McGill were heavy favourites to repeat their victory of last year while on the other hand Queen's were given chances in only one or two of the finals.

Although the feature bout of the evening was the clash between Longert and Hamlin the fight put up by MacKay of Varsity and Seright of Queen's in the bantamweight class was perhaps the best display put up by any boxers during the entire program. On Friday night MacKay had beaten Sampson of McGill, 1929 champion, in a close bout, while on Saturday night he was forced to meet in Seright last year's champion of that class. Although clearly outpointed in every round in the final, the Toronto batter put up a game fight throughout and drew a good hand from the crowd as he left the ring.

Teddy Fell, flashy Varsity boxer and last year's champion in the feather weight class, won both his fights by knockouts to win the title for the second successive year. Fell wasted no time in disposing of Thomas from Queen's on Friday night, scoring a clean-cut knock-out in the first round, while in the final he battered Dey of McGill so badly that the referee stopped the bout in the last round.

Perhaps the closest bout of the finals was between Kussner of McGill and Field of Varsity in the fly-weight class. The bout was fast and close throughout, the decision in favour of Kussner being greeted with boos. Field put up a smart fight and his harder punching offset the aggressiveness of the Redman.

Peever from Queen's scored the two quickest knockouts of the tournament in winning the welterweight championship. In the preliminary round he disposed of Rapsey in one round while in the final Porteous succumbed to his hard punching in only one minute of fighting. The punch that put Porteous away was a straight right hand blow that travelled less than six inches and landed flush on the loser's chin. The blow did not seem to carry much weight behind it but Porteous was turned completely around by the force of it and landed on his face.

In the middleweight class, Murray Wilton of Toronto encountered hard opposition from Veitch of McGill in the preliminary round but had no trouble in defeating Jolliffe of Queen's in the final bout.

Perhaps the greatest upset of the day was the defeat of Eaton in the final of the hundred and fifty-eight pound wrestling. The Varsity lad was expected to carry the class with ease but was thrown for two straight falls by Langford from Queen's, the first fall coming in four minutes and twenty-six seconds of the first round, while the bout came to an abrupt finish after three and a half minutes of wrestling in the second round.

The heavyweight wrestling championship was won by Miller of Queen's in two straight falls from Newell of Varsity. In the first half minute of fighting Newell hit the floor with Miller on top and in the fall dislocated his right shoulder, putting him at a great disadvantage for the remainder of the bout.

The lighter wrestling classes did not produce the spectacular falls that were featured in the heavier divisions, most of the bouts going the full time to a decision. In the hundred and eighteen pound class, Robertson won a popular decision over Bateman of the Tricolour while in the hundred and twenty-six pound class Bannister from Varsity was forced to

NOT HIGH CALIBRE

"We simply can't get our honour graduates to take up secondary school teaching as a profession. In this fact, we have one of the greatest problems of our present-day education," Principal Wallace thought.

"It used to be that the principals of high schools were classed amongst the great men of our country. That was in the '80's but ever since the place of these men in public life has decreased until, at the present day, we have no outstanding men in the profession.

"Perhaps the fault lies in O.C.E., who forced all graduates to take a year there before teaching. Before that many scholarly men went into teaching at least for a few years. "As for salaries, I think they are well paid. Take the case of a Commerce graduate last year. There wasn't a man who started work on a salary of more than $1,800, while most high school teachers started on a salary of $2,000.

The Porto Rico team is headed by Antonio J. Colorado who has been its leader during his four years at the university. On the whole, the competition was keen and many fine bouts were witnessed in both boxing and wrestling classes. The meet was a complete success and one of the most successful of the intercollegiate competitions. Next year's tournament will be held in Kingston, while the following year Montreal will be the scene of the assault.

PRINCETON GIVES DELINQUENT CHANCE

Partial Failures May be Made up Through Vacation Courses

TERMS TREATED SINGLY

The following regulations of Princeton University apply to failures incurred by upperclassmen, according to L. P. Everhart, dean of the faculty.

1. (A. B. and B. S.) When a junior or senior fails in one of his departmental courses of the first term, the failure does not become a deficiency to be removed subsequently, but his final grade in this course is combined with his other departmental group for the year.

2. (A. B. and B. S.) A junior who has not more than two deficiencies at the end of the year, both of which were not incurred in the same term, such deficiencies being in non-departmental courses, may remove one such deficiency in a summer by passing a reading course, or he may remove two deficiencies by attending the summer session. If he has not removed all of his deficiencies by the beginning of his senior year, he will not be eligible for graduation in June and the first opportunity for the removal of this deficiency or deficiencies will be given during the following summer.

(Eng.) Juniors or seniors may remove deficiencies in non-engineering subjects according to the paragraph above. If they are deficient in engineering subjects, they may be permitted by the Committee on Examinations and Standing to take summer courses in another university, but they may not be permitted to remove more than two deficiencies in any one summer. But in such cases the test that the work has been satisfactorily done will not be met by submitting the credit obtained in the summer school, and can be met only by passing such tests and examinations as the department concerned shall set.

3. A senior who is clear for his degree except for one sixth group incurred in a non-departmental course in senior year will be permitted to take either a re-examination in the senior vacation or a summer reading course to remove the deficiency. The re-examination is considered as a substitute for the original examination, and the grade attained in it is combined with the term grade to determine the standing of the student in the course.

4. A suitable standing in one of the courses of the second term does not remove a deficiency of the first term, nor does a general standing for the year.

5. The list of summer reading courses and a statement concerning them may be obtained from the Registrar the latter part of May.

tary training in the colleges as there is in United States. In the University of Toronto the C.O.T.C. is a separate entity from the Optional Arts Course of military studies.

"The Military Studies here are purely voluntary" declared General G. S. Cartwright, director of Military Studies, in commenting on the article of Dean Dupre of Ohio State University which appeared in "The Varsity" yesterday.

"The course," General Cartwright went on, teaches military history, tactics and map-reading. It is much less rigid than the ordinary arts course. Great stress is laid on writing in order that statements may be short, concise and complete."

The General explained that the C. O.T.C. is separate from the course in Military Studies but students in the former take the Military Studies as a general rule.

In conclusion, General Cartwright stated that the course does not encourage militarism especially.

Col. T. R. Loudon of the C.O.T.C. refused to make any comment on the American desert's charge.

Mr. W. S. Wilson, secretary of S. P.S., likewise had little to say, except that he pointed out that the C.O.T.C. is purely voluntary and not compulsory militarism.

the effect is rather scrappy. Another arrangement, Sicilienne, from a suite for flute and harpsichord by Bach is very lovely and lost little in the transcription. A chorale prelude by Bach and a sonata by Pasquini, late seventeenth century, filled out this very interesting group.

Two humorous episodes of Tailleferre, one of the fairly modern school, were entertaining for their eccentric pianism and silly enough to leave artist and audience chuckling. The program closed with two impressionistic numbers by Ravel and a novelty, The Arkansas Traveller.

This writer would like to assure artists who kindly play for university audiences that our appreciation will in no way be lessened if they do not trust to memory. The current fashion makes these informal programs unnecessarily burdensome.

—R.A.McE.

M.A.A. Musicale

Yesterday afternoon at the Women's Union another of their delightful Sunday afternoon programs was provided by Madame Joyce Hornyansky, the well known and very popular cellist.

The program opened with three very pleasing numbers of the early eighteenth century by Vivaldi and Tartini and the grace and purity of this type of music seems admirably fitted to the cello and to Mme. Hornyansky's style of playing.

The program centred around a tremendous number for cello alone by Bach. A diverse and occasionally dynamic Prelude introduces a suite of old European dances, a courtly Allemande, a sombre Sarabande, a frolicsome Bourree in two movements and a very jolly Gigue.

Two numbers by Gabriel Faure, a Melodie by Frank Bridge and a Serenade by Glazunov completed the program, which was in many respects the best this writer has heard Mme. Hornyansky play.

first rebound late in the second half and scored on it. Huhn was Varsity's outstanding marksman against the Montreals and garnered 8 of his team's points. At times he was a bit slow but considering the fact that it was his first effort in senior company he deserves plenty of credit. He had to watch the star of the game, Don Young. Young gave one of the finest exhibitions of floor play we have ever seen. He engineered practically all of McGill's plays and was good for eight points himself. He is a superb play-maker. He fed Smail and Faulkner the ball and they were responsible for 10 and 9 points. Calhoun, a guard, looped the basket for 9 also.

"Eppa" Riggs played a hard aggressive game, while Cook and Hynes also looked good, but the combination of the losers was lacking. McGill opened the scoring and were never headed, the score at half time being 22 to 9.

At Queen's it was a different story. It was a case of one man, Elliott, running wild for 15 points, nine of these coming in the second half. Coach McCutcheon sent several of his men in with orders to stop Elliott. But the Tricolour star continued on the rampage and his great work gave his team a 42 to 26 victory. The score at half time was 17-16 in favour of the winners.

Varsity was able to hold their rivals in check for the first 20 minutes and had the best of the play. But following the rest period Elliott commenced to find the basket on long shots and his marvellous shooting inspired his comrades to great heights. Hollett and Fenwick also turned in strong games for Queen's while Riggs and Sniderman were Varsity's high scorers with 7 and 6 points respectively.

LACK OF COURAGE DEEMED THE CAUSE OF NONRESISTANCE

House Committees Fail to Inspire Confidence in Their Investigations

"IT LOOKS PRETTY BAD"

Wage Scale Known to Every Hall Committee Member, Says McKinney

Condemnation of the wage scale prevailing for Hart House employees, and distrust in the Hall Committee's ability to conduct a proper investigation of the problem were expressed by A. G. Reynolds, IV Victoria, in an interview with "The Varsity" last night.

"I don't know all the facts," he said, "but it looks pretty bad to me to think that the Board of Governors would pay their servants, as you might call them, minimum wages just because they're as good as any paid in the city. It certainly could stand investigation."

Asked if the Board were implicated in the affair, he said: "I understand on fairly good authority that the Board of Governors sets the wages for everyone."

"Do you think the Hall Committee competent to conduct an investigation when you consider that they knew before that these wages were being paid?" was the next question.

"Certainly not," replied Reynolds. "That's just the trouble with Hart House committees. None of them have the courage to buck the officials, certain ones in particular. You might associate that with the quiescence of the House Committee."

That members of the Hall Committee were informed of the scale of wages paid Hart House employees was affirmed by G. D. McKinney, a member of the committee. "Every member of the Hall Committee knows what the wages are," he said. He refused to inform "The Varsity" on what grounds, the committee had justified these wages.

MAN NOT FAVOURED IN MODERN COURT

Women, Formerly Helpless, Now Darlings of Court

NEED FOR LEGAL REVISION

Man is in a much worse position than women to-day as regards the legal rights of marriage, according to Dr. Cecil Wright, who spoke before the Women's Law Club at the Union last night.

A long battle has been waged for the protection of women's rights. Formerly, when a woman brought her husband property on marriage he was accustomed to look after it and had partial or complete control. The Courts of Equity came in to save the situation, and have made women the pampered darlings of the courts. They granted her the right to have separate estates.

The Court also says that a man must pay for business contracts entered into by his wife even though he is indigent. But this does not work the other way. Thus English women have run up huge accounts with French dressmakers and their husbands have had to foot the bill. A man may command his wife not to drive his car; then, if she does take it out and incurs an accident, must risk bankruptcy to pay the damages.

VICTORIA MINGLES SEXES IN LECTURE

English Class Abolishes the Segregation System in Class

DEPLORE SCARCITY OF MEN

"Starting something?" "I should say so." "Where?" In the Honor English class at 2nd Year Vic something happened Friday morning which is more or less a direct result of the appearance in the Varsity recently of certain articles on co-education.

Men and women filed into the room and sat down anywhere regardless of the "gender" of their neighbor. This drew an approving smile from Prof. Auger, who proceeded as usual with the lecture.

The purpose of these enterprising Vic students is to explore a new field, that of the men and co-eds getting to know each other in classes, and mingling together casually. As it is now, only engaged couples dare talk to each other in the college hall.

"If we only had enough men in English class to go around, everything would be perfect," commented Ross Crosby.

GIRLS DISAPPROVE VAGRANT EATING

Cling to Social Values of Residence Meals; Desire Regularity

CAMPUS FOOD PALATABLE

"One of the greatest factors in the fostering of college spirit is having meals in residence," stated Carrie McQuade, III Trinity. "At St. Hilda's we meet the non-resident girls at lunch and strike up an acquaintanceship with them. The service is quite snappy. I can't say whether or not it is cheaper than eating out, but it's certainly better for our general health."

Marjorie Tripp also of St. Hilda's said she preferred meals in residence but could give no definite reason. "All I can say is I'm satisfied."

"Meals in residence are often inconvenient" was the opinion of Margery Wright, II U.C. "Basketball practices and groups often make it impossible to eat at the appointed time, so I think it would be an excellent idea if we could pay for our rooms only and have our meals whenever and wherever it suited us."

"I think the idea is quite foolish!" declared Dorothy Innes, II Vic. "Eating in residence provides a well-balanced diet, nourishing if not exciting, and saves us money into the bargain. Having your favorite dish at a restaurant every day would soon begin to pall."

"Wynmwood meals are a relief after four months of eating at Amesley," avers Eleanor Fulford, II Pass.

"We have our meals in St. Joseph's Convent just across the street," explained E. H. O'Brien, Head Girl of St. Joseph's. "It is run on much the same plan as a union and the service is very good. Yes, the girls seem entirely satisfied, and I'm sure they wouldn't want to eat out regularly."

Forced Expenses Add to Burden Borne by Hart House Kitchen Staff

By W. S. J.

Former Employee Found Ten Days the Limit of Endurance

"FREE HOURS SHORT"

Large Part of First Wages Spent in Purchase of Costume Required

An inside picture of the conditions which prevail among the kitchen staff of Hart House was afforded "The Varsity" yesterday in an interview with Miss Annie Kingshot. Miss Kingshot is a former employee of Hart House, having worked in the Great Hall and the faculty and graduates' dining rooms for a period of ten days. "Ten days," she told "The Varsity," "were all I could stand."

"But you only had to work nine hours a day," suggested "The Varsity."

"Nine hours? We had to be at work at seven in the morning and we quit at seven in the evening. I think we were supposed to have two free hours in the afternoon, but it never seemed to be much longer than one. I know I always had just barely time to hurry home, bathe my feet to take the ache out of them and hurry back again."

"Did you find that the girls with whom you worked were satisfied with their twelve dollars a week?"

"They certainly were not. But we never dared say very much. Mr. Gunn was always watching us to see if we were moving fast enough. If we weren't well, we just had to move faster. It's no small job feeding a thousand men in an hour and a half, and we each had to look after four tables."

"And besides," she added, "for the first few weeks it isn't really twelve dollars, or anything near it."

It develops from Miss Kingshot's conversation that when she first entered Hart House service, she was

EMMANUEL AT-HOME PROVIDES HOUSEWARMING

The new Emmanuel College was initiated on Friday evening by the fifth annual At-Home. The guests were entertained by an exhibition of the novelties of the new building, promenade, musical numbers by the orchestra and Lawrence Defoe, and a demonstration of Black Art by John Giordmaine. The patrons and patronesses of the evening were: Dr. Wallace, Dr. and Mrs. Gandier, Mrs. Charles, Dr. McLaughlin and President McLeary of the E.C.S.S.

Jealous Co-eds Prompted To Jeers Moans About Soup Bore Them to Tears

With the first forecasts of Hart House Elections being circulated, and ushering in the usual clamorous campaigning, every male undergraduate is supposed to be checking up on the merits of the various candidates. But what of the co-eds? Do they find the said elections interesting, amusing or annoying?

Diligent inquiries amongst the women on the campus revealed primarily a surprising ignorance plus a certain amount of indifference to the question. "Why bring up any more about Hart House!"—was an oft repeated cry. We're jealous enough already, and tired of missing fun."

It was thought that the festive day provided some diversion in the dreary March days, but in general, the inevitable surplus (?) of yelling and parading was deplored. "Too much like the American colleges," was the verdict. Does the practise of giving away gum, cigarettes and candy really se-

City Restaurant Conditions Declared Decidedly Superior

SHIFT SYSTEM EMPLOYED

Tips Usually Supplementing Low Wages Forbidden at Great Hall

The net income of waitresses employed in Hart House, as well as the working conditions, are definitely inferior to the level prevailing in city restaurants, declared Miss Gena Grubb, head cook at the Mayfair restaurant, 453 Yonge Street, and formerly head cook at the Savarin restaurant, Bay Street, after reading the statement in yesterday's "Varsity" that employees in Hart House work 54 hours a week for twelve dollars.

"The weekly income of our girls averages at least fifteen dollars and often runs well above that," asserted Miss Grubb, going on to explain that although the waitresses at the Mayfair start at an initial salary of ten dollars a week, the wage is raised as quickly as their growing efficiency permits and that their income is further increased by tips which often run to a dollar a day. "I understand that although Hart House pays no higher wages than do they, they refuse to allow their girls to take tips."

"At the Savarin, the starting wage, if I remember rightly, is $11.50 and this too, was proportionately increased by tips."

"Furthermore, I have been told," she added, "that the girls in Hart House are forced to work throughout the entire day, six days a week. My experience in several Toronto restaurants has been that the waitresses always work on a shift system, so that days when they work in the morning, and again in the evening, are balanced by days when they are on duty only from noon until dinner time."

Sleep suddenly overtook a fair co-ed as she waited by the window on the stairs leading from the Lower Reading Room in the library. She was first noticed around five-thirty, curled up against the radiator, completely unaware of the amusement she was causing. At six o'clock Sleeping Beauty was still undisturbed, but a library official who happened to pass, deemed the step a poor couch and aroused the slumberer, who resumed her post of waiting at the window.

CAMERA IS A LIAR DECLARES LISMER

Lens Takes One Unexpectedly Stressing Undesirable Features

COMMENTS ON HARRIS

"I think the camera is the greatest liar unhung" was one of Arthur Lismer's remarks in an after dinner talk on Art at the Union last night. "When are you satisfied with a photograph you have had taken?" he asked. The camera is so truthful it can't select. It gets you in an unexpected moment when you are getting composed and your face is twisted. A painting is more intelligible. An artist looks into an individual and brings out his characteristics—sometimes unwanted ones. Twenty different artists will make twenty different pictures of the same person, this because a person has 100 different faces. A portrait by one artist may give you the appearance of just having paid a visit to the chiropractor while from the hand of another artist you will come out looking like a Sunday school calendar.

CO-EDS CRITICIZE GYM FACILITIES

Lillian Massey Floor Too Small and Unsuitable for Basketball

COLLEGIATE GYMS BETTER

"The Lillian Massey gymnasium is rotten and has far too little floor space," was the general opinion expressed by forty University College co-eds when interviewed by "The Varsity". Several of the co-eds deplored the fact that a university this size could not supply a more suitable gymnasium for the women.

"This gymnasium is not as big as ours at home," declared Miss Mildred Gordon from Walkerville. A number of women pointed out how poorly it compared with collegiate gyms of this city and most of the church gyms.

One of the most prominent complaints was the situation of the gymnasium. Trying to get to a physical training period on time, from a building near College Street, takes more energy than the exercises do. You are done up before you get on the floor," was the statement of many co-eds.

"You can't get a decent game of basketball on that floor." The equipment looks good, but we haven't room enough to use it." "The floor is rough and has too many splinters for comfort." These were some of the opinions expressed several times.

The idea of women edicts was received with much amusement. Here again lack of space was raised as the greatest objection to this institution. On the whole, the co-eds would not consider the suggestion seriously and laughed when asked their opinion on the subject.

KNOX DONS LOYAL TO CHRISTIANITY DECLARES PASTOR

Dr. Gibson Absolutely Denies Truth of Statements Made in Press

DECLARES REPORT GARBLED

Prospective Theologs Turned from Purpose by Destruction of Early Faith

With the statement that he offered no criticism directly or indirectly to the teaching in Knox College or to the teaching of any of the professors there, Dr. Gibson of Cook's Presbyterian Church absolutely refuted the statements appearing in a morning paper and in "The Varsity" yesterday when questioned by a "Varsity" reporter. He said that "on the contrary all their teaching was in harmony with the standards of the Presbyterian Church."

His only reference to Knox College in the manuscript from which he spoke was: "Whilst I believe our professors in Knox College are loyal to the Christian faith and teach the doctrines of our church I have some reason to believe that many promising students from Christian homes who enter the university with a view to the ministry of the Gospel have their faith so undermined during their undergraduate years that they turn aside from their purpose and never enter the theological college." But, however, he did mention that the report which appeared in one of the morning papers was taken down verbatim by a shorthand writer and that he varied from his written manuscript in several instances. Nevertheless he maintained that the reports were "garbled."

He also stated that Freudian teachings were being taught in the psychology department of the university or at least had been up until two years ago and strongly believes that students studying arts for the purpose of entering theology should have supervised instruction in Philosophy.

FEW IN FIRST YEAR PASS ARTS AT VIC

Lack of Frosh-Sophs Will Affect Housing Problem More in Vic

FIRST YEAR WILL INCREASE

"The abolition of First Year Pass Arts will make little difference to the housing problem, that is if the entering class of women is limited," said Miss Addison, Head of Victoria Women's Residences when interviewed by "The Varsity" Monday afternoon.

"Last fall the number in First Year Pass at Victoria was cut down to thirteen. This includes both men and women and as only one of the latter is in residence, doing away with the course will not solve the question of over-crowding."

"There is one interesting feature to the matter which few people have yet comprehended. The frosh-soph will pass out of existence almost entirely. Those who have the entrance requirements of the present frosh-soph will naturally become freshmen along with the first year honour students. Nevertheless they will graduate at the end of three years; or in other words, the whole scale of Pass Arts is being pushed back a year. Honor Matric students instead of swelling the ranks of the second year as they do now, will go to fill out the first.

ATHEISTS

The Rev. Dr. Gibson, Presbyterian divine of this city, believes that atheism is being taught at the University of Toronto. If by that he means that the teaching in a good many of the courses here is of such a type as to result in a practical atheism on the part of the students, he is probably right.

The student—particularly the student in philosophy, psychology or the pure sciences—is an individual who goes in for considerably more than his fair share of attention from sermonizing divines and well-meaning viewers-with-alarm. It is unfortunate, because it serves to make the student even more self-conscious than nature has already made him—and God knows there is no more self-conscious organism in the world than your university student. From a delicious feeling of naughtiness in the first stages of discovering that the Divinity was not all one had been led to suppose and that there was perhaps not much more than a certain engaging naïveté about some of the stories on which one had been weaned, the psycho-scientific undergraduate proceeds to a condition of glassy sophistication in which he defies all the forces of purity and light to show wherein the psycho-scientific student does not stand peerless and alone in a world of silly shop-girls and petrified crones who attend religious services.

The students of one of our colleges of theology have forwarded a letter, we are told, to the Rev. Dr. Gibson, protesting against his alleged insinuations that our students of theology are not quite so faithful to the old time religion as they might be. We fail to see why these gentlemen should protest. If they were quite honest, they would be willing to admit that the majority of graduates in arts are practical atheists, and that this includes a large percentage of the students in theology. This is not an indictment on our part: it is a simple, straightforward statement of fact. If it is not by this time realized that the number of people in contemporary society who possess anything remotely approaching personal experiential belief in a Deity is extremely small, it is about time it was realized. The divines who are most popular are those charming, engaging persons who read literary essays on Sunday and spend the week upholding the dignity of the church and trying to form a synthesis between St. Paul, Thomas Huxley, and Sir James Jeans. And while a large percentage of university graduates never see the inside of a church from one year's end to the other, most of those who do go are there either for an aesthetic thrill or to preserve their status in the respectable society whose bridge games they attend and from whom they hope to derive monetary gain during the week. It is all very nice, but it is atheism.

We still hear a bit of the amazing sophistry that "there are no atheists—there are agnostics". The theological students who protest against Dr. Gibson's remarks will probably reserve the right of the thinking man—even if he be a theologian—in a tentative position of agnosticism without being branded as an atheist. The obvious reply to that is that agnosticism presupposes an element of intellectual questioning or doubt which simply does not emerge from four years' exposure to most of the liberal arts courses. Much may be implied in the B.A., the M.A.,—or even the B.D.—but doubt, we venture to suggest, is not one of the implications.

If we have ceased to believe in a Divine Being, if the basic canons of our major monotheistic religions have ceased to have any personal application to us, let us stop enrolling ourselves under such bastard classifications as liberal believers and modernistic deists, and let us admit that we are—after all—atheists. It is a cleaner, healthier condition.

STUDIOUS NUMBERS CLIMB AS YEAR CREEPS ONWARD

It may be because first year Pass Arts students are becoming panicky at the thought of returning to high school or it may be because the announcement from the Registrar's office forebodingly advises all students to fill out their examination applications immediately, but in any case, business at the already over-busy library is picking up. Tuesday of this week was the busiest day of this academic year at that popular retreat. On that day 1637 books were taken out and the average figure for this time of year is about 1200. Even the monthly average of this year is higher by about ten per cent than that of last year and the increase in Christmas books was more than twenty-five per cent.

Art, Music and Drama

Ruth Draper

Miss Ruth Draper is presenting a series of character studies in dramatic monologue form in the Royal Alexandra Theatre, on every evening this week and on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons.

Will someone please tell me whether Ruth Draper is seventeen or seventy, and whether she is a peasant who can appear cultured, or a cultured woman who can act the peasant; and whether in private life she is unlike any of her stage characterizations, and just what she is like?

Last night I watched her for two and a half hours and came away perplexed. The stage was draped in dull brown; there was only once more than one chair for furniture. Miss Draper never changed her simple make-up, or the plain brown dress she wore throughout. A few odd shawls—also in shades of brown (or black) and two hats and two parasols—these were all she needed to change from secretary, to wife, to mistress; from British Duchess, to Dalmatian peasant, to American tourist, to Italian beggar, to French maiden.

But there was nothing drab in her presentation of a dozen different scenes. Life is not drab; and this was life. Rather pleasant life too.

Tragedy stalked across the stage at intervals—but it was the tragedy of event and not of character. Strange that not one of her people strutting on the stage was essentially unpleasant. Such an old idea that the dullest women are basically human and pleasant souls. Where was the sophisticated nastiness that we take for granted will be shown up for us at some point during almost any evening at the theatre by one of our psychoanalytical dramatists? Miss Draper is psychoanalytical too, but never finds it necessary to be nasty though she is sophisticated; i.e., wise in the ways of the world outside herself.

There was little burlesque in all her monologues—and not very much obvious satire. Truth is a travesty on burlesque; and more biting than satire. The weakest though possibly the most amusing moments of the evening were the opening scenes of the act in an Italian church. The silent pantomimic burlesque of an artist's gestures were funny, but too prolonged to be quite real. The only other criticism of which I can think, is that the private secretary, Miss Draper portrayed, was too good to be true.

Noteworthy especially were Miss Draper's act as a mistress making love to a man who was not there (the other acts were either more impersonal, or more subjective and hence perhaps a little easier); and her easy command of French, Italian, German and some Slavonic tongue.

Four or five unmanly bores disturbed the final tableau by noisily leaving the theatre two minutes before the final curtain.

The Spirit of Drama

"I am become a critic; there is nothing I can enjoy."—Edna St. Vincent Millay.

Ideally speaking that ought to be the case because as soon as enjoyment enters in, the critical faculty is to a certain extent lulled. However, in spite of myself I thoroughly enjoyed almost every minute of the Revue staged in Hart House Theatre last Thursday by the Experimental Group newly organized under the leadership of Lorna McLean Sheard.

It is difficult to look back now and to pick out the highlights of the evening. It was all so good—or if not good—at least genuine.

Three little sketches by Dorothy Parker played with a necessary tragic abandon—almost fatalistically. A marionette dance arranged by Margaret Wilson and danced by Winifred Fax—beautifully effective against the plain green background—one of the finest dances seen in the local theatre. A vaudeville sketch that was not very good, but was soon forgotten in the viewing of Lanesome-Like—a jolly little drama of Lancashire, starring Janet Mallet and Elaine Wodson. They were so good I did not recognize either. That piece was one of the artistic high lights of the season.

But perhaps the finest presentation of all was the Edna St. Vincent Millay fantasy—as directed by Mrs. Sheard. Lewis Robinson and Rhea McCordy made the best Pierrot and Pierrette seen around here for some time.

There followed a musical sketch written by Howard Lindsay about a Chief of Police and a lot of agitators. Everyone laughed. And then Agatha Leonard and Alison Ewart closed the (Continued on page 3)

Imperial.

Sit Tight. (0)—Joe E. Brown and Winnie Lightner got mixed up in the midst of this funny picture, and changed a beauty parlor comedy into a wrestling show. Aside from the confusion in the plot, the picture suffers as soon as the serious love affair is introduced. The two stars are really comic and save the piece from the bone-pile. Some fine male chorus singing in the stage show.

Loew's.

War Nurse. (1)—Mucking about with the heroines of the hospitals in Flanders. Rather interesting mixture of comedy and tragedy, but a general sense of unreality, especially the battle scene and bedside close-ups. Anita Page and June Walker are pretty good as the pretty heroines. But Helene Jerome Eddy and Zasu Pitts playing essentially serious roles are the real stars. The story is about the passions of war. Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy are monotonously funny in a slap-stick comedy attraction.

Shea's.

Along Came Youth. (0)—Makes this grade because it is consistently light and airy. Charles Rogers is the millionaire who goes broke and masquerades as a cook. Takes place in England but the cast is assorted. Five little boys turn in some neat work, and a horse racing sequence is o.k. Vaudeville is silly but funny.

QUEEN'S STAR TO JOIN "T" BOXERS FOR NEW YORK INVASION

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

The intercollegiate basketball team will meet Margaret Eaton for the third time this year at West End Y.M.C.A. to-night at 7.30. Each team has defeated the other once, so this game is to determine which will hold the city title this year.

This game has been arranged in spite of the fact that the M.E.S. squad has not yet played the intermediate Blue team, the third team in the series at all yet. The Varsity seniors have defeated the seconds twice, thus giving them three wins and one loss in the city league, while Margaret Eaton have one win and one loss to their credit.

The intermediates are admittedly weaker than the seniors, and possibly than the M.E.S. team, but it seems only fair to them to wait until the games between the seconds and Margaret Eaton have been played before any playoff games are made.

This is apparently being done in an effort to have the city league schedule at least as far as the intercollegiate are concerned, over before the intercollegiate tournament in Kingston. This is somewhat of a new departure in women's sport, and the intermediates have every right to feel that any playoffs might wait until the schedule is completed. It would mean only one game more for the seniors after their return from Queen's, and would not prolong their season unduly.

The seniors will practice to-day in Hart House from 1 to 2 in order to get the feel of a larger floor, as they will have to play in the new gymnasium at Kingston, which is exceptionally large. They have been having all their workouts at U.T.S., which while within the regulation limits, is considerably smaller than the one in the Limestone City.

The intercollegiate tournament takes the form of a round-robin affair, with four competing teams: Western, Varsity, Queen's and McGill. There is a draw to determine which teams will meet in the first games, and the winners of these play each other for the title, while the losers of the first encounters play a consolation game, previous to the championship tilt.

Varsity have won the trophy, the coveted Bronze Baby, three times in the last four years, and with a very strong team representing them this year, chances for a repeat are bright. Western gave them the strongest opposition last year, when the tournament was held in London and they have a large number of their former players back this year.

The intercollegiate badminton tournament finally got under way yesterday, when Peggy Glasco of St. Hilda's, defeated Rome McCulloch of Meds, 5-11, 11-1, 11-7. The rest of the schedule is printed in to-day's issue.

This is the first time that anything in the way of intercollegiate competition in badminton has been attempted, and upon the success of this year's tournament will depend the decision of the Directorate recognizing the sport as a regular college sport. So far, all seems to have gone very well.

Among the undergraduates in Eastern colleges the rah-rah spirit is slowly giving away to something very like the European conception of Varsity life, in which work is the object.

CANADIAN BOXERS INVADE NEW YORK WITH CONFIDENCE

Assault-at-Arms Champions Expected to Make Fine Showing

"ALL-STAR LINE-UP"

Peever Comes from Queen's to Help Uphold Varsity Laurels

Fresh from their triumphs in the intercollegiate assault-at-arms four Varsity and one Queen's boxer entrained last night for New York city for a tournament to-night with the N.Y. Athletic Club. The Queen's representative is "Knockout" Peever, the sensational 147 pound intercollegiate champion who has scored 23 kayoes in 24 bouts. The local B. W. and F. Club tried to get one of the Varsity welterweights to make the trip and failed. So Murray Wilton, president of the club, finally got in touch with Peever in Kingston by wire and the latter was only too glad to line up with the rest of the Blue and White mitmen.

The quintet which will fight in New York to-night is the strongest ever to fight at metropolis. Four of them have just won the intercollegiate championship in their divisions. Teddy Fell, who scored two knockouts last Friday and Saturday will fight at the 126 pound weight. Stone is looking after the lightweight division. Murray Wilton and Sammy Longert, who both emerged triumphant in the middle and light-heavyweight sections complete the squad. Truly an all-star line-up which will give a good account of themselves. Both Fell and Peever are ripe for Olympic competition and the latter is confidently expected to raise his string of knockouts. Wilton has proved himself to be a cool heady boxer, while Longert's ability will long be remembered by any who saw him make the comeback he did in the third round of his bout to win the championship of his weight.

But the Canadian boxers are not expecting to have a cinch against the New Yorkers. They have always had a reputation for heavy slugging and revel in the heavy going. Down there they take their boxing seriously and Varsity will be satisfied if they come back with three victories to their credit.

O.C.E. TRIMMED BY KNOX IN DNEISOED STRUGGLE

Heavy Handed Sluggers Knock Ball for 19-3 Victory Over Teachers

Knox defeated a short-handed O.C.E. team by 19-3 in the first intercollegiate baseball game at Hart House yesterday. The teachers played a man short and were very weak in the pitching department.

The slugging theologians countered heavily on the poor pitching while Davidson pitched a nice game to keep the O.C.E. score down. Weir and McGiven both were triple scorers for the Purple and White. Foyer, playing with a finger in splints, knocked in two of the teachers' runs.

Knox—Knowles, Castor, Adie, Davidson, Weir, McGiven, Hebdon, McDermid and Bush.

O.C.E.—Townshend, Davies, O'Donnahue, Moles, O'Leary, Barton, Medd, Foyer and Stevens.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By T. A. F.

It will be interesting to see how the boxers make out to-night against the ring artists of the New York Athletic Club. The men making the trip are just about the top-notchers at their weights in college boxing circles in Canada, four of them being intercollegiate champions, and it will be a great boost for Canadian amateurs if they can pull out a majority of wins in the five bouts. In previous years the Varsity invasions of American rings have not proved very successful but this looks like one of the strongest squads ever to cross the border. Whether they are clever enough to stand up under the battering they will receive at the hands of the Yankee stars remains to be seen.

The addition of the sensational Marve Peever of Queen's helps our chances greatly. Peever is rated as just about the best lightweight in the country and his knockout record is beginning to resemble that of the famous "Kid" Chocolate. Peever will be stepping up a notch into the welter division, as he did in the assault here, but even at that any man who beats him will have to be able to take plenty.

Three intercollegiate championships remain to be decided before college sport folds up for another year. The swimmers will compete at Kingston on Friday, while the water polo team plays its first game against McGill here on Saturday. The Gymnasium meet will be here the same night at the polo.

While the swimmers appear to have a hard job on their hands to wrest the title from McGill, the water polo boys look good enough to repeat their win of last season. The squad is composed of veteran stars for the most part, Sinclair, Ayers, Armstrong, Graham and Glass all having several years of experience in senior company under their belts. The boys have played together so long that their teamwork gives them a big edge on the other outfits. They will play home and home games the first here on Saturday and the return engagement a week later in Montreal.

University College is so far ahead in the indoor track competition, the final meet of which takes place to-day, that they are almost certain of a win. S.P.S. must win every event to-day to tie U.C. and as they have not entered a man in one of them yet the Red and White appears to be in there.

The showings made in the indoor meets which have been held every Tuesday for the past few weeks have been so good that it has been decided to hold an exhibition meet with Central Y.M.C.A. at Hart House on Friday at 8.00 o'clock. The winners of the events in the intercollegiate meets will represent Varsity and on the results of this meet will depend whether the Blues will send a team to compete in Hamilton the middle of next month.

VIC HEAVY HITTERS WIN FROM ST. MIKE'S

Second Intercollegiate Baseball Goes to Vic with St. Mike's Under Handicap

LITTLE AND GARTON STAR

By scoring heavily on weak pitching Victoria defeated St. Mike's by 17-2 in the second intercollegiate baseball game in the big gym yesterday. Kehos, St. Mike's regular pitcher, is on the sick list and the substitutes made a poor showing against the hard-bitting Victoria outfit.

Garton pitched a splendid game for the Scarlet and Gold and was well supported in the field. Little was the Babe Ruth of the struggle and along with King and Hart crossed the plate three times. Johnson and J. Ryan scored for the Irish.

Victoria—Grills, King, Hart, Little, Grant, Gregory, Coles, Brace and Garton.

St. Mike's—J. Ryan, O'Connor, Fullerton, F. Ryan, Hannah, Roberts, Finnigan, Kelly and Cosentino.

JENNINGS CUP HOCKEY SCHEDULE ANNOUNCED

Dates for the Jennings Cup playoffs have now been arranged. Two group playdowns will take place first before the inter-group games.

St. Michael's play Pharmacy to-day at 1.15 at the Varsity Arena to decide the winners in group IV and Junior Meds meet Junior School to-morrow at 12.00 also at the Arena, for the title in group II. These games will not have any admission charge.

The schedule for the playoffs proper is as follows. All games will start at 4.00 o'clock sharp at the Varsity Arena.

Friday, Feb. 27—Dents (Group I) vs. Victoria (Group V). (Admission 25c or Coupon No. 25.)

Monday, Mar. 2—Knox (Group II) vs. Winner Group IV.

Wednesday, Mar. 4—Winner Group II vs. Winner Friday's game.

Friday, Mar. 6—Final: Winner of Wednesday's game vs. Winner Monday's game.

BASEBALL TITLE KEENLY CONTESTED

U.C. Seniors Have Won Four Straight Games in Series

Though the intercollegiate baseball schedule is not yet completed, the winners of one group have already been decided and of another is quite certain. Senior U.C. captured their group title with four straight wins and Junior S.P.S. have won three in a row to give them a strong lead in their division. The other groups are very closely contested and the struggle for leadership is keen.

Montreal, Feb. 23rd, Special to "The Varsity"

By the score of 2-0, Harvard University defeated McGill, Canadian intercollegiate hockey champions, in an international hockey game here to-day.

FINAL TRACK MEET EVENTS TO BE RUN TO-MORROW

To-morrow will see the end of the indoor track meet when the shot put, pole vault and standing broad jump will take place. These events were held over from previous meets and though it is expected that they will be keenly contested it is not possible that they can seriously affect the final results of the total point standing. By amassing a total of 59 points, U.C. is far ahead of S.P.S., who hold the runner-up position with 26 points. Dents come third with 12, and Vic has 8.

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

program with their original play, The Prompt Corner, starring Margaret Tytler, a burlesque on amateur dramatics. Everyone howled with glee.

A long time ago there was a group of players and other friends of the drama, who found in Hart House Theatre a spiritual home. But after a time the gods who dwell therein were driven out by the devils of pomp and pride and big business; and when the gods were gone, their devotees either followed them into the wilderness or were debased by the Powers of Evil that remained behind.

During the past two years the hosts of the gods have been rallying their forces, so that to-day experimental and artistic ideals seem again in the ascendancy, although set about on every side by enemies demanding a measure of commercial success, so that it is still necessary to produce Slavian comedies and Christmas pantomimes because the public eats up such highly seasoned fare.

The most hopeful indication of the new order yet observed, was the atmosphere that surrounded last Thursday's revue. Player and spectator alike seemed to feel the spirit of the drama moving within. The stage was for a while the arena of life and not a parade ground for the ghosts of unreality. Not since the Cuckoo Clock revues a decade ago has there been such spontaneity. The Players' Revue (the unfortunate Forsyth memorial show of the 1928-1929 season) was avenged.

Edgar Stone though not responsible for the activities of the Experimental Group has invested Hart House Theatre with an atmosphere in which it could flourish. He may yet be the director who will lead the local players out of the wilderness.

"And they told us we had to have a special kind of shoe, too. We had to buy them from Hart House as well. They cost $3.50, and the whole $15.50 was taken out of our wages." "Of course," she added, with an evident desire to be fair-minded, "they laundered our collars and cuffs for us after we had bought them."

YOU ARE INVITED FOR THIS IS OPEN HOUSE NIGHT

This means drop-in, browse around—if you like the looks of a coat or a suit ask one of the models to slip it on—or try it on yourself.

Easter is mighty close and you will want to check up on whether or not Trafalgar Tan, Channel Green or Smoke Blue suits you, and see the New Kenny Top-coat—the most swagger garment that a man could want.

Soon the Bells in the Steeple will mean weddings and your day attire must be right—so think now of the morning coat or the short Director's coat that combines with striped trousers to make a useful and very correct dress for tea-fights and other daylight affairs besides weddings.

No need to mention Golf Togs and other sports wear for—the cold in the head is the harbinger of Spring.

This is just a friendly invitation to show you some of the new wrinkles that the Designers have put in the cloth for 1931.

VICIOUS VERSES

Moderne

Mother, may I go out to spoon?
Why yes, my darling daughter;
But beware the deep wiles of the man and the moon,
And just go as far as you ought!
To My Pest Friend
When you want a loan,
Any old night,
And you crave from me the boon,
I'll give you ten seconds flat
To pick up your hat,
Get out and get under the moon!
ONLY FANCY!

(Society Stuff and Such)

One of Tush's own sleuths contrived to be peering through the parlor window of our eminent Chief of Police at the crucial moment when the great man discovered the unfortunate printer's lapse in one of our dailies which embarrassingly substituted an "i" for the first "r" in his name.

"Well," observed our reporter, blushing at the memory, "no matter what his public stand may be, you will never convince me that our Chief doesn't, deep down in his chest, believe in Free Speech!"

You remember Horatius, B.A., of course, that featuristic and columnistic writer who, in compiling a list of screen comedians, actually omitted Buster Keaton, who is Chaplin's only real rival!

Horatius, following the glorious example of his illustrious ancestor, is holding a bridge on Tuesday next, and All You Girls are invited to attend. Mrs. Lars Porsena ("The Crying Cloud", as she is known professionally), will pour, weather conditions being favourable. Reign checks will be issued to members of the House of Tarquin only.

We are proud to announce that this outstanding social event will be introduced for us by Little Lord Macaulay, Tush's famous four-year-old reporter, of whom great things are expected.

Mrs. Lars Porsena wishes to announce that she will not be responsible for any death incurred by her husband through his habitual and indiscriminate profanity.

One night recently we had the rare fortune to tune in on a broadcast featuring America's Own Eddie Guest. In a voice which we can only compare to that of an elderly eve labouring in the throes of the melancholia induced by recurrent acute indigestion, the People's Poete dismally declaimed his own masterpiece, "A Heap o' Livin'." This the immortal topped with a few choice morsels of his homely philosophy, of which the tidbit was, "It isn't Furniture that makes the Home: it's Footprints."

Especially muddy ones, we've noticed.

CITY GIRL MAKES GOOD

A Port Credit daily carries the report of the recent marriage of Diaphana Dare of Toronto, to Gilbert Gordon Good, formerly local dry-goods clerk and Baptist sidesman. An interesting story lies behind this announcement.

For the first thirty-two years of his life Good was an exemplary character. Assailed constantly in Port Credit by all the wiles of the world, the flesh, and the devil, he resisted with an ease and nonchalance which were the envy of few of his fellow-sidesmen. Combining in himself sobriety, economy, chastity and non-entirety, with countless other virtues, he became the undoubted scion of a large and strenuously virtuous family. As a local wit once summed it up: "None of the Goods is bad, but boy, that Good is good!"

Then came the day when, by permission of his father and mother and the minister, Good ventured beyond the limits of Port Credit. Though he was only supposed to be going to Oakville, the thrill of exotic adventure crept into his blood and urged him on to—Toronto! Arrived in that great city, with a huge roll of bills and no one to guide him, some evil intuition led him to enter one of Toronto's wildest night clubs, on Hoskin Avenue of course.

At once the spirit of abandon seized young Good. Flashing his twenty-five dollars, he was immediately pounced upon by Diaphana Dare, a "hostess", as the shady ladies are politely called. In no time she had him drunk and dumbly devoted to her.

The marriage announced yesterday is the unbalanced result of Good's entanglement with evil. A Port Credit has become associated with the world of cabarets, the theatre (it is rumored that Good has been seen doing walk-ons at the Empire, like another Gilbert before him) and vice in general! Think, ah think of the sad sad hearts of his father and mother! Think of the sorrow of the old minister as he sees his sidesman rapidly becoming an endman! Alas!

It may interest our readers to know that Tush was offered ten dollars by Mr. Good to refrain from printing the above expose. But Tush, always incorruptible, refused with hauteur, and Mr. Good did not see fit to raise his price.

After all, ten dollars!

Russia Threatens Complacent Selfishness of Industrial Order

Russians Are Living Totally Unselfish and Useful

QUOTES DR. W. E. BLATZ

Their System of Education is the Most Ideal of Any Country

"In my opinion the menace which Russia offers is not that of foreign dumping," stated Dr. W. E. Blatz of the Department of Psychology, speaking on Russia and the Five Year Plan at an open meeting of the Fabius Club last night. "Both the United States and England do a certain amount of dumping, and I understand that Canadian bacon is sold cheaper in England than it is here. In Russia we have 150,000,000 people working for an unselfish goal, and what we fear is that we shall have to become more unselfish."

"Picture a young man 24 and his wife 20, with two children and another one coming, living in two rooms, on three dollars a week, with no recreation and scarcely enough to eat. Picture below them another family, with six children, with less to live on and wondering why they should rear children to a world which offers little prospect of a happier lot. That picture," stated Dr. Blatz, "is not Russia but Toronto."

The Russian system of education, Dr. Blatz considers to be the most ideal which any state has ever foreseen or anticipated. Education is compulsory for all over two years of age, and the time it stops is determined solely by the individual's mental age and ability. University students and those doing

SURVEY REVEALS POWER OF PRESS

"No Paper is Controlled or Dominated by Faculty"

CIRCULATION OF 182,000

A total paid circulation of 182,000 is possessed by 38 daily newspapers published on the campuses of American universities, according to a recent survey made by the honorary journalism fraternity at Northwestern University.

Aside from athletics, the student newspaper is by far the most weighty enterprise that students indulge in, the report indicates. While only 38 universities can support daily newspapers, more than 500 institutions have weekly or semi-weekly publications.

The report concludes that at least 25,000 collegians have something to do with a college newspaper.

Of the daily newspapers practically all are genuine business enterprises, paying their own way, and providing a livelihood for their editors and business managers.

In no instance is any one of these papers directly controlled or dominated by the faculty or administration. They occupy an independent and rather firmly established position in college life, is the opinion of the authors of the report.

EDITORIAL IS SAID TO BE EXAGGERATED

"It is a gross exaggeration in my opinion," stated Rev. Dr. McElheran, principal of Wycliffe College, when interviewed by "The Varsity" as regards his opinion on yesterday's editorial on atheism. "I can't be convinced that such a situation can be."

"I believe greatly in the student body; I believe greatly in the student movement and consider them to be the background of our nation in the future. You cannot emphasize that too much. The editorial must have been written hurriedly and without sufficient thought."

"In every group there are people who don't believe, but I question very much if there is any greater number in the student body. I have only been here five months but with my experience in other universities I have found the students here just as faithful believers as anywhere. In fact, there are not very different from my own generation of students, who are among the finest I have ever known."

"I doubt very much if the thing is true. It seems to be greatly exaggerated," stated Father E. J. McCorkell, Superior of St. Michael's College. "Atheism does not exist nearly to the point of the article. Of course there is none at St. Michael's. As far as I know the psychology or philosophy courses have no bearing on atheism."

Professor E. A. Bott, department of psychology, was unwilling to express his opinion on the editorial without further thought, but he believed that ideas of atheism had never come up in his course.

Spring Literary Issue

ANNUAL ELECTION OCCURS AT DEBATE

Added to This, the Presence of Southern Visitors
Adds Interest

FOURTEEN MEN NOMINATED

With the annual elections for the Debates Committee and the appearance of three undergraduates of the University of Porto Rico as interesting sidelights, the last debate of the year in Hart House to-night should provide plenty of excitement.

Antonio J. Colorado, Juan Enrique Geigel and Victor Manuel Gutierrez, are the Spanish students who have come all the way from San Juan, Porto Rico, to debate to-night. E. B. Jolliffe will represent Varsity and will officially introduce the motion.

The international aspect of the debate has aroused a great deal of interest throughout the university particularly since the subject before the house is one which affects both Canada and Porto Rico very closely. The question is: "Resolved that this house condemns the growing domination of the United States in the affairs of this hemisphere."

NOTE CANADIAN POET IS GUEST OF WOMEN

Wilson McDonald, one of Canada's foremost poets, was the honored guest at Miss Kilpatrick's tea yesterday at the Women's Union. He read poem after poem, some of his own selection, some by request.

His audience was delighted when he gave "Whist-a-wee" and "Maggie Swartz," and he read a number of his "Caw-Caw Ballads," giving little incidents that made them easily understood.

He was asked if his poetry was based upon fiction or entirely from facts, to which he replied that his poetry was entirely from his own heart.

'T' OFFICIAL FAILS IN STORY AS BOXERS LOSE IN NEW YORK

The University of Toronto boxing team competed last night against the New York Athletic Club in New York City lost all five bouts. This was learned by telephone at 3:30 this morning.

Due to the fact that the S.A.C. does not provide sufficient funds to enable a member of "The Varsity" sports staff to cover athletic events in which Varsity teams are competing at such distant points, "The Varsity" arranged to have W. H. Martin, gymnasium instructor, wire a special story of the bouts. At 3 o'clock this morning no wire had been received

ASK "FAIR PLAY" TO CO-OPERATE WITH WAGE SCALE SUB-COMMITTEE

That the special sub-committee, on the wage scale, appointed last week at a meeting of the Hart House Hall Committee is desirous of seeing the matter to a speedy conclusion is evidenced by a letter received last night from Mr. Bickersteth, the Warden, calling upon the writer of the letter scoring the present Hart House wage scale, which was published on the front page of Thursday's "Varsity", to testify at the investigation.

The main body of the letter is as follows:

"The sub-committee which has been appointed by the Hall Committee to report to them with regard to the question of the employees in the Great Hall feel that it would help in the preparation of this report if 'Fair Play' would meet the sub-committee to elaborate the statements which he made in his letter which appeared in your issue of 19th February last. The sub-committee is prepared to respect his desire for anonymity and his name would not be known except to the members of the sub-committee. In the event of his being willing to do this, would he communicate with me within the next twenty-four hours and I could then arrange for him to meet the sub-committee."

At a late hour last night it had been impossible to reach the author of the letter, but it is anticipated that "The Varsity" will be in touch with him to-day with a view to determining his position in the light of the Warden's request.

U.C. GRADUATION BANQUET

The University College women's graduation banquet was held last night at the Granite Club. The toasts of the evening were "The University" proposed by Ruth Campbell and the response by A. T. DeLury, Dean of the Faculty of Arts; "University College," proposed by Beatrice Crocker and responded to by M. W. Wallace, Principal of University College; "The Faculty," proposed by Helen Anderson and responded to by Mrs. Kirkwood; "The Alumnae," proposed by Minerva Sinclair and responded to by Miss Agatha Leonard, president of U.C. Alumnae; "The Graduating Year," proposed by Mrs. E. H. Dale, honorary president of the W.U.A. and responded to by Jean Robertson. The toastmistress of the occasion was Irene Fitzsimmons, fourth year president.

ANY CITY SHOULD HAVE FREE SPEECH SAYS NOTED POET

Wilson McDonald Interviews

NEW POEM WRITTEN

Chair of Canadian Literature Needed to Encourage Young Poets

By Jean P. Morton

That any city should have free speech was the opinion of Wilson McDonald, noted Canadian poet, in an interview with "The Varsity" yesterday. Mr. McDonald has a new and as yet unpublished poem on Communism in which he expresses his sentiments as a poet, on the subject that has so shaken Toronto in the past few weeks. As a citizen he gave all honour to the stand that the professors and the university had taken, and denounced the intolerance of the city and officials.

"If we haven't free speech, we go back to the Middle Ages. Roman Catholics show far greater tolerance than the so-called liberal Protestants. It is mere cowardice in institutions which refuse to recognize this age-old British tradition. They are afraid to face the world."

When the reporter raised the query of free speech "within the limits of the law," he replied unhesitatingly: "Unlimited free speech is the only thing. Shaw and all the great thinkers preach it. If sedition does arise, then arrest them. They will never be able to go too far."

Being the first of its kind in Eastern Canada, a Ukrainian Students' Organization exists at this university. Its membership is comparatively small, and scattered among the various faculties, but unknown to the majority of the student public, it has become an influence among the Ukrainian colony at Toronto. During the eighteen months of its existence, it has successfully appeared in lectures, debates and stage presentations, conducted in the Ukrainian language.

The organization is neither a political nor a religious group. Its aims are entirely educational.

Trinity House Fire Blamed on Wiring

Fire broke out in Trinity House, at the corner of St. George and Harbor Streets at 12:00 p.m. yesterday in the floor of the kitchen, on the sixth floor. While the cause of the fire could not be definitely ascertained, it is rumoured that defective wiring may have been responsible.

The chief damage was to the room of a student on the floor immediately below the kitchen. The timely arrival of a city fire section prevented the blaze from assuming more dangerous proportions.

Students generally in residence in the house, did not treat the matter seriously, although a considerable crowd gathered outside the building while the firemen were at work.

DIRGE

THIS IS A DIRGE!

It is a dirge of plain facts.

From now until the first of May there are 65 days, or 1560 hours, or 93,600 minutes.

Subtracting three hours a day for such necessities as physical nourishment and such conventions as clothing oneself, and eight hours a day for escape into the comparatively soothing state of sleep, there remain only 845 hours, or 50,700 minutes.

To enter the personal domain of horrified anticipation, before we leer the phantoms of five essays, two semi-essays optimistically referred to as "notes", three curriculum subjects of which we know as little as the innocent babbling students of the school for child study, and a mass of reading which doubtless runs into millions of pages. In retrospect, the accomplishments of five months consist of three essays and the reading of almost three books.

As we sat in mournful meditation of this kind in a T.T.C. unit yesterday morning, a solemn young man wearing horn-rimmed spectacles sat beside us, and having arranged his bio-something notes with a nice precision, concentrated on a pamphlet entitled "How to Study". With extreme difficulty we restrained a surging impulse to leap upon him with a wild cry—"How do you?"

Of course all forms of literature, and even the peculiar vehicle of editorial, should have a universal appeal. We realize with a touch of pride that this is the dominating characteristic of our present personal tragedy. Not a solitary individual in the University must be touched with all the required pity and terror. Few will be able to restrain a shudder as they refold their "Varsities" beneath the desk and a grim notice of reminder that examination fees are almost due meets their harrowed gaze.

Do you know the wild, tremulous frenzy which attacks all ten fingers as you try to pound the typewriter at the rate of a hundred-odd words a minute? That strange, primitive impulse which sullies the page with extraordinary words ending in "u"—words which, "Chaz" assures us, look like a Japanese way of committing suicide? That, we feel, is the only parallel to the state of any undergraduate's mental equipment sixty-five days from now. Tragic thought—but this is a dirge!

PAPERS UNBIASED AND IMPERSONAL

Journalist States that the Personal Element Gone

BETTER NEWS IS GOAL

That the modern successful newspaper is tending to make itself an impersonal source of unbiased news and general intelligence, as opposed to the "personally conducted" journal of the past, with every news column coloured with the particular editorial viewpoint and political affiliation which it claimed, was the text of Paul Reading's lecture in Baldwin House yesterday. Mr. Reading who is Montreal correspondent for the Southern Press, is delivering four lectures on various aspects of journalism this week. Yesterday's dealt chiefly with the evolution of the newspaper and of the journalistic point of view.

The modern trend in journalism, Mr. Reading explained, is toward more news and better news, less opinion and bias, and a more impersonal approach in the news columns, and for

A commission in Madison, Wisconsin, has recently strongly denounced the "bad" violations of the Volstead Act in that city. Then followed rumours on the campus of the University of Wisconsin that fraternities and all organized houses would be raided by federal agents in search for more bad violations.

Fraternities were warned by phone calls from an unknown and supposedly official source that their houses ought to be cleaned of incriminating liquors. Near the University of Wisconsin is a district called the "Bush" inhabited by Sicilian-Italians who cater to the thirsty students. There is one co-ed at the university who is working her way through college by operating an exclusive speakeasy, according to the Daily Cardinal.

But Wisconsin is not badly off, according to the paper. Other universi-

Lutetia's Degree, a farce comedy by Gilbert Norwood, will be presented at the Guild this week by Miss Dorothea Greening. The rollicking humour of the lines and the absurdity of the situation give the play the typically Norwoodian flavour. While it is slighter and broader than the piece of Professor Norwood's presented last year, The Play's The Thing, the delightfully obvious comedy sets it distinctly apart.

The members of the cast are: Selwyn Dewdney, Dorothea Greening, Josephine Maus and Henry N. Gladstone. —J.M.

"Out of the Blue"

Out of the Blue, the current production in Hart House Theatre, is probably the most unconventional play to be presented there in some years. It will take at least another twenty-four hours' consideration before it will be possible to write even an elementary review of this play.

Resents It, Sir

Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

As one of the students in a much-maligned course, may I be allowed a little space to thank you for all the free publicity you have given us this year?

In this particular case I refer to an unusually complimentary article in "The Varsity" of the above date, headed: "Secondary Staffs Not High Calibre". Before proceeding with my remarks about above-mentioned reference to our course I apologize in advance for treating so seriously an article so flagrantly ludicrous.

In the first place, sir, I resent the fact that the "Varsity" went to Dr. Wallace with the assumption that High School teachers know less now than they did in his time.

In the second place, with all due deference to the Dean of U.C. I cannot see how he is qualified to speak authoritatively on such a subject since a comparison such as was made in the article implies a knowledge not only of teachers in the 80's but also a first hand knowledge of the scholarship and ability of present day teachers in the High Schools. This latter knowledge I cannot see that Dr. Wallace has, his present position hardly affording him contact with that class of people.

It is evident to me that "The Varsity" has a dearth of material for its front page, a fact which has been apparent from the first of the school term. It seems most peculiar that all criticism that has been publicly levelled at this faculty has come from portions of this community neither directly concerned with us nor in any way influenced by our "low standards". As yet, the Department of Education has uttered no public protests, nor has our system of secondary school education shown any signs of demoralization by the "lack of knowledge" on the part of graduates of this college.

May I reiterate, in conclusion, that "The Varsity" has been guilty of a most unworthy affront against us by its uncalled for assumption while Dr. Wallace has been guilty of adding insult to injury by subscribing to this false posture by his answer as quoted in "The Varsity".

Yours truly,

A. J. ZIMMERMAN, B.A., O.C.E.

Editor's Note: The writer of the above is obviously nominating himself for the New Purulia. He appears to be another individual who is unable to differentiate between news writing and editorial writing. However, we are glad to accept his apology for treating so seriously an article so flagrantly ludicrous. We can only regret his seeming inability to prove this flagrant ludicrousness.

ties in the States openly admit that speakeasies are institutions on their campuses. The commission of investigation into the state of affairs at Wisconsin assures the university so, and the commission ought to be in a position to speak authoritatively.

Student opinion at the university opines that there is more drinking among the students who do not live in organized residences. Others say that students come to college and become contaminated by contact with unfortunate acquaintances. A former editor of the Wisconsin believes that Directly underneath the cat's tail is a question mark. The surprising thing about it is that the question mark is actually a question mark and its intentions are strictly honourable. Do not mistake it for an impressionistic delineation of Ruth Draper imitating that great American institution, Al Capone, shooting up a newspaper office because they spelled his name wrong.

C-C

The question mark represents President Hoover receiving representatives of several American colonies including Mexico and Canada. The Great Engineer is holding a six-pound trout, a sample of the fine work he has been doing since he took up office.

C-C

The question mark also represents that ardent pacifist, Benito Mussolini, addressing a flock of news cameramen while a crowd of 100,000 innocent bystanders provide the necessary background. Il Duce is telling his audience that the best propaganda for peace is another war. He demands the immediate abolition of all French nationalist clubs including the League of Nations.

Why is the cat smiling? Apparently she is elated over something. Observe how her whiskers bristle with joy and how her whole being quivers with excitement. Would you like to know the secret of her ecstasy? Send ten cents in stamps and we will mail you our illustrated booklet: "How to Make Your Fortune in Hart House or The Road to Luxury."

Those wishing to vote to-night are reminded that ballot forms will only be given out to those bona fide members of Hart House who enter the debates room before the beginning of the third speech of the night. They are, therefore, strongly advised to be there before 8.15. Voting takes place from 9.30 until the close of the debate.

Fourteen men have been nominated for the six vacant positions on the committee and a keen contest is expected.

The cost of living for students at the University of Paris is not to be compared with that of students in the United States. A student in the Latin quarter of Paris can live on $230 for two semesters, and his tuition unless he takes technical training, is $5.60 for the year.

the cause of the drinking among students lies in the fact that they are away from home. It was generally conceded on the campus of Wisconsin that drinking exists in the form of an evil there and that it cannot be cured.

U. C. SCORES SWEEPING VICTORY IN INDOOR TRACK MEETS

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

Varsity senior basketball squad made a great showing in their third clash with Margaret Eaton last night when they came out on top by a score of 39 to 29. After a rather poor start, they rallied strongly in the second period and ran up a lead.

Having made such a splendid showing in the city league this season, great things are expected of them in the intercollegiate league. Varsity teams always seem to make a good showing in Kingston and this year promises to be no exception.

Eleanor Sedgewick, who has starred at side-centre for the Blues for three years, is captain of the team this year, and her work in the games to date has certainly justified her choice.

The intermediate basketball squad will meet Margaret Eaton this afternoon at 5 o'clock on the latter's floor. The intermediates have a real chance to take the M.E.S. squad since the latter have not shown up so well in their last few games.

The interfaculty swimming meet is scheduled for March 4, Wednesday of next week. Three of the colleges have had meets already and there will be probably six teams composed of four each.

St. Michael's won both the doubles games against Meds last night, although both were quite closely contested. Fran O'Connor and Bobbie Long for St. Mike's opposed Effie Winchester and Helen McKinley for Meds in the senior tilt, winning both games by a very close margin, and Aline McLaughlin and Agnes Shepard of the Double Blue, beat Betty Lowes and Betty Stewart for the Medettes, in the junior game, also by a close score.

Meds triumphed in the singles, when Rome McCullough defeated Betty Shanahan of St. Mike's in straight sets. The game was not as close as either of the doubles, and the Meds player displayed great strength in her win.

SCHOOL AND OENTS TIE FOR BASEBALL HONOURS

Senior School trounced Pharmacy to the tune of 10 to 3 in an interfaculty baseball game played in the big gym at Hart House yesterday. This game gives School a tie for the group leadership with Dents.

School scored three runs in the first inning on hits by Adams, Campbell, Davey and Mosser, and seven more in the third when the entire line-up batted safely. Pharmacy scored their runs in the second on hits by Helmer, Allin, Crow, Garinger and Cuthbert.

Senior S.P.S.—Adams, Wilson, Campbell, Davey, Mosser, Edmonds, Carmichael, Jansen and Proudfoot.

Pharmacy—Cuthbert, Walton, Monroe, Wilcox, Helmer, Allin, Crow, Johnston and Garinger.

SCHOOL'S BELATED ATTEMPT TO WIN TRACK MEET FAILS

University College Men Stave Off Assault of Runners-up

OENNIS WINS VAULT

Final Results Find U. C. Leading by 21 Points

Despite a determined assault on U.C.'s apparently safe lead by the men of School the old Red and White weathered the storm in yesterday's interfaculty indoor track meet and finished with 21 points ahead of S.P.S. This was the final meet which has been continuing with various events, for some weeks and with only the shot putt, standing high jump, and pole vault, to take place, it was thought that University College would continue their winning ways and add to their already large margin of victory, but S.P.S. put up a determined effort to add up points and for a few events had all the dope going astray.

In the first event of the afternoon, the shot putt, Ed Peever, School, heaved the weight 35 feet 7 inches to win the event. M. Fulton of Meds came second with 33.8, while Russ Eaton of School was a close third.

It was the same story in the standing high jump when Austin kept School on their winning ways by leaping the very creditable height of 4 feet 7 inches, to win the event. Jim Watson, U.C.'s little coloured flash, followed Austin closely and leaped over the 4.6 bar before he was eliminated. McLaren of Meds was third.

In the pole vault U.C. was able to garner the five points which go with first place when Bob Dennis leaped 10 feet to win the event. But just to show how closely Bob was chased in his leaps School men placed second and two of them also tied for third place. J. Byrne came second in the vault while C. W. Dolbear and Gord Black, School freshmen, tied for third.

The final results of the meet are: U.C. 62 points; S.P.S. 41; Dents 12; Victoria 8; Meds 4. The results of yesterday's meet were:

Shot-putt—1, Ed Peaker, School; 2, M. Fulton, Meds; 3, Russ Eaton, School. Distance, 35 feet 7 inches.

Standing high jump—1, J. Austin, School; 2, J. Watson, U.C.; 3, McLaren, Meds. Height, 4 feet 7 inches.

Pole vault—1, Bob Dennis, U.C.; 2, J. Byrne, School; 3, C. W. Dolbear, School and Gord Black, School. Height, 10 feet.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By A. C. G.

The interfaculty indoor track and field meet which has been spread over some weeks, finished yesterday. University College scored a notable win, finishing 21 points ahead of School, their nearest rivals. U.C. took an early lead in the events and held it to the end. Incidentally the winners of the interfaculty events will compete against Central "Y" athletes in an exhibition meet at Hart House Friday night. The success of the Varsity performers against the "Y" team will determine whether a Blue and White squad will go to Hamilton the middle of next month.

Saturday night is going to be a big night at Hart House, and all for four bits! The McGill waterpoloists will be the guests of the local marines in the first game for the intercollegiate title. At the same time as the game is being played the Varsity gymnasts will be striving to wrest the intercollegiate laurels from the crack Montreal team. You take your pick. If you prefer to see how the giant swing should be done, you will watch the acrobats. But if you would rather see the poloists in action, you will take your chances on being splashed. In any case both sports are sure-fire attractions. To round off a pleasant evening there will be dancing in the big gym until midnight. We'll see you there.

St. Michael's College finally emerged on top of the heap of Group IV of the interfaculty hockey league by defeating Pharmacy 3 to 0 yesterday. The Irish are making a determined effort to retain the Jennings Cup which they won last year for the first time. To-day at 12 o'clock Junior Meds and Junior School will settle matters in Group II and then we shall be all ready for the playoffs which commence Friday.

VARSITY GIRLS DEFEAT MARGARET EATON SCHOOL

Varsity women's intercollegiate basketball team showed their superiority again by defeating Margaret Eaton School by the score of 39-29 in the playoff of the city league at Parkdale Collegiate last night. Both teams put up a fast, snappy brand of basketball and with their six-man defence working well, Varsity were able to break up M.E.S. play.

M.E.S. had the edge in the first period due to Varsity's sloppy passing. In the last period Varsity steadied down and scored a run of baskets to trail M.E.S. 21-18 at half time.

Varsity came back strong at half-time and played so consistently that they were never seriously threatened by M.E.S. The forward line combination was working much better in the second half and scored by neat passes. Fouls were handed out frequently and Varsity made all their foul shots except two, count.

Varsity's points were fairly evenly divided, Louise Crouch accounting for 15, Eleanor Sedgewick 14 and Wilma Hazlett 10.

Viola Harvey scored the most points for M.E.S. and Ruth Tingley and Dot Treble turned in nice efforts.

Varsity—Wilma Hazlett (10), Louise Crouch (15), forwards; Eleanor Sedgewick (14), side centre; Jean Allen, Eleanor Wallace, defence; Loreto McGarry, centre; subs, Betty Thomas, Bea Longley and Sally Ballard.

Margaret Eaton—Ruth Tingley (8), Viola Harvey (11), forwards; Isabel Moyer (10), side centre; Ruth Hamilton, jumping centre; Dot Treble, Margaret Ryan, defence; subs, Margaret Withers, Theo Elmsley and Nora Fletcher.

UNIVERSITY OON BECOMES VERY NOTED AUTHOR

When interviewed by "The Varsity" Mr. Green said: "I did not wish to give simply a description of the best novelists only, but to talk also of novelists who in their day achieved tremendous popularity, but whose novels are now considered worthless."

Although Mr. Green received some hostile criticism from London the following is taken from Everyman, a critical literary publication in London:

"French Novelists from the Revolution to Proust," by Frederick C. Green is the work of a writer who is already recognized as among the finest of living critics of French literature. Professor Green writes with vast knowledge, which he carries so lightly that he entertains as much as he instructs. He starts with the fiction of the revolution, takes us through the romantic period, studies the anti-romantic spirit of Stendhal and Balzac, examines the decay of idealism and the growth of naturalism, and concludes with a chapter on recent tendencies in which he has a masterly analysis of Proust. His point of view is expressed in the statement that "the history of a literary genre is a precious social document". This means that he brings to the study of literature a background of history that gives enlightening significance to everything that he says.

IRISH HOCKEYISTS DEFEAT PHARMACY

St. Michael's Win Group IV Championship After Previous Tie

WINNERS MEET KNOX

Outclassing Pharmacy by a score of 3 to 0 yesterday afternoon at the Arena, St. Michael's College took the Group IV hockey championship and earned the right to meet Knox in the interfaculty playoffs next Monday. This was the second meeting of the two teams to decide the group winner, the first game resulting in a scoreless tie. The Irish played a strong offensive game from the start yesterday and looked much the better all the way.

Willett again starred for St. Mike's scoring one goal and being credited with an assist for another. With Dillon as a partner, he played a great defensive game in front of the nets. Kehoe, at centre, turned in another nice effort and was rewarded with a goal. Harrison kept Pharmacy off the score sheet with his brilliant saves.

For Pharmacy, Munro, Robinson and Ward were the best. The former played a great game on defence and made several dangerous rushes. Peacock in goal made some nice saves and had little chance on the three goals registered.

St. Michael's—Goal, Harrison; defence, Willett and Dillon; centre, Kehoe; wings, Cerre and Whelan; subs, Kelly, Shook and Dore.

Pharmacy—Goal, Peacock; defence, Munro and Moore; centre, Robinson; wings, Ward and McQuillan; subs, Reynolds, Sanderson and Johnson.

PAPERS ARE UNBIASED AND NOT PERSONAL

The future a stronger position for the newspaper and its editors. This trend he attributed to an increasing demand from the reading public for unbiased news, due to the spread of education and literacy.

The modern form of the newspaper is made possible, Reading declared, by improved mechanical facilities for printing and the constantly growing importance of advertising which began with the development of the department store. In an informal discussion which followed the lecture he denied that the advertising power of big business interests was a sinister effect in moulding news policy, as compared with the days before advertising.

M'GILL AND BLUES PLAY WATER POLO

This Game First of Home and Home Series Between Collegiate Rivals

MONTREAL TEAM STRONG

The water polo game between Varsity seniors and McGill at Hart House Saturday night will be followed by music at 10.00 o'clock. The intercollegiate gymnasium meet takes place the same night so a wide variety of entertainment is offered for the one price of admission.

The polo game is the first of home-and-home struggles for the intercollegiate title and the men of Latchford are confident that they can repeat their victory of last year when they successfully retained the trophy. Varsity has won the championship three times in the past four years, and a win this season will be the third in succession. Advance notices from Montreal indicate that the Red and White are going to make a stronger bid than ever this year. The McGill-men have Monroe Bourne, one of the fastest swimmers in Canada, on their line-up and the Blue stars expect to have a hard struggle on their hands.

GRADUATE STUDIES DEFEAT WYCLIFFE IN RAGGED GAME

Graduate Studies basketball five scored an easy 22 to 9 victory over Wycliffe College in a ragged interfaculty match at Hart House yesterday afternoon. Both teams played crude basketball and the shooting of all the players except Macdonald of Grad. Studies, was erratic. Macdonald ringed the basket for 8 points. Barrett on the forward line and Thompson, a guard, also turned in effective games upon raising the standard of literature, Canadian literature for example?"

"Of course it has some influence," he replied, "but the whole system of education needs to change. You are away behind the times here. It is a disgrace to Canada that there is no Chair of Canadian Literature. No other country in the world is without one. There should have been one in the University of Toronto for the past forty years. Dr. Roberts is a great poet. He should have been one."

"That would make a great deal of difference?"

"Certainly. It would inspire young poets as nothing else could. In England and the States all young poets are presented with them. There should be one in each college. In Canada some poets are writing as great poetry as ever was written. England admits it. —Who? Edgar McInnis and Duncan Campbell Scott and there is Kenneth Sissior, the Australian, a coming man." post-graduate work are paid a salary by the state.

Although religious education of anyone under 18 years of age is forbidden and there is no common holiday, he found services being conducted in some of the old cathedrals. To say that Russia has no religion is taking a very narrow view. They have substituted Leninism for the Bible.

The result of the five year plan Dr. Blatz did not attempt to prophesy. At the end of the period in all probability another plan will be forthcoming and literature is being issued to prevent too much optimism.

For a monetary reward Russia has substituted an increased social status. Their incentive is the satisfaction for effort expended towards a common weal. The selfish interests of the state have been substituted for the selfish interests of self and family.

It may sound incredible, but it is an undeniable fact that one eminent American university has established a course of open-air classes in rest and relaxation for its girl students who find the business of study too exhausting.

Editorial Applies No More to the Students Than to Average Citizen

Students Have Deep Religious Feelings and Respect for Their Faith

NO ANTI-THEISM GROUP

College Should not be Blamed Because Students Question Religion

"The editorial applies no more to students than it does to the average citizen, and no more to our times than it does to any age," stated Dr. W. B. Lane, Professor of Ethics at Victoria College, giving his opinion on Tuesday's editorial on atheism. "All through the ages there has been conflict between the material and the spiritual world."

"If by practical atheism is meant concern for one's bread and butter before regard for religion the editorial might be partly justified. Students on the average are no worse than the general citizenry in regard to this practical atheism, in deed I find that many of the students I come in contact with have a deep religious feeling and a respect for their faith."

"Because a student criticizes religion there is no reason, logically, why the college should be blamed. It might happen in business," Professor G. S. Brett pointed out. "Much depends on what the editor means by atheism. Many people who play golf on Sunday and never set foot in church might object strongly to being called atheists."

Professor Brett did not believe that there were many true atheists among students and that there was certainly no anti-theism group here such as was active in the States a few years ago.

NO REPORT ON HART HOUSE WAGE PROBE

A Report is Being Compiled which will be Considered by Committee

FINISHED THIS WEEK

No report has as yet been handed in by the sub-committee on the Hart House wage question, but a report is being compiled as quickly as possible to be handed to the Hall Committee for consideration. This is the gist of the remarks quoted to "The Varsity" by the three members of the investigating committee, Dr. G. C. Cameron of the Medical Arts Faculty; E. G. Sinclair, V Dents; and G. M. Graham, V Meds.

Dr. G. C. Cameron stated: "We cannot make any statement yet. We are investigating the situation as quick as we can and shall try to finish up the question this week. We have every desire to settle matters right and just as soon as we can complete a detailed report, we will hand this report over to the Hall Committee, and they will be able to hand it over to you for publication."

E. G. Sinclair: "As you noticed in the paper, we had one meeting, and we will have another meeting this week. We cannot say anything until the report is given in because the sub-committee has only the power to investigate, not to act."

G. M. Graham, V Meds, assented with his co-workers that although the report had not been completed yet, they were trying their hardest to clear matters up fully at the earliest possible moment.

DEBATE COMMITTEE HELD ELECTIONS LAST NIGHT

Elections to the Hart House Debates Committee for 1931-32 were held in conjunction with the debate last night. The six members elected were: R. L. Seaborn, L. M. Tarsilis, G. K. Dell, E. S. Stewart, S. Hughes and S. M. Hermant.

The members of the present committee previously chosen to serve again were J. L. Stewart and C. L. M. Douglas.

LAST HART HOUSE DEBATE NATIONAL IN CHARACTER

Subject was the Domination of United States in this Hemisphere

MOTION UPHELD BY 183-48

Delegation from Porto Rico Took Part in the Debate

An international flavour of a new sort was given to the Hart House debate last night as the House by a vote of 183 to 48 upheld the motion "That this House condemns the growing domination of the United States in the affairs of this hemisphere".

The University of Toronto debating enthusiasts welcomed for the first time a delegation of students from the University of Porto Rico whose participation in the debate lent a colouring to the subject at hand which made this, the last debate of the year, a memorable event. The earnestness and conviction of the visitors coupled with an eloquence in keeping with the fiery Spanish nature kept the enthusiasm of the audience at a high tension throughout the entire proceedings.

Before the motion was moved, Angus Ross, IV U.C., welcomed the visitors, speaking in Spanish. Mr. Pattee, in charge of the Porto Rican delegation, replied in the same tongue, expressing pleasure and extending his thanks on behalf of the visitors. The visitors were warmly greeted by the applause of the House.

E. B. Jolliffe, in introducing the motion, warned the House not to be afraid to criticize the United States and denied that the discussion of such a topic would lead to international complications. He scored the United States as an imperialistic nation in the guise of a pacifist one whose economic power has enabled it to reach a position out of proportion to its merits. Canadian criticism of the United States is superficial, he said. "The American radio," said Mr. Jolliffe, "has corrupted the King's English and prevented English humour. We tend to accept American things in toto because that nation has mastered the art of ballyhoo."

It was pleasant to hear Mr. Geigel's "It is not a long step from paradox to nonsense", in return to his fellow-countryman's abortive attempt to appear boldly Chestertonian.

STUDENTS AFFIRM MUCH NON-RELIGION

Great Number of Students Think It Clever to Follow Atheism

"TEMPEST IN A TEA POT"

Students interviewed by "The Varsity" concerning the editorial of Tuesday which stated that atheism through the medium of the university was greatly affecting the religion and beliefs of the undergraduates were of the opinion that there was most certainly a great deal of non-religion but very little out and out atheism.

"It is my opinion," stated Albert Glass, II Political Science, "that the editor got atheism mixed up with non-religion. Many do not follow any religious sect and yet they do not deny God, but claim that they have nothing to do at all with atheism. It seems to be hard to accurately define atheism."

"There are without a doubt a great number around the university who think it's smart to pretend to follow atheistic ideas, but to even hint that we are influenced by the professors along this line is just all rot," said Alex Shearer, III U.C. "There are more of this type of people out of university than in and why higher education should be blamed for it is beyond me. Sometimes we read books beyond me. Sometimes we read books with a little thought our faith is strengthened rather than weakened. It looks to me as if 'The Varsity' is just trying to make a 'tempest in a tea pot'."

THEATRE PASS REWARD

Feat Roused Much Giggling and Pointing Among the Women

The old custom of segregation of men and women at the university library has been broken!

Following a challenge made by T. A. Fleming and J. C. Bowes, both of IV C. and F., that no undergraduate has ever made use of the women's reading room at the library, Alex L. Nidleman, I Meds, set a precedent by spending over sixteen minutes surrounded by giggling co-eds.

The challenge signed by Fleming and Bowes reads as follows:

"A double pass to the Utown Theatre will be donated by the undersigned to the first man who shall spend a period of fifteen minutes in the reading room in the University Library reserved for the use of women. The feat must be performed between the hours of two and four, on or before Tuesday, March 3rd. Reliable witnesses or satisfactory evidence must be produced to prove that the terms of the contest have been fulfilled."

"This contest is absolutely open and above-board. The prize is in the hands of the Editor-in-chief of this paper who will award it to the successful contestant."

C. L. BURTON TO SPEAK AT COMMERCE CLUB

C. L. Burton, president of the Robt. Simpson Company, and well-known Toronto commercial leader, will be the guest speaker at the Commerce Club smoker in the music room, Hart House, to-night. Mr. Burton will take as his subject one of world-wide interest, the cancellation of the war debts.

An address on the same subject addressed to a conference of American bankers in Minneapolis, created considerable comment, and it is expected that more than unusual interest will be taken by members of the club. The subject will have a special interest to those students of the problem of reparations.

The smoker will commence at 8.00 o'clock and is open to all members of the Commerce Club.

Varsity to Hold FIFTIETH JUBILEE ON MARCH 27 NEXT

Editorial Staff Made Error in Volume Number Last Year

LARGE JUBILEE EDITION

Attitude has not Changed Against Provincial Papers

"The Varsity" is very nearly fifty years old. But this momentous jubilee almost slipped by unnoticed because of a mistake made on September 28, 1923. On that Friday, appeared the first issue of the academic year 1923-24—the first issue of Volume XLVIII of "The Varsity".

Unfortunately the editorial staff of that date forgot the forty-seventh birthday of the paper and neglected to see that the words Vol. XLVII were changed to read Vol. XLVIII, on the left hand side of the date line at the top of the first page.

In 1929, the volume number was duly changed to XLVIII, but it was a year late. Last September the number was again changed to read XLIX, and so it has remained all this year until a reporter by chance discovered the first error and deduced that "The Varsity" was nearing the end of Vol. XL.

To-day is the last occasion on which the incorrect volume number will appear. To-morrow "The Varsity" will modestly admit its true age of fifty years; and on March 27 next, to celebrate in fitting style its first half century of contentious service to succeeding generations of students, will issue a special anniversary number four times the normal size of the paper. Since the first issue appeared in September 1880, "The Varsity" has undergone very many changes in size and make-up. But the tone of the paper has not changed so much as might be imagined.

Even in the days of the good Victoria, sensational headlines were in vogue. In issue Number 7 of Volume I, a technical examination of the Toronto water system is headed:

DRINKABLE SEWAGE
In that first volume amid advertisements for Cab Stands, Wine, and Phrenologists, appeared articles on What Constitutes a Kiss, Nama-Way-Qua-Donk, Caprae Hirci, and The Possibility of Immortality.

In the academic year 1880-81, "The Varsity" also recorded the details of the fight for co-education in University College, welcomed St. Michael's College into the federation of colleges composing the University of Toronto, (Continued on Page 4)

TORONTO CAMPUS FREE FROM SERIOUS MISHAP

Science Staffs Say Accident Record of Recent Years Creditable

Following up a story in yesterday's "Varsity" which reported a serious accident at Ohio State University, a reporter questioned members of the staff in Physics, Chemistry, Mining and Electrical Engineering on the subject of accidents. All the professors agreed that their departments had been remarkably free from serious accidents. Minor mishaps had occurred, but these are regarded as inevitable considering the innumerable opportunities.

The professors were quite serious in their answers to "The Varsity" and Professors Rogers of the staff in Chemistry gave the information that there had been no serious accidents "thankfully and prayerfully".

FOURTH YEAR VIC ENTERS THE MOVIES

Graduating Year to Have Moving Pictures Taken on Campus

IF WEATHER PERMITS

Repeating the successful filming of the graduating year of Victoria College last year, the senior reception committee has made arrangements to again film this year's fourth year. After clipping and titling the final pictures will be shown at the senior reception on March 6th. Skits, group shots, prominent members of the year and antics afield will be among the subjects for taking.

When interviewed by "The Varsity" J.W. Binning, who is in charge of all arrangements, stated that plans were well developed for smooth and efficient running of the scheme. "If there are any persons who would like to put on any individual or group effort, whether comical or serious, before the camera, I shall certainly be glad to have them get in touch with me immediately so that they may be included in the shots to be taken."

"All year members will be on hand Friday at 2 p.m. at the college so that filming may be commenced immediately. Naturally we hope for continued good weather, but if the weather man decides otherwise we shall postpone our plans until Monday afternoon."

Not Preaching Atheism

The influence of "The Varsity" is great indeed. It was during an Honour English class discussion of "King Lear". R. S. Knox, Professor of English in U.C., was speaking of the cruelty and malignity of the gods, and suddenly interrupted himself, "Oh, I'm not preaching atheism".

TEARING THE FABRIC

The hounds of purity and light are in full cry. This paper has "exploded a firecracker that might well tear the fabric of the University to pieces", if we are to believe the unpolluted press. "I cannot be convinced that such a situation can be!" exclaims an eminent ecclesiastic in horror.

We have said that, if the truth were known, the majority of university students on this campus are practical atheists. This has been enough to arouse a hue and cry second in magnitude only to that once aroused by the horrid assertion that no man ought to be condemned unheard.

We are going to hear statements like this for some time to come now: "... Parents throughout Ontario may well conclude that the University of Toronto is not a desirable resort for youth. ... Until the University has been purged of the mongers of atheism, it has ceased to be a worthy recipient of state funds."

We are going to hear a number of variations, too, upon the theme introduced by the head of one of our theological colleges: "I believe greatly in the student body; I believe greatly in the student movement, and consider them to be the background of our nation in the future. ... The editorial must have been written hurriedly and without sufficient thought."

We are sorry to disappoint the gentleman who, in what he probably believed to be a burst of Christian charity, insisted that the said editorial had been written in the manner outlined—but we must insist at this point that the editorial was written carefully and as the inevitable outcome of several years' familiarity with the subject. There was nothing haphazard about the language employed. There was nothing but the profoundest conviction behind it.

We fail to see any reason why it is impossible to "believe greatly in the student body" and at the same time recognize that the attitude of the individual members of that student body towards the idea of God is, according to the best definition of the term, one of practical atheism.

We agree entirely with the definition of atheism offered by the padre of Hart House when he told a representative of the downtown press that "an atheist is one who denies the existence of God". We are grateful, too, for his carefully pointing out to the same press representative that the phrase "practical atheism", as used in the controversial editorial, had a very definite meaning of its own. A practical atheist is one who, to all intents and purposes in his daily living and attitude toward the concept of God, denies the existence of a Deity.

This latter attitude, we maintain, is the attitude of the majority of the students of this University, whether these students realize it or not, and despite the fact that they do not admit it. This condition we believe to be true of university students and university graduates the world over, but it is only for our own University that we have ventured to speak. We do not believe that the average university professor, no matter what his subject may be, ever sets out deliberately to undermine the religious faith of the students who sit under him. Nevertheless, we do not feel that it can be successfully demonstrated that the attitude of these same professors is correctly described as anything but an atheistic one.

No more successfully can it be maintained that the parson who enters his pulpit on Sunday to give a laboratory report on his rationalizations during the past week is anything but an atheist. If you believe that the term atheist has been prostituted through association with sundry half-mad, semi-barbaric proselytizers to a militant anti-theism in Kansas and elsewhere, you are at perfect liberty to employ the term practical atheism. Under the general category of atheism there are the two separate and distinct positions, non-theism and anti-theism. If you are clever enough to distinguish the difference in individual cases, that is your prerogative. Our only warning is against taking refuge in the old favourite, agnosticism, unless a condition of active doubt and inquiry can be established.

If the hounds of purity and light in the down-town press wish to make game of this in their private feud with the dons of this University, we do not venture to criticize them. We leave it to themselves to reconcile the ethics of their own position with the attributes of the God they profess to worship.

Art, Music and Drama

H.C. Players' Guild

A delightful and amusing production, Luteia's Degree, by Gilbert Norwood, was presented yesterday at the Players' Guild.

The play is a farce and utterly ludicrous. The lines are filled with humour and on the surface entirely devoid of any sanity; but reading between the lines there is subtlety, and sly satire upon modern conventions and modern universities. Brief and witty—the action is swift; and the end a perfect finale to the ideas or lack of ideas that the play conveys.

A gangster tries to pistol a professor into giving his sister a degree in ethics. But the professor is obdurate. Finally he decides to join the gangster and his family in founding a new university where he is to be the first president, and "no examinations!"

Miss Dorothea Greening directed the production and took the part of the "Ph.D.", the wife of the gangster. The gangster himself was done with spirit by Henry Gladstone, and Josephine Maus was the feeble-minded Luteia who couldn't get her degree without the founding of a new university. Selwyn Dewdney as the professor, was unconvincing except in the last lines. "No examinations!"

The play ran with smoothness and the sets were remarkable, especially the small red desk of the professor cluttered with examination papers.

'Critical Philosophical Concept' Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir:

In the editorial in Monday's issue several statements appear, which are, I submit, open to question. In the first place, that "the majority of graduates in arts are practical atheists" is unproven. Undoubtedly, many of them do not subscribe to orthodox doctrines, nor do they hold either the Mosaic or what might be called the Sunday School conception of the Deity. But can they be condemned as atheists on this account?

The idea of God is a primitive one and probably developed from a ghost theory as Spencer suggests, but it cannot be condemned, because of its early history. As science advances, and as the individual's knowledge increases, the primitive idea of God recedes and is replaced by a worthier conception. This may be either the principle of good, or of law and order in the cosmos or as the inconceivable author of the universe, immanent in it yet transcendent to it. The mystery of an unknown yet known God is the basis of reverential devotion which feels that all sensuous and spiritual representations must be inadequate to infinite Being. The visible and invisible images of Roman Catholicism and not less the invisible mental representations of popular Protestantism, when presented as adequate to God, are rejected by the thinking men, and, I believe, by the majority of the graduates in arts.

This heterodoxy then, this refusal to accept the anthropomorphic idea of the Deity in favour of the critical philosophical concept cannot justify the use of the term "atheist", but the contrary.

The paucity of those who "possess anything approaching personal experiential belief", which is apparently deplored, might be explained by the increased acceptance of the philosophical concept of God, or else by the fact that persons who have such experiences are more likely now to be placed in institutions than formerly.

The charge that many graduates do not attend church may have some grounds of justification. But the claim that most of those that do go are actuated by an ulterior and sordid motive is unworthy of comment. Apart from considerations of church attendance, it is improbable that we have ceased to believe in a Divine Being. Nor is it likely, even with courses in Irreligious Knowledge, that we are tending towards atheism. "Atheism", as Bacon says, "is rather in the lip than in the heart of man", so that "depth in philosophy bringeth men's minds about to religion". —KNOX

By DeC. H. R.

The one ray of light on the intercollegiate horizon was Varsity's sensational triumph in the boxing, wrestling and fencing assault-at-arms. Of the ten senior intercollegiate championships that have been decided McGill has won seven, Varsity two, and Queen's one. So the Blue and White win in the assault was particularly sweet. There are three more senior titles to be contested, the swimming and diving, the water polo and the gymnastic. In previous years the greatest number of titles that ever went to one university was eight, Varsity having performed this feat twice and McGill once. This year the Redmen are confident of breaking the existing record by hanging up a grand total of nine titles. They concede Varsity the water polo trophy but are counting on retaining the gymnastic and swimming cups.

The water polo, gymnastic and swimming and diving championships will be decided within the next two weeks. The swimming and diving meet is being held in Kingston next Friday on the occasion of the opening of Queen's new pool. The Tricolour will not compete this year. The first game of the water polo series and the gymnastic meet takes place Saturday night at Hart House with the second polo game being played in Montreal on March 7th. McGill has the same swimming and gymnastic teams that won the championships last year and Varsity will have to be much improved if they are to wreck the Montrealers' chances of realizing their ambition to win nine senior titles.

Last Monday night Harvard defeated McGill 2 to 0 in an exhibition hockey match in Montreal. McGill, with a much more inferior squad than the one that met Harvard downed Varsity 4 to 2. Now it is more apparent why Varsity fared so badly against the American sextets on their annual Christmas invasion. The truth is that the American college teams are better than the Canadian. McGill plays M.A.A.A. for the Quebec championships and the right to meet the O.H.A. winner for the Eastern Canada honours. Meanwhile Hamilton, Marlboros and Port Colborne are battling it out in this neck of the woods. The Canadian winner will have to be good if it is going to go to Lake Placid for the Olympic games in an effort to retain Canada's supremacy at the winter pastime. The fact is that Harvard will give any Canadian team a battle before they are beaten and we are beginning to be convinced that the States offers a real threat to our supremacy in this field of sport.

Not that a thing like that should detract our interest from our own classic hockey struggles. Now that Junior S.P.S. and St. Mike's have proven their determination to enter the playdowns for the Jennings Cup, the annual inter-faculty hockey fracas can commence.

To-morrow afternoon at the Varsity Arena Victoria College play Dents in the first game of the playoffs. The undefeated Knox sextet will play St. Mike's in the second game of the series on Monday afternoon, Junior S.P.S. having drawn a bye.

McGILL, WESTERN, VARSITY BASKETEERS AT QUEEN'S

Special to "The Varsity"
Kingston, Ont., Feb. 25. — Friday and Saturday of this week the Queen's women's basketball team are hostesses to the teams from McGill, Western and Varsity, who come to Kingston for the annual intercollegiate basketball tournament. The visitors have all been lodged in the Ban Righ Hall, and very complete arrangements have been made for their entertainment.

The first game will be played Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock when McGill meets Western and the second Friday night at 8, when Varsity and Queen's clash. Winners meet winners for the championship and losers play losers in a consolation game, beginning at 2.30 Saturday afternoon.

Queen's team looks better this year than it has for some time. Their strong point is the defence line, consisting of Margaret Brown, captain and defence, playing her second year with the team; Gladys Munnings, her third year with the team, who played centre in her first year. At sub defence is Isa Galbraith, a freshman. The forward line seemed weak at the first of the year, but has developed remarkably. Jean Dunlop, side centre, is playing her fourth year with the team and is very hard to guard. Jean Taylor, forward, her first year on the team, is a deadly shot. Nora McGinnis, the other forward, is very tall, and uses her height to advantage. Peggy Houston, sub forward, returns to basketball after a year's absence. She is very fast and a fighter. Hilda Rice, also sub forward, is a newcomer to the team and has a remarkable shot.

VARSITY INTERMEDIATES DEFEATED BY M.E.S.

Game Was Slow with the Odd Flash of Excellent Playing

Varsity intermediates suffered a decisive defeat at the hands of Margaret Eaton School to the tune of 62-27 in a city league basketball fixture at M.E.S. gym last night. It was an

SCHOOL ENTER JENNINGS CUP BY DEFEATING MEOS

Score was 2 to 0, School Scoring in First and Last Period

Junior School captured their group championship and the right to enter the Jennings Cup play-downs yesterday when they defeated Junior Meds 2 to 0 in a fast hockey game played at Varsity Arena. The School sextet were much the better in every department of the game and had a big margin of the play.

Although they were in possession of the puck for the greater part of the period School were unable to score until, with one minute remaining Mabee broke through and drove one past Whitehead in the Meds goal. Play was even during the second session and good work by the netminders kept either team from scoring. In the final period School added another when Williamson went around the net and passed to McNichol who pushed the puck in.

Williamson and Little on the School defence, played great games offensively and gave Brawley, in goal, plenty of support. McLaughlin, at centre, turned in a heady game and fed his wings unselfishly. For the losers, Coxon, and Carroll were the best, with Whitehead making several nice saves.

Junior School—Goal, Brawley; defence, Williamson and Little; centre, McLaughlin; wings, Davidson and McNichol; subs, McGuire, Mabee and Mitchell.

Junior Meds—Goal, Whitehead; defence, John and Carroll; centre, Coxon; wings, Preston and Lowery; subs, Robinson, Davie and Nugent.

VICTORIA DOWN ST. MIKE'S IN FACULTY BASEBALL

Victoria College slugged their way to Group No. 1 honours yesterday when they administered a 13-1 defeat to St. Michael's College in inter-faculty baseball. The win was the second straight for the Scarlet and Gold this week over the Irish. Heavy hitting and the consistent good pitching of Garton gave the title holders their win.

St. Mike's were handicapped through the loss of their star twirler, Knowles, but their inability to hit safely was the cause of the decisive defeat. St. Ryan scored the lone Irish run in the first inning.

Victoria opened the game with four runs in the initial inning but were blanked in the second. Three more were added in the third and in the final inning they crossed the plate for the remaining six.

Victoria—Christie, King, Lealk, Little, Willis, Hart, Amos, Garton, Coles Gregory and Brace.

St. Michael's—S. Ryan, Hannah, F. Ryan, Fullerton, Finnigan, O'Connor, Cosentino, Mallon and Johnson.

uninspired exhibition of basketball with flashes of the real thing.

Varsity started out well and were in the lead the first ten minutes but M.E.S. got into their stride and overhauled Varsity to lead at half time by 27-14.

In the second half M.E.S. had most of the play and scored basket after basket. Varsity seemed unable to find the basket and resorted to long shots. Mary Stuart made some nice shots in this way. She secured most of the points for Varsity, scoring 13, and Vic Quinlan played a steady game, accounting for 10 points. Grace Gristwood was best on the defence for Varsity.

For M.E.S. Viola Harvey was high scorer with 21 points to her credit.

Varsity—Vic Quinlan (10), Mary Stuart (13), forwards; Pat MacLean (2), side centre; Pat Palmer (2), jumping centre; Grace Gristwood, Beth Jenkins, defence; subs, Hilda Layman, Margery Wright.

Margaret Eaton—Ruth Tingley (20), Viola Harvey (21), forwards; Isabel Moyer (19), side centre; Ruth Hamilton, jumping centre; Margaret Ryan (2), Margaret Withers, defence; subs, Thea Elmsley, Nora Fletcher.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

At the last minute, after all arrangements had been made for the intercollegiate basketball tournament at Kingston, Western have put in an objection to Miss Phyllis Griffiths, one of the referees appointed, supposedly with the consent of the four colleges concerned, on the grounds that she is a graduate of the University of Toronto.

Western have every right to object on these grounds if they so desire, but to be fair to Miss Griffiths and to those taking charge of the tourney, they should have entered a protest before this time. Western officials claim that they never received the letter from Queen's notifying them of the appointment, but they knew at least a month ago that she had been suggested.

The worst of it is that though Miss Griffiths will definitely not handle the tournament, she has received no official notice of the action of Western at all, nor has Miss Ethel Phillips, who was suggested to take her place, been approached as yet. As the first games are to be played to-morrow afternoon and evening, it would seem to be imperative that this be attended to at once.

The whole thing has been most distasteful, and extremely unpleasant for Miss Griffiths, who had gone to considerable trouble to arrange for absence from work for the two days, besides inconveniencing herself in other ways. If the protest had been lodged earlier, and the persons concerned had been notified within a reasonable time, there would be no com-

BAOMINGTON SCHEDULE

The following is the schedule for the singles tournament of the badminton L.M. 7.30.

Thurs. Feb. 26—U.C. at St. Hilda's, Women's Union, 3.00.

Friday Feb. 27—Meds at Household Science.

Saturday Feb. 28—St. Hilda's at St. Mike's, St. Alban's gym 11.00.

Tues. March 3—U.C. at St. Mike's, St. Alban's gym, 3.00.

Wed. March 4—Household Science at St. Mike's, St. Alban's gym, 3.00.

Thurs. March 5—Household Science at U.C., Women's Union at 4.00.

A reliable rumour at University of Washington has it that Enoostika, unrivalled beauty of the Arctic will not take a course there in domestic science. "I can make good Eskimo pies," she said, when interviewed.

The intermediates lost to Margaret Eaton by a disastrous score last night. The Blue team are minus one of their regular forwards in the person of Bessie Lowry, who has left college temporarily. The team seemed to go to pieces after the first half, and M.E.S. ran up a huge score.

St. Hilda's took two games from Meds last night in the inter-faculty badminton tournament, when they won both senior and junior doubles by a decisive score. As they had already won the singles, played on Monday night, the wins last night give them a complete sweep over the Medettes.

HART HOUSE DEBATE
NATIONAL IN CHARACTER

 shirking its international responsibilities, violating the democracy it so ardently had grasped, and exacting its "pound of flesh" from a debt-ridden world. "These are worth cherishing," concluded Mr. Joffe.

Mr. V. M. Gutierrez, speaking for the negative, said that the domination of United States in affairs of Latin America is the result of conditions existing all over the world. The nations of the western hemisphere have common ideals and principles and the United States is supplying the capital that is lacking. The economic penetration has done a great deal of good and is conducive towards strengthening the political institutions of the various republics. "The way to stop the American domination is to assimilate it; beat them at their own game."

Mr. J. E. Geigel, for the affirmative, charged the United States with hypocrisy in exercising imperialism and posing as the cradle of democracy and righteousness. The United States violated the rights of nearly every Latin American republic with the exception of Argentina and Paraguay. As a result of economic intervention, political power followed and American law and order was imposed in violation of the inherent rights of millions. R. L. Seaborn, the next speaker opposing the motion, claimed that though we were influenced we were not dominated by the United States. He defended the American intervention in Latin America on the grounds that it set up a previously non-existent law and order.

VARSITY AND MCGILL
EVEN MATCH FOR GAME

Intercollegiate Water Polo
 Likely to be a
 Toss-up

Saturday night's intercollegiate water polo contest between Varsity and McGill has all the earmarks of a real battle. The teams on paper appear to be as evenly matched as possible and the result of the game looks like a toss-up. Coach Leo Latchford's Blue and White nators have had plenty of opportunity for practice since winning the City League title some weeks ago and they should be right at the top of their form on Saturday.

The locals demonstrated their class by coming out on the top of the heap in the league with the three Y.M.C.A. outfits and they appear to have regained their ability of two years ago, when they were double winners, capturing both the intercollegiate and the Toronto championships. The line-up contains the names of the old guard, Captain Spence, Ayers, Armstrong, the famous Eddie Sinclair, Glass and Harvey Graham. In addition two promising newcomers are ready for service in the persons of Culner and Davey of Meds.

They will have a tough assignment on their hands, however, when they stack up against the McGilmens. The latter are rated almost the equal of the locals in every respect. Saturday's contest will be the first home-and-home game, goals on the round to decide the title.

WOMEN'S SANCTUARY

At 1.55 p.m. yesterday, W. G. Goddard, I Arts, C. R. Ellis, I C. and F. A. L. Nidleman, I Meds and N. Penlington, II Arts, appeared at the entrance of the women's reading room, each willing and anxious to introduce co-education as a practice rather than something to be dreamed about.

Penlington's answer to the same question was merely, "Hard up!" As the Hart House clock rang two bells, Nidleman entered the reading room following closely upon the footsteps of a group of girls who happened along at the moment. With book in hand he made his way down the centre aisle and seated himself beside a Law co-ed, Miss D. Fish, who helped him while away the time by conversing with him.

The Murders at Whiffletree

By P. A. Gardner

It is scarcely six weeks now since our own beloved Gaspard McGuffey, retired from a distinguished practice at a venerable old age, settled down at Whiffletree Grange to end his days in peace and comfort which are surely his meed after seventy odd years of devoted service to his Cattery.

It is scarcely six weeks, yet already into this quaint exclusive old country mansion has crept the dread spectre of Tragedy. Death has descended and with chill fingers has short-circuited the mortal coil of one of the Grange's oldest and dearest inhabitants. Worse still, this appalling crime is only the first of a series of gruesome killings which will be known as "The Murders at Whiffletree", a series which may even culminate in the doing away with Mr. McGuffey himself.

"May", we say, for the Editor has not as yet decided just how far this series is to go. It all depends, of course, on the number of fan letters we receive. Should the total reach three Mr. McGuffey's doom is sealed. "Whiffletree," writes Mr. McGuffey, "is simply lousy with old family retainers (nor is it entirely devoid of o.f. containers, pleasantly replete with that beverage which, according to Barnacle Bill—how many of you, I wonder, know that Barnacle Bill is really John Masenfeld—is the life of man). Each of these retainers was dearly loved by the former master of the estate, Sir Penury Yellid, and, needless to say, that love is perpetuated in my own bosom. Noblesse oblige, you know—even though Hill the valet does get on one's nerves at times with his cracked crooning; and old Spires the scullery-maid bores me a trifle with her reiterated account of the sculling match in which she once defeated Jack Wright."

"To continue: of all these affectionate antiques the most faithful and most loved by everyone is—or rather, I must now say sadly, was—Adelaide, the Old Grey Mare, known and loved since her enshrinement in immortal song, the world over, and occupying a niche in our hearts superseded by none."

U. OF T. NEGLECTS CANADIAN WRITERS IN CURRICULUMS

Professors Are at Variance Regarding Complaint of McDonald

PELHAM EOGAR DISAGREES

Chair of Canadian Literature is Already Established at Montreal

Wilson McDonald in an interview with "The Varsity" recently, made the statement that it was a disgrace to Canada that there was no Chair of Canadian Literature. "It would inspire young poets as nothing else could," he had said. Professor Pelham Edgar of Victoria College was convinced that the time for such a step is premature.

"I am in sympathy with the idea. The Canadian writers have done very well," he said, "but there is not enough material to occupy the time of such an official for four years."

Professor Gilbert Norwood of University College thought all stress should be laid on French-Canadian literature. Such a Chair would be quite legitimate in Quebec, but there would be no reason for one in any of the other provinces. "I have a great admiration for contemporary writers, but they just started the other day. As yet there is no body."

E. K. Brown, lecturer of English in University College, contradicted Mr. McDonald's statement that there was no Chair of Canadian Literature. "There is a Chair at Montreal," he asserted. "Chanoine Emile, of the University of Montreal, and it has been of the greatest service to French-Canadian literature in Quebec."

"But I think it should not be held by a poet," he continued. "An academic man would be more competent. Pelham Edgar, for example. No man has done more in the way of writing and sympathetic criticism for Canada in the last thirty years."

"At other universities in Canada they have full courses in Canadian Literature. Looking at it from the practical point of view instead of the idealistic, we are further behind here than in any other Canadian university. I would like to see a course of Canadian Literature for undergraduates, and a Chair for the department of English."

"But," he continued, "it would be advisable that the first person to hold such a position should be a professor or someone with academic experience. They should not be a creative writer essentially."

BLUES SWIM AT QUEEN'S

The Varsity swimming league leaves this morning for the intercollegiate championship at the new pool in Kingston to-night. Queen's are not competing for the championship but are entering a few men. The fight lies between McGill and the Blue team. The Toronto entries are:

Voter Must Show Card

Members are informed that they will be required to show their Hart House membership cards at the door of the room in Hart House allotted to their college or faculty for voting purposes next Wednesday.

Membership stamps for those who have not already obtained them may be had on application at the Hall Porter's desk not later than 2 p.m. on Tuesday, 3rd March. No stamps will be issued after that hour until the elections are over.

Those members who have already had their registration cards stamped with the Hart House stamp but have lost them may procure at the Warden's office a special voting permit enabling them to vote.

The polling hours are from 11.45 a.m. to 2.15 p.m. and from 4.30 p.m. to 6 p.m.

The rooms in Hart House will be allotted for voting to the colleges and faculties as follows:

Reading Room: University College.

Lecture Room: Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering and Faculty of Forestry.

Music Room: Victoria College, Trinity College and St. Michael's College.

Boxing Room: Faculty of Medicine.

Room A: Faculty of Dentistry.

Room C: O.C.E., O.C.A., Wycliffe College, Emmanuel College, Faculty of Music.

S.C.A. Library: Ontario College of Pharmacy.

The voter having presented his Hart House membership card at the door of the polling booth and having it stamped will proceed to the table allotted to his Year and will give his name. Having had his name checked on the voters' list the voter will be given six ballot papers, one for each committee. After he has marked the ballots in pencil he will place these in the ballot boxes and leave the room. Members are reminded that no electioneering is permitted in the polling room.

"VARSITY" JUBILEE YEAR FIRST RECORDED TO-DAY

The volume number of "The Varsity" is duly changed to-day to the jubilee number of fifty. This is to rectify the error made in 1928 when the number was left unchanged. Vol. L will be considered as including the issues from October 31, 1930, to March 27, 1931.

ATHEISM DENIED AND ACTION URGED AGAINST "VARSITY" BY GOVERNORS

The Board of Governors has repudiated suggestions of atheism in the University of Toronto and has instructed the Caput to take disciplinary measures against "The Varsity" for making such suggestions.

The following resolution was passed unanimously at the meeting of the Board yesterday afternoon:

"Moved by Mr. T. A. Russell, seconded by Major Armour, and resolved that this Board unanimously repudiates the article appearing in 'The Varsity' of the 24th of February, suggesting that the students of the University and the majority of the graduates are largely atheists and that the professors and staff are teaching atheism to the students; which statements are entirely contrary to the facts and totally misrepresent the University, its staff and the student body."

A second resolution was drawn up to be sent to the Caput, "The Varsity" learned from W. J. Dunlop last night. This resolution sets forth the Board's opinion as expressed and asks the Caput to take such disciplinary measures as may be deemed necessary. Vigorous discussion occurred on the resolutions, but all favourable, without a dissenting voice, Dunlop said.

A meeting of the Caput is to be called this morning. "The Varsity" was informed by A. T. DeLury, Chairman of the Caput. Dr. DeLury was not certain whether it would be possible to get the members together quickly enough so that a meeting might be held to-day, but he stated that it would take place at the earliest possible moment.

No specific instructions as to measures to be taken were given the Caput by the Board of Governors, Dr. DeLury said. It was left entirely to the Caput's discretion. He was unable to make any forecast or give any hint of what action might be decided on by the Caput.

"The Board of Governors made no distinction between practical atheism and pure atheism," stated Canon H. J. Cody, chairman of the Board, when questioned by "The Varsity" last night. He declared that an emphatic resolution had been passed repudiating the contentious editorial and intimated that the Caput would certainly take some action, but was unable to say exactly what would be done. He reluctantly admitted that the Board had had no discussion of the possibility of cutting off the payment of the compulsory fee to "The Varsity" this year. He did not know what would be done regarding monies for the undergraduate paper next year.

SUCCESS OF PAPERS DEPENDS ON TIMES

"Lose Money Like Billy-Ho in Bad Times," Says
Reading

ADVERTISING CHIEF SOURCE

"The reason newspapers make money is because of their quick turnover," said Mr. Paul Reading, of the Southam newspapers, speaking in Baldwin House yesterday. "They make any amount of money when times are good and they lose it like Billy-Ho when times are bad. That keeps the number of papers down to so few, and I am glad of it," he added.

"Advertising is the chief source of revenue for newspapers. The amount of money made from the sale of copies does not pay for the cost of paper and ink," he said. Under some conditions a large circulation is not desirable since the subscriptions do not pay for the paper and ink. He gave one instance of a paper in China on which he worked whose circulation rose very high, but the advertising rates did not, with the result that the paper was soon defunct.

Mr. Reading outlined a plan for making an ideal newspaper. In his scheme he would have those who owned capital stock hold shares which could be transferred only with the consent of a reliable committee who could be trusted to be impartial. As an example of such a committee he said, "Oh, say Sir Arthur Currie, Sir Robert Falconer, a Bishop or two, and a banker if you like."

After the lecture any who wished, asked Mr. Reading questions.

Liberty of Women

"People and books are the greatest things in the world, and college gives both," said Miss Ruth Sparling, at the dinner given at the King Edward Hotel by the junior women of Victoria College to their graduating sisters, last night.

"Women have a new liberty and you are trained to use it," said Miss M. E. T. Addison after the numerous toasts.

to the Jury

EXECUTIVE NOMINATIONS

"Juries do not sit to find the universal truth, but rather to find the truth as brought out in the evidence. They deal only with the facts presented. It is most essential that the advocate remember this." These were a few of the many words gleaned from a most lucid address on "The Presentation of a Brief," delivered by Mr. George Wilkie, K.C., before a large meeting of the Law Club last night.

Mr. Wilkie was introduced to the meeting by Dr. W. P. M. Kennedy, Dean of the Law course, who briefly outlined the need of students for information on the most important point of preparing a brief and who told of Mr. Wilkie's qualifications to speak thereon.

The nominations for the executive of the club for the year 1930-31 were received. The Honorary President is the Hon. N. W. Rowell. Dr. Kennedy was elected Hon. Vice-president by acclamation.

CANCELLATION OF DEBTS URGED BY C. L. BURTON

"Trade must be established on a basis of mutual benefit, otherwise it is not trade," stated C. L. Burton, President of the Robert Simpson Co., at a meeting of the Commerce Club in Hart House last night.

"Reparations and war debts interfere with the regular life of nations and the conduct of industry of the nations. War payments travel in a vicious circle, engendering a false confidence in the creditor nation and a sense of futility in the debtor."

Mr. Burton favoured the cancellation of all war debts, and the cessation of all reparation payments.

Silence Maintained By Wages Committee

No statement concerning the investigation of a sub-committee of the Hall Committee, regarding wages and hours in force in Hart House was available last evening. The committee met yesterday for discussion of the matter and writers of the recent letters published in "The Varsity" on this subject appeared to substantiate charges made by them.

Suggestion of Atheism

GIBSON INSULTED STAFF

Open-Mindedness Furthers the Cause of Religion and Truth

"The Varsity" has received the following letter from a student in IV year philosophy which was sent to the Globe newspaper and which the Globe refused to publish. Editor of the Globe, Globe Publishing Co., Toronto.

Dear Sir:

Last Sunday evening I heard a sermon on Atheism and Atheists delivered by Dr. Gibson of Cooke's Presbyterian Church, which was a direct insult to the teaching staff and the student body of the University of Toronto and the various theological colleges connected with it. As an undergraduate of the University, and as a prospective student of theology I would like to take this opportunity of replying to his allegations.

During the three years that I have attended the lectures of the honour course in philosophy, I have not been taught anything that by the wildest stretch of the imagination could be called atheism. The psychology I have studied is not Freudianism, and the text books used are certainly not under the ban of the morality department. The professor of biblical knowledge who commences his classes by advising his students to discard their previous tenets as he is teaching no Sunday School class, is doing more for the advancement of true religion than fossilized theologians who deplore the corruption of modern youth, and preach sermons on communism and atheism. In spite of Dr. Gibson's statement to the contrary I know of no student who has given up his intentions of entering the Christian ministry on account of any undermining of his faith that has occurred during his undergraduate course in arts or theology. The idea of prospective students for the ministry having supervised instruction in philosophy is absurd. For the theological student, one of the most valuable features of the undergraduate course in arts, is to give a new and broader outlook upon his faith.

Dr. Gibson's view of education might work very well in the middle (Continued on page 3)

MISS HOWE ENTERTAINED BY DINNER AT W.U.A.

Miss Rhoda Howe, secretary of the Ontario branch of the Overseas Education League, was the guest of honour at dinner Wednesday evening at the Women's Union.

Miss Howe gave a short talk on the origin and activities of the Education League. Colonel Ney, the head of this organization, conceived the idea of the league in 1910 when attending a conference in London, England. He was astonished at the erroneous opinions held by teachers in Great Britain regarding Canada.

The first attempt to remedy this was made in 1911 when the Colonel conducted a successful European tour for 165 teachers from Manitoba. Since that time he has organized tours to Great Britain and all places of interest on the continent, as well as originating the system of exchanging teachers among the British Dominions.

The remainder of the evening was spent in vivacious French conversation over the coffee cups and cake.

A PURITAN VIEW

In view of various current movements, particularly concerning the University of Toronto, it is not irrelevant to quote that illustrious Puritan, John Milton, in his "Second Defence of the People of England":—

"If you permit the free discussion of truth without any hazard to the author, or any subjection to the caprice of an individual, which is the best way to make truth flourish and knowledge abound, the censure of the half-learned, the envy, the pusillanimity, or the prejudice which measures the discoveries of others, and in short every degree of wisdom, by the measure of its own capacity, will be prevented from doling out information to us according to their own arbitrary choice. Lastly, if you shall not dread to hear any truth, or any falsehood, whatever it may be, but if you shall least of all listen to those who think that they can never be free till the liberties of others depend on their caprice, and who attempt nothing with so much zeal and vehemence as to fetter, not only the bodies but the minds of men, who labour to introduce into the state the worst of all tyrannies, the tyranny of their own depraved habits and pernicious opinions; you will always be dear to those who think not merely that their own sect or faction, but that all citizens of all descriptions, should enjoy equal rights and equal laws."

"Religion Must Be More Than Rationalistic"

Editor, "The Varsity".
Dear Sir:

I was very much pleased to read your editorial of February 24th entitled "Atheism", because I believe it brought out certain indisputable facts which, deplorable as they may be, exist not only among the students, but also among people in general. In particular I would like to comment upon two statements.

In the first place you say the number of persons in contemporary society who possess anything remotely approaching experiential belief in a Deity is extremely small. If it was merely a question as to a belief in the existence of a Deity of one kind or another, then, I believe, one could safely say that there were practically no atheists among the undergraduates of our university. The number of undergraduates, including theologians, however, who have had that belief confirmed by an experience of God, or who have had a consciousness of His presence in communion with God, through prayer, is as you say, "extremely small".

The whole tendency to-day, both in our theological colleges, and in the S.C.A., is to over-emphasize the rational side of religion, and to leave the spiritual development of an individual woefully lacking. In connection with the S.C.A., under its auspices have been held some very interesting lectures: they also conduct study groups on supposedly religious topics. But look at the subjects of these lectures, and how far do they appeal to the spiritual, or even the moral needs of the student? Are not they practically all, an appeal of purely intellectual interest? Or in the S.C.A. study groups—what connection has a lecture on the science of "Osteopathy" with religion? And yet that was the subject of an S.C.A. study group discussion. True enough there are occasional worship services held under the auspices of the S.C.A., and an attempt was made to hold noon hour services in the Hart House Chapel, but there is not a great enough contact between the Hart House Chapel, or members of the S.C.A. executive and the student. The chaplain and his close associates of the S.C.A. form too much of a family compact, and as long as that spirit hovers about the office of the religious leader of the university the student will not feel free to come with personal difficulties or to attend this noon hour chapel service—which many of the students believe are for the executive only.

Theologians—in the United Church of Canada at any rate—are compelled to spend seven of the best years of their life in preparation for the ministry. They are given learned arguments as to why or why not believe or accept the literal interpretation of the miracles of Jesus, the Virgin birth or even the Resurrection, and they enter upon their life-work armed with these up-to-date arguments, but their spiritual life, or actual religious experience has been sadly under-developed.

Religion must be more than rationalistic if it is to be vital. There is a certain element of the mystical—certain truths which we feel, but cannot explain, which if taken away, destroys the vitality of that religion, and makes it a little better than a school of philosophy. If one is to truthfully call himself religious he must know from his own personal experience the reality of prayer and the value of self-sacrifice. In this age of prosperity and plenty we have become all too unwilling to forego any pleasure or luxury which may happen to excite our fancy, and without a willingness to sacrifice we cannot enter into the deepest recesses of the prayer life, and without the prayer life we cannot

"Out of the Blue"

"Out of the Blue", by Hans Chlumberg, is being presented every evening this week by the Hart House Theatre Players under the direction of Edgar Stone.

Hans Chlumberg probably did have a purpose in writing this unconventional drama, but it is not easy to determine what his purpose was. Perhaps the play is just another Pagliacci sob, perhaps it is a genuine protest against the artificial tricks of those playwrights whose chief stock-in-trade is the eternal triangle, or it may be after all accepted at its face value—an attempt to prove that with the audience lie potentially the truest germs of both plot and acting.

It is hard to determine the exact classification of a domestic comedy such as this, which has become transformed as a result of its translation into English, into a lively farce with a semi-tragic interlude. The translation used at Hart House Theatre is by Michael Orme and retains certain characteristic serious passages that distinguished the German drama, but were dropped by Sir Nigel Playfair in his London production this winter.

The plot of the play is involved: the curtain rises on a stage bare of scenery, disclosing a group of stage hands at ease. Suddenly the director rushes in, discovers that the audience is in its place, that the stage is not yet set and that the players have gone home for the night, having been misled by an out of date sign. Faced with this dilemma, he seeks the aid of the young Reader of Plays attached to the company, who suggests that each individual in the audience has in his own life the essentials of true drama, and instinctively desires a chance to portray it upon the stage.

The director seeks and finds in the audience a group of ordinary people willing to present a play on their own lives for the benefit of the rest of the house. Tragedy nearly enters upon the stage when by chance this group of amateurs find themselves face to face with a more serious situation than they anticipated and have, before the whole audience, to untangle the twisted threads of their lives.

The current Hart House production is perhaps as successfully directed as any of Edgar Stone's recent efforts. And that is high praise, for the unusual speed of the action and the intricacy of the stage business demanded most careful handling.

The players did their work enthusiastically if not always with great skill. It was of course necessary to create an atmosphere that suggested amateur playing. In this Colonel Patterson was noticeably successful. The rest of the cast seemed either too finished or too uncertain in their roles. But the lively nature of the comedy was emphasized as it should have been and the lines were almost all read with commendable naturalness and clarity. Heasell Mitchell was particularly convincing.

The setting of the second act was one of the most successful and exciting seen in Hart House Theatre.

The whole performance was thoroughly credible, and if it lacked the finish expected of the local playhouse, made up for this defect because of the number of players it introduced for almost the first time, or re-introduced after a period of years to Hart House Theatre.

Sketch Room

There is evidently a wealth of artistic talent among the members of Hart House if the present exhibition of art work in the Hart House Sketch Room can be considered representative. Graduate and undergraduate members have provided an exceptionally useful bill of fare for their annual show.

The graduate and faculty members have gone in strongly for oil work this year. The undergraduates appear to be a trifle more versatile.

Landscapes and marines by Dr. E. M. Walker, Dr. F. G. Banting, Mr. F. Erickson Brown, and Dr. G. H. Agnew are all exceptionally fine. Of these, the delightful sketches by Dr. Walker are outstanding. Of the group of water colours by Dr. A. P. Coleman, "The Coast of Alaska", is probably the best. In addition to these there are two etchings by the Rev. J. E. Ward and two colour prints by Dr. F. S. Bowman (particularly "Lobster Wharf") which are extremely pleasing.

It is difficult to make a selection from the undergraduate work, because of the variety of mediums in which the men have worked.

Undoubtedly the best examples (if not the best in the exhibition) are the two unusually fine oils by G. H. Buckland of Trinity. Buckland has a style all his own which is not only expressive, but is refreshing in its originality. These two oils show skilful brush work, a beautiful handling of colour, and a depth of artistic conception.

Of the other examples of undergraduate work in the exhibition, the self-portrait in charcoal of S. J. Boch (Continued on Page 4)

BLUE POLOISTS MEET MCGILL AT HART HOUSE SATURDAY NIGHT

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By W. A. L.

Varsity's intercollegiate basketball team meets Queen's in the first game for the intercollegiate title to-night at Kingston at 8 o'clock. The game will be played as a preliminary to an intercollegiate struggle between the Queen's and Western men. In the afternoon McGill and Western women will clash in the first game.

The Queen's team is stronger this season than it has been in years, and expects to give Varsity, who are the present title-holders, a stiff battle. Western and McGill both have a large percentage of their last year's players back with them and as a result, the tournament should be more closely contested than it has been for the last two years, when Varsity had little trouble in clinching the championship.

The McGill outfit has been very successful in their Montreal city league games so far, having played and won six games. Varsity, too, has been extremely successful in the Toronto city group, and have also won an exhibition game from the strong Hamilton Normal School Grads.

Miss Ethel Phillips will take Miss Phyllis Griffiths place as referee for these games, owing to the objection so suddenly raised by Western two days ago to Miss Griffiths. Western certainly exercised their right of objection to any referee appointed or suggested to the fullest degree, and displayed a certain lack of graciousness in insisting on a change at this late date.

It is due in a large measure to Miss Griffiths that Miss Phillips has been able to get leave of absence from her work, and a sincere vote of thanks is due to her for her action after the lack of consideration shown her.

St. Hilda's made it two straight in the interfaculty badminton tournament when they took both senior and junior matches from St. Michael's last night. A singles game was not played. The senior game was more or less a walkaway for the Saints, but the junior was very closely contested.

A singles match between Peggy Glasco of St. Hilda's and Hilda Layman of University College was also played last night, and the Saints again came out on top. This means that the St. Hilda's girls have yet to lose a game, in either the singles or doubles.

BLUES EXPECT TITLES IN GYM MEET STRUGGLE

Strong Line-ups Presented by McGill and Varsity for Track Events

MUSIC TO FOLLOW MEET

Water Poloists and Gymnasium Teams to Meet McGill Saturday Night

Varsity's hopes for two of the remaining intercollegiate titles will be seen in action at Hart House Saturday night when the Water Poloists and the Gymnastic squad face McGill. The gym meet is scheduled for 7.30 with the poloists holding the centre of attraction at 8.30. Music by the Varsity Entertainers will be provided for the fans after the sporting events, commencing at 10.00.

The Blue poloists are favoured to retain their intercollegiate laurels this season, despite the fact that the Red and White are sending a strong outfit. Saturday's struggle, which is the first of home-and-home games, should be closely contested from start to finish. The men of Latchford will present their strongest line-up, with the old reliable Bill Ayers in goal, Eddie Sinclair and Hayhoe on the defence, Captain George Spence holding down the rover position and Armstrong at centre. The great Harvey Graham will team up with Culiner on the front line. Glass and Crocker will be the subs. This array of stellar talent looks good enough to come through with a substantial lead to take to Montreal for the second encounter next week.

The McGill line-up also presents plenty of strength. Wayland will be between the posts behind the sturdy rarguard of Phil Matthews and Payton. The forwards will be backell and Mercereau, with Munroe Bourne, the famous swimmer, looking after the centre assignment. Brophy will hold down the rover's job and French and Stein are alternates.

The Gymnasium competition will be the High Bar first, followed by the parallel bars, the horse and finally the tumbling mat work. Each competitor will perform twice on each piece of apparatus, arranging his own combination. Each will have at his disposal two minutes for each voluntary exercise. The teams are as follows: McGill—Davis, Caron, MacKay, Holland, Dumbell and Wallace. Varsity—Ivey, Bengry, Campbell, Johnson, Wilkinson and Jacobie. Judges—R. Bonney, Nat Keefe, T. R. Pouge, Timer, Frank Halbus.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By T. A. F.

The touring Varsity boxers arrived yesterday from New York safely, and in a more or less sound condition. We find that we owe W. H. (One-round) Martin, the man in charge of the trip, an apology. Mr. Martin made every attempt to wire us a complete story of the bouts right after the final, but ran into a lot of red tape in connection with the telegraph office. The officials refused to accept the wire at the usual night Press rates and demanded some huge sum as a deposit. This, of course, could not be paid, which accounts for the fact that the story was not sent to "The Varsity".

Despite the fact that the men sent to the States this year looked like the strongest bid a Canadian university has ever made in International boxing competition, the Yankee maulers won every one of the bouts. A summary of the results appears elsewhere on this page. With the exception of the 126 pound weight in which Teddy Fell suffered a knockout at the hands of one Tony Santi, all the bouts were close. Fell's defeat was a big surprise to us. The man who beat him must have been some battler. Murray Wilton, the clever Varsity middleweight came closest to winning, being the victim of a hair-line decision. Sammy Longert was defeated by a heavier opponent who is turning pro this week, so Sammy was far from being disgraced.

The Peever-Crowder set-to was a real battle by all accounts. Both men went at it hammer and tongs right from the start and it is a wonder that there wasn't a knockout. The American must have had a chin like Battling Nelson, the Durable Dane, to stand up under the terrific bombardment Peever handed him.

It all boils down to this, however, that the Canadians are boxers and the American favours a fighting style a la Jack Dempsey. In nine bouts out of ten a two-fisted battler can take plenty of punishment and still keep coming in and battering away at his opponent can beat a more scientific man who spends most of his time blocking punches instead of hitting. College boxers on this side of the border are taught more or less along the English lines, with the emphasis on boxing rather than fighting. There is all the difference in the world between the two styles, and so far the American system has produced the results. It wins bouts.

Anent all this business of Harvard beating McGill, who are rated the best in Canadian Intercollegiate hockey circles. Everyone seems to be worrying because our long reign in hockey seems to be coming to an end. Time was when almost any Canadian high school team could cross the border and take a fall out of the best Yankee universities could present. There is no doubt that those days are gone forever. The Americans are playing more hockey every winter and as a natural consequence they have vastly improved their style of play.

This year, however, the fact that both Varsity and McGill fared very badly against the Crimson and other teams to the south doesn't mean as much as would appear on the surface. Granted that the Yanks have improved a great deal over previous seasons, but there is also another side to the story. Varsity, as everyone will admit, is far from being up to the strength of other years and it is no great feather in the caps of the Americans to beat us in two games as they did.

McGill is another matter. At the start of the season the Redmen looked easily the strongest team to represent McGill in years and they started out to prove it by setting the league on fire in the Q.H.A. On paper they are still a strong squad, but it is the old story over again. A team can't play good hockey without sticking to training rules. We are willing to bet that if the McGill sextet were in perfect condition no Harvard team could have beaten them. This is merely our own personal opinion. We have never seen the Crimson play, but we are only judging from the closeness of the scores of the two games in which they beat the McGillmen under conditions as they stand.

SENIOR MEOS OUT-SHOOT JUNIOR DENTS BY 24-17

Alpert Leads Meds to Win Over Half-Time Lead of Dents

Senior Meds defeated Junior Dents in an interfaculty basketball game played in Hart House yesterday afternoon by the score of 24-17.

The Dentists led at half time 13-2 and appeared to be well on the way to victory but became badly disorganized in the last half when Meds netted the ball from all angles. The game was an open affair and featured by long shooting. For the losers Horton was outstanding, sinking four field baskets and two fouls for ten points while Alpert was the winners' best man, playing a steady game on the defence.

Senior Meds—Forwards, Taibe and Levine; centre, Jissel; defence, Heller and Alpert; sub, Hurvitz.

Junior Dents—Forwards, Walden and McCabe; centre, Bancroft; defence, Horton and O'Shaughnessy; subs, Brett and Ward.

(N.Y.) defeated Merve Peever (Q) decision.
160 pounds—Bill Ekeland (N.Y.) defeated Murray Wilton (T) decision.
175 pounds—Bobby Mess (N.Y.) defeated Sammy Longert (T) decision.

JUNIOR SCHOOL WINS

6 to 4 Defeat of Junior U.C. in Baseball Series Prevents Tie-up

Junior School edged out Junior U.C. by 6-4 in a well played baseball game in the Hart House gym yesterday afternoon and thereby won the group and the right to play in the elimination series with the five other group winners.

If Junior U.C. had been victorious the group would have been tied up. With so much at stake a close hard fought game resulted. Junior School were off to a flying start, scoring 6 runs in the first inning after filling the bases.

Junior U.C. replied with a thrilling last inning rally, filling the bases after two were out and driving across two runs before the side was retired.

Junior School—Chalmers, J. Howe, Mason, Howitt, Carbone, P. Howe, Black, Jones and Shapiro.

Junior U.C.—Smith, Dickenson, Hase, Gibson, Gavin, Geroux, Grant, Blackford and Rooke.

TRACK STARS PUT ON INFORMAL MEET AT "Y"

This evening a friendly and informal track meet will be held between Central Y.M.C.A. and Varsity. Only the winners of the various events during the previous indoor meets of the past few weeks will compete for the Blue and White. The real purpose of the competition will be to prepare the athletes for the coming 91st Highlanders indoor games which will take place in Hamilton shortly.

ages when he could brand as atheists those who disagreed from his point of view; but in this day and age, it is both useless and harmful to seek to place undue restrictions upon university education. Truth is might and will prevail; antiquated and narrow-minded theologians may preach sermons on atheism and atheists still kingdom come; they may revile university education, as most people do who have not had such an education; they may make abusive statements about conscientious professors and open-minded students; but in the end truth will prevail. It is much to be regretted that a clergyman occupying an important pulpit in this city can see nothing in modern education except a corrupting influence upon the mind of youth, and a breeding ground of heresy.

Yours truly,

The Table Round

Our recent speculations on Canadian literature are given a new interest by the fact that Blodwen Davies, writing in The New Outlook, on "Stocktaking in the Arts in Canada", tacitly assumes the position we inferred. He says in part:

"At least half, if not more, of the younger generation can be accused of resting on the laurels of its elders, of sacrificing enthusiasm and devotion for a dangerous aptitude for dreaming, and a Micawber-like faith. We are in danger of developing an 'arty' generation. We have too many who crave the spiritual freedom of the artist without being willing to pay for it with the drudgery that success demands. If we do not have a care Canadian art is going to suffer as Canadian literature has suffered, by making a fetish of brush and chisel and abandoning critical opinion for indiscriminating praise."

The italics are my own, as I wished to emphasize the writer's assumption. It seems to me to be an exact description of a state of affairs that can be remedied only by a drastic revision of our critical standards as applied to Canadian literature. —G.G.B.

CORRESPONDENCE

know in a personal way the meaning of a "religious experience".

The other sentence which struck me was that "The divines who are most popular are those charming, engaging parsons who read literary essays on Sunday and spend the week upholding the dignity of the church and trying to form a synthesis between St. Paul, Thomas Huxley and Sir James Jeans".

Look about this fair city of ours, and in how many churches is there a service and a sermon which the ordinary uneducated labouring man of the street can understand or even appreciate? How many churches can the employee of the City Street Cleaning Department attend with his family and understand the sermon which is preached? The number is almost negligible. Again our ministers are over-emphasizing rationalistic arguments concerning religion and they fail to explain the meaning of a religious experience. Is it any wonder that there are so many of these small sentimental and fanatical Gospel Halls in Toronto—and that they are so well attended? The poor man's natural yearning for God must be satisfied, and if it is not satisfied by the proper enlightened guidance which the Christian minister is supposed to give, it will be satisfied in these extreme and perhaps less desirable ways.

Would not one solution for this whole "Free Speech" controversy, and all the anti-Communist agitation which has been occupying so much valuable space in one or two of the downtown dailies, be less repression and more preaching and living up to simple, good old fashioned gospel of Jesus Christ, both by the ministers of our churches and by all those who profess themselves to be Christians.

Yours truly,
—B.X.

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

Annual Elections

The electoral meeting of the University of Toronto Athletic Association to elect student representatives to the Directorate for 1931-32 will be held on Friday, March 13th, at 4.15 p.m. in the Debates Room, Hart House (south side, upstairs).

Under the Constitution of the Athletic Association (Article IX, Sec. 4) all Clubs and Athletic Associations are entitled to send representatives to that meeting. These representatives must be male undergraduates of the University of Toronto or one of the affiliated colleges, who are proceeding to a degree, are in actual attendance upon lectures and who have paid the annual fee required (By-Law I).

A student to be elected to the Directorate must at the time of his nomination be in the second, or a higher year of his course at the University, but not in the final year. The nomination must be made in writing on the form provided for the purpose, signed by two male undergraduate members of the Athletic Association in good standing and filed with the Secretary of the Association at least five days prior to the election (i.e., not later than 1 p.m., Saturday, March 7th). Forms can be obtained at the office of the Association.

HART HOUSE ELECTIONS

The annual elections for Hart House committees take place to-day. Eight representatives from the various colleges and faculties will be elected to each of the undergraduate committees: House, Hall, Library, Music and Sketch. Five undergraduates will be elected to the Billiard Committee.

Undergraduates will be required to present their membership cards, with stamp attached, in order to vote.

B. & M. students are reminded that they vote with their colleges and not with the Faculty of Medicine.

The polling hours are from 11.45 a.m. to 2.15 p.m. and from 4.30 p.m. to 6.00 p.m.

The rooms in Hart House will be allotted for voting purposes to the faculties and colleges as follows:

Reading Room—University College.
Debates Room—Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering and Faculty of Forestry.

Music Room—Victoria College, Trinity College and St. Michael's College.

Boxing Room—Faculty of Medicine.
Room A—Faculty of Dentistry.

Room C—O.C.E., O.C.A., Wycliffe College, Emmanuel College, Faculty of Music and School of Graduate Studies.
S.C.A. Library—Ontario College of Pharmacy.

CAMERA COMMITTEE

The elections to the Camera Committee will take place in the Music Room between 5 and 6 p.m. on Thursday, 5th March. Four members are to be elected to this committee.

SQUASH COMMITTEE

The Squash Racquets Committee will be elected by the regular squash players of Hart House (i.e., players who have had their names on the reservation list at least five times during the academic year 1930-1931) on Thursday, 5th March between 12 noon and 2 p.m. and 5 and 6 p.m. in the Sketch Room. Four members are to be elected to this committee.

U.C. PLAYERS' GUILD

He, a one-act drama by Eugene O'Neill, will be the presentation at the U.C. Players' Guild at 4.30 this afternoon in the hall of the Women's Union. This is one of the most impressive of O'Neill's plays of the sea, and because of difficulties in staging it of a type rarely seen at the Guild. The cast includes Miss Patricia Godfrey, Andrew Allan, Ross Parmenter, Selwyn Dewdney, Jack Morley, Henry Gladstone. The production is directed by Mr. Victor Lange.

U. OF T. WOMEN'S ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

Annual Elections

The electoral meeting of the University of Toronto Women's Athletic Association to elect the five student representatives on the Women's Athletic Directorate for 1931-32, will be held in the Lecture Room, Household Science Building, on Tuesday, March 17, at 5.00 p.m. sharp.

Nominations will be received by the Secretary of the Association until Saturday, March 14, at 1 p.m. Nominations must be signed by two members of the U. of T. W.A.A. and must be made on forms to be obtained from the Secretary, Room 82, U.C.

A student eligible for nomination must at the time of nomination be in her second or higher year, but not in her final year, at the University.

Representatives to the Electoral Body must be elected and sent to the meeting as follows: U.C., Victoria, St. Michael's, St. Hilda's, Medical and Household Science W.A.A.'s, four representatives each; Basketball and Hockey Clubs, six representatives each; Swimming Club, four representatives; Tennis and Baseball Clubs and O.C.E. W.A.A., two representatives each. Names of representatives must be given to the Secretary not later than Monday, March 16, and no substitutions or proxies will be permitted.

WOMEN'S ATHLETIC CLUBS

Annual Elections

The annual meetings of the Women's Basketball and Hockey Clubs for the purpose of electing the 1931-32 executives will be held in the Lecture Room, Household Science Building, on Wednesday, March 18, at 4.30 and 5 p.m. respectively.

The annual meetings of the Women's Swimming, Tennis and Baseball Clubs will be held in the Lecture Room on Thursday, March 19, at 4.15 p.m.

Voting members are restricted to those on the managers' lists of actual playing members in the different faculties. These lists must be completed and in the hands of the Secretary by Wednesday, March 18, at 1 p.m.

Nominations must be made in writing by two voting members of the Club in question and filed with the Secretary of the Association, Room 82, U.C., not later than Monday, 16th March.

WOMEN'S SWIMMING MEET

The annual women's interfaculty swimming meet is to be held at Hart House to-night at 8.00 o'clock. The preliminaries of the plunge, the diving, the ornamental and style swimming were held last night and the finalists will compete for place at Hart House to-night. A special exhibition will be given by four members of the Parkdale Ladies' Swimming Club and novelty races will be staged. This is always one of the most popular events of the year and a large attendance is expected.

U.C. LIT. NOMINATIONS

The following have been nominated for the Executive of the U.C. Literary and Athletic Society for the year 1931-32: Honorary President—Mr. Jos. McCully; President—M. G. Angus, H. W. F. Appleton, N. M. Seecombe; Literary Director—Lorrie Tarshis; Athletic Director—W. A. Leak, R. L. Standish, W. Walker; Social Director—W. Jacobi, M. Whyte; Secretary—N. H. Shaw; Treasurer—R. Bell, B. Draper, S. Hermant, C. Wilkinson.

U.C. MEN

THERE is a direct path between your college and your home town — the telephone line. Let it keep you in the most intimate personal touch with your parents or friends.

'Arrange with father and mother for a "call-home-day" each week, the calls to be charged to your parents' telephone. Hundreds of others are doing this — and all look forward to this weekly chat.

The cost is surprisingly low—wherever you call. The telephone book will tell you all about rates and service, and the reduced rates on station-to-station calls.

Dear Sir:

"The Registrar of the University has received a communication from the Colonial Office regarding a number of vacancies likely to be available this year in the Colonial Service.

In the Police Services of Malaya and Ceylon 8 vacancies

For Colonial Agricultural Scholarships probably 24 awards
For Colonial Agricultural Appointments.....probably a few vacancies

In the Administrative Services of East and West Africa and in the Medical Services information is not at present available, but it seems likely that only a limited number of posts will need to be filled.

Any interested persons are asked to call upon the Registrar in his office at Simcoe Hall. It is pointed out that these appointments are open to the British Isles as well as Canada."

Yours very truly,

A. B. Fennell,
Registrar.

Mr. A. G. Burns,
Secretary, Student Administrative Council,
Hart House, University of Toronto, Toronto.

Dear Mr. Burns,
Will you please convey to the Student Administrative Council, the sincere thanks of the Toronto Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society for the liberal supplies of clothing which have been forwarded from Hart House during the winter, to the unemployed veterans, being cared for by the Red Cross.

This clothing has been of great value to these men and we appreciate your interest in the work which the Red Cross is doing.

Yours faithfully,

Fred W. Routley,
Secretary, Toronto Br.

IV U. C.

Nominations for the Moss Scholarship must be in the hands of the year secretaries before Tuesday. Full particulars regarding the candidates qualifications are posted in the rotunda. Election takes place Wednesday the 11th, in the rotunda, 10.45-1.15.

BACH'S ST. MATTHEW'S PASSION

For several years past a performance of St. Matthew's Passion has taken place in Convocation Hall in the week before Easter. This year the performance will take place at 8.10 p.m. on Tuesday, 31st March, under the direction of Dr. Ernest MacMillan and Mr. Richard Tattersall. It is now generally admitted that this is the finest performance of this work given on this continent. Student tickets will be on sale on Wednesday next at the hall porter's desk in Hart House and in the residences at a special price of fifty cents (50c.) each.

ST. MICHAEL'S ORATORICAL CLUB

The annual banquet for the Oratorical Club will take place in Hart House on Tuesday, March 17, at 6.00. The following were elected at the last meeting of the Club for next year's offices: President, F. K. Dell; Vice-President, T. P. O'Connor; Secretary, Chas. Hendy.

BRITISH RUGBY

Owing to the proximity of the Exams. the University of Toronto British Rugby Club has found it advisable not to enter either of its teams in the Spring Schedule of the Ontario Union. Any members of the Club who wish to play with any of the city clubs before the end of the academic year, are reminded that under the rulings of the A.A.U. of C. they must apply to the Athletic Directorate for permission to play with an outside team before entering any games. They are therefore advised to communicate at once with either the Secretary or Manager of the Varsity Club.

U. C. FRENCH SOCIETY

The French Society of University College will meet for the last time this term, Wednesday evening, March 25th, at the Union. A prize is offered for recitation in French, the selection to be not less than 20 lines in length. For further information see M. de Champ or any member of the executive.

RUSSIA AND THE LEAGUE

The third and last Model Assembly for the year will be held by the League of Nations Club of the University on Wednesday, March 11th, at 8 p.m. in Trinity College Library. The subject under discussion will be, briefly, "Shall we urge non-member states, in this case Russia, to join the League?" Everyone is welcome.

Members of the Club please note that the Annual Meeting and Election of Officers will take place at 7.30 immediately before the Assembly.

HOUSEHOLD SCIENCE S.C.A.

Household Science S.C.A. Annual Meeting and Supper Party at Annesley Hall, on Tuesday, March 10th, at 5.30 p.m. The elections of the executive for 1931-32 will take place at this meeting. Tickets 35c.

W.U.A. MUSICALS

The final W.U.A. musical is to be held on Tuesday afternoon, March 15th, at 3 o'clock, at the Women's Union.

We are fortunate in securing as the artists, Norman Wilkes, pianist; and Ely Spivak, violinist, who will give a combined programme.

University College women and their friends are welcome.

VIRILITY IN POLICY KEYNOTE IN 50 YEARS "VARSITY" HISTORY

Early correspondents bewailed the irreverence of Victorian era; temperance act sought by 1883 contributor.

By Hazel Hammond

In its fifty-year career as periodical and daily, "The Varsity" has done two things. It has endeavoured to adopt strong policies and to mould student opinion in accordance with them; and through the medium of its news and correspondence columns it has reflected the passing phases of student thought and activity.

The Victorian era and free-thinking are not usually linked together; yet in "The Varsity" in December, 1883, a contributor states: "There is nothing, perhaps, more characteristic of this age than the prevalence of the spirit of irreverence." While this view would seem extreme, the issues during the first seven years of publication, produced in the most authentic Victorian atmosphere, reveal an enthusiasm for unbiased academic discussion which seems to have been extinguished in the next decade by increasing student activities and social affairs.

One of the first letters published by "The Varsity", appearing in October, 1880, invited the editorial board to devote their energies to the social side of college life. "The great object of a paper like 'The Varsity' seems to me to be the creation of a genuine hearty esprit-de-corps among university men. The success which attended the 'White and Blue' was in a great measure due to the absence of anything approaching 'priggishness,'" writes the correspondent, signing himself "A Graduate".

A sceptical pamphlet distributed to students at Queen's University was made the material of a "capital bonfire" and XYZ commented on the affair at some length in the "Varsity" seventeenth issue. "Everywhere one meets with men who consider it a duty to hear only one side of certain questions, and to use all their influence to prevent others from hearing both sides," he remarks in connection with the Kingston display of intolerance.

In the next volume is an editorial note on behalf of a broad religious outlook. "A Parent" had written to a city paper complaining that Trinity students were going to take part in a meeting of the Intercollegiate Missionary Alliance, which the distressed writer felt to be at variance with the fundamentals of Trinity College. "The spirit of religious prejudice and intolerance is not dead," runs the editorial comment.

The formation of a Temperance League in the University of Toronto was strongly urged by a correspondent in October, 1883. "The tendency of the age is in favour of abstinence," he declared; and his claim would seem to have some justification, since fourteen months later the third meeting of such a League was held in Moss Hall. When the time for Prohibition demonstrations arrived, students paraded with songs and a water-wagon.

Irreverent or otherwise, the students of the Victorian decades must have possessed some of that taste for sober things for which they are so often extolled by the older generation. For months their dominating interests seem to have been the Modern Language Club, the Literary Society, and the Greek play. An earnest contributor, writing on the subject of "Our Intellectual Life", says: "What is wanted . . . is a course of vigorous lectures on social or literary questions". Soon enough the lectures appeared; and by about 1910 the university seemed to live under a constant deluge of aesthetic lectures and moral sermons. At the beginning of 1908 a University Hymnal was suggested as being a natural development since Convocation Hall was opened for services. The next year an editorial expresses the appreciation of correspondents thus: "The college sermon makes a real contribution to the religious life of the university. No sane, intelligent being can accuse the average college man of disinterestedness in matters of religion."

Staff's Greeting to Sir Robert

Due to Sir Robert Falconer's absence from the city, it has been found impracticable to get in touch with him and to receive from him the words of congratulation which we are sure he would have wished to send. The staff of "The Varsity" in the name of the Undergraduate Body take this opportunity of extending to Sir Robert their greetings and to express the hope that he is enjoying his holiday and that on his return he will be able to carry on with renewed health and strength.

LEADER OF LIBERALS RECALLS REPORTORIAL DUTIES ON "VARSITY"

Leader of opposition sends special message for jubilee issue; was once member of staff of "The Varsity".

Canada is interested in the golden jubilee of "The Varsity". Canada must be interested because so many of her prominent sons first came before the public eye through service on the student journal of their university.

Not the least of these is the Right Honourable William Lyon Mackenzie King, former Prime Minister of Canada. In his college days he was prominent, especially in a memorable student political campaign of 1895. In the days that have passed since then, he has put to good use early lessons in political craftsmanship, and for nearly a decade when all over the world governments were falling overwhelmed by the weight of post-war difficulties he retained office at the head of the Canadian government.

The Honourable Mr. King can still recall the days when he was Billy King, and here we print a letter received from him this week:

House of Commons, Canada.

Leader of the Opposition.

Ottawa, March 13, 1931.

A. E. F. Allan, Esq.,

Editor, "The Varsity",

University of Toronto,

Toronto, Ontario.

Dear Mr. Allan:

I should like to extend congratulations to the present editor and members of the staff upon the celebration by "The Varsity" of its fiftieth anniversary issue.

At this time it gives me pleasure to recall that, in the first prospectus of a university journal and review, the name of my father appeared as chairman of the committee which had charge of the enterprise. That particular project failed for want of substantial encouragement, but was subsequently revived with success in the publication known as "The Varsity", to which my father was a frequent contributor in the first year of its existence, and with the staff of which I had for a time the pleasure of being associated during my undergraduate days.

I join most heartily with graduates and undergraduates of the University in extending, not only my congratulations upon the achievements of "The Varsity" in the past, but as well the best of wishes for its even higher and more influential service through years to come.

Yours sincerely,

W. L. Mackenzie King.

Wherever the "Varsity" reporter has gone in the past week seeking information from graduates of the University about the days of old, he has been received with interest, chuckles of remembrance and countless reminiscences. Stephen Leacock, Arthur Stringer, Brigadier-General C. H. Mitchell, Merrill Denison, Magistrate Edmund Jones, Sir William Mulock, Canon Cody, Professor A. T. DeLury, James Brebner and many others—men and women who in the past fifty years have been connected with the University of Toronto, have shown that willingness to share their memories of student days with modern undergraduates, through the medium of "The Varsity" on its fiftieth birthday.

On going over the old files of "The Varsity" in the stacks of the University Library, more than one investigator has noted the prominence in undergraduate affairs thirty and forty years ago of the leaders of the business world of 1930. But equally noticeable has been the fact that many who in their day seemed destined for a brilliant future have since dropped entirely out of sight. Most of the anecdotes and incidents related in the old files were about men of note in their day as students but forgotten now.

Even the names of the first Board of Editors of "The Varsity" to-day sound strange. They were: Douglas Armour, G. G. S. Lindsey, A. F. Lobb, W. F. W. Creelman and George Sandfield Macdonald. Only the last named is still alive.

"THE START"

Excerpts from the first editorial in the first issue of "The Varsity", dated Saturday, October 7, 1880.

The Varsity starts on its career unattended by malevolence and amid the hearty "God-speed-you" of friends. The chief incentive, however, has not been encouragement, but the consciousness of a capability to supply what is beginning to be looked upon as a trustworthy indication of vigor and intensity of life in a university. We lay bare the spring of action with a reluctant hand, because exposition of motives is, not infrequently, mistaken for indulgence in an apologetic strain. An appeal to charitable forbearance would be sinister to any statement regarding the opportuneness of the Varsity appearance. If there is conviction as to such a statement having foundation in fact, then all color of extenuation should be bleached from the above given exposition. Indifference to the misapprehension we have anticipated might also be taken to argue against adequacy of conception with respect to our proper sphere of employment. The present undertaking is meant to serve advantageously the general good of a community whose professed passport to consideration is intellectual quality of character. The first impression conveyed by this declaration may be, that the claim advanced is pre-eminently arrogant; that the implied assumption of competence to act efficiently in this field of operation is destitute of any respectable warrant. We hasten with the corrective. The justness of the impression would be unimpeachable if the Varsity presumed to pose as the guiding star, as the interpreter even, of a Canadian school board, or of a graduate and undergraduate humanity. In reality our intentions are very demure: not a guiding star, not an interpreter, but a register of opinion in and out of the University in matters of education; an unbiased analyst of what constitutes individual well-being. Finally, there is needed the moral accessory of strongly-expressed sanction from the generation whose recollections of academic life have become gilded athwart the distance of many intervening years. Few will be disposed to detect extravagance in these stipulations; a close spirit of exaction would be in consistent with the enlightenment of a auditory gathered round a prominent seat of learning. At most, insistence will be laid on the conventional engagements of full liberty of discussion and fair play—engagements which are entered upon in an earnest spirit of determination to abide by in these columns.

Sketch Room

Some knowledge of the nature of Bertram Brooker's exhibition this week in the Hart House Sketch Room may be gained from the story told by members of the Sketch Committee that two of Brooker's large canvases were unwittingly hung upside down.

Brooker's own explanation serves to render his works much more intelligible than they are when one first enters the Sketch Room. The abstract paintings (seen as "Sounds Assembling", the central figure on the East wall) are, in Brooker's own words the result of a musical inspiration; they are compositions in pure form, mass, and colour; and are attempts to compose arbitrarily with these ingredients representations of sounds and not representations of natural objects in the ordinary sense. They are undoubtedly well done.

There is a strange and awesome quality in the Elijah series of pen drawings on the North wall, and in the illustrations for "The Ancient Mariner", which bespeaks a vivid imagination, and a most unusual artistic perception on the part of the artist.

There could be no severer contrast than that between this exhibition and its immediate predecessor. Yet the mere fact that Brooker fails to conform to orthodox standards and methods should not condemn him. We are inclined to say that Brooker's work is a valuable contribution to Canadian Art because of its very freshness and originality.

Hart House Theatre

To-morrow night the Experimental Group of Hart House Theatre will present three Canadian plays in keeping with the policy of the Theatre to present one such bill each year.

In Easter week the Hart House Players will present Comedy of Errors. Mr. Stone has had to take particular trouble with this play as it is one of the most difficult comedies of Shakespeare to present on the modern stage.

We desire to impress upon the reader the fact that this issue of "Varsity" is a strictly respectable one. A lot of people will probably ask for their times back when they hear of this. After all we are over fifty years old and at that shadowy stage in life anyone becomes respectable, even a politician. (Cries of "hear! hear!" from the Parliament Bull-dings.) In the year 1880 B.C. (Before Coatsworth) the first "Varsity" modestly came off the presses and carried not one joke about ladies' ankles. That was because the gentleman of those gay times didn't know that ladies have ankles. To-day, in the year 1931 A.D. (Anno Draperi), we are obliged to confess that we know that ladies have ankles; and we view with alarm the attitude of apathy and neglect that our government seems to have adopted towards this growing danger.

C—C

We purr our greetings to the former cats who have come back to lap milk with us. Meow, comrades! Let us sit on the fence and sing the dear old "Blue and White." And in the manner of Heywood Prune we say, let 'em have it boys!

C—C

Let's see. What was it we were saying before we were interrupted?

C—C

We had a crack we were saving up for two weeks, and last night we forgot it!

That should leave enough space for a picture of the Harriers of 1066.

C—C

We've been reviewing "humorous" columns in ancient "Varsities" for the past several ages, and now we couldn't think of anything funny if we tried to.

C—C

And the night-editor wouldn't have room for it if we did.

C—C

So good-bye till September morn (unless May mourn gets us).

—Chaz.

A YEAR OF MUSIC

Musically, the present session has been a revelation of the growing interest among undergraduates in good music. The fact that artists no longer expect an audience to which they must "play down" is gratifying to all sponsors and very hopeful for the future of the best in music.

The Sunday Evening Concerts in spite of their frequently esoteric character have had larger audiences than for some years. The series provided by the Hart House String Quartet has revealed increased felicity and refinement in their work and they have brought several new and intensely interesting compositions to their Toronto audiences.

The Friday afternoon recitals have presented many of Toronto's younger artists. The last two afternoons a lecture-recital of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, given in the two piano Liszt arrangement, by Mr. Viggo Kihl assisted by Miss Florence Singer, have done much to teach laymen a method for appreciating music in general.

Mr. Campbell Meines has again found time to conduct the Songsters and is doing very excellent work in restoring folk-song to its rightful place in the affections of amateurs.

Owing to ill-health Dr. Moure was unable to provide his usual series of organ recitals, but three important programs were given by distinguished Toronto organists, Dr. MacMillan, Mr. Robb and Mr. Tattersall.

Three pleasing Sunday afternoon concerts sponsored by the Women's Undergraduate Association were provided by Mr. Paul Bai, Mme. Joyce Hornyansky and Signor Guerrero. Every college on the campus made its contribution to the season's music. Victoria produced its symphony orchestra which is said to have adequately preserved Victoria's reputation musically.

UNDERGRADUATE DAILY SAW LIGHT AS WORK OF JOINT STOCK COMPANY; ENTERED UPON WARFARE IN 1895

The first issue of "The Varsity" appeared on Saturday, Oct. 7, 1880, as a result of the efforts of a group of enthusiasts who had formed The Varsity Joint Stock Company with shares of no par value selling for five dollars.

So modest were the first editors that not for two years did their names appear in the journal they sponsored, and to this day it is not known which of a group of five was the Editor-in-Chief. All but one of the five are dead now.

Until 1889, "The Varsity" appeared weekly during the college year, giving vent to student opinion with haphazard vigour. News, flashes of wit, caustic comment, story, essay and verse appeared side by side in the little eight or twelve page booklet costing at just five cents a copy, and after 1885, ten cents a copy or two dollars a year.

After ten years of financial tribulation The Varsity Stock Company failed and during the session 1889-90, no issues of "The Varsity" appeared.

In 1890, the Literary and Scientific Society of University College assumed the name and good will of the magazine. "The Varsity" declined in interest for a few years but flourished economically—due in large part to the sagacity of George Howard Ferguson, business manager in 1892. The subscription rate which had been reduced to one dollar in 1889 again became two dollars a year.

In 1895, "The Varsity" became embroiled in its first University controversy. With the help of The Globe, William Lyon Mackenzie King, and one or two high officials of the University it forced the Ontario Government to inquire into the administration of President Loudon.

Also in 1895, S.P.S. and the women of University College through their respective student societies were granted a measure of control over "The Varsity" and again the price became one dollar a year. For seven years it was managed by an independent board, nominated by the three societies concerned.

In 1902, "The Varsity" was handed over to the Undergraduates Union, which also bought up "College Topics" a four year old independent news sheet. The two publications were made one under the name of "The Varsity" which henceforth specialized in the presentation of news rather than literature. At this time there were on the staff representatives from U. C., Medicine, S.P.S., Knox, Wycliff, Dental College, and Pharmacy.

In 1905 "The Varsity" again became the center of attention as active revolt at President Loudon's leadership once more broke out. This time it was a committee of the Senate that made the resultant investigation.

In 1907 and 1908 the editors met frequently in a series of Varsity Sources to discuss the policy of the journal; and in 1909, it was decided to convert "The Varsity" into a newspaper, as The University Monthly then under the same management was considered a sufficient literary outlet for the students.

After October, 1909, "The Varsity" appeared twice a week as a four page, five column newspaper, with a subscription price of one dollar per year. Two years later it was found necessary to issue it three times a week and a larger six column page came into use.

In 1910 "The Varsity" was just printed in The University Press, where for the past twenty years in a little two room office on the second floor every issue has been edited.

Student journalism again fell into disfavour in some quarters in the fall of 1912, when "The Varsity" demanded an apology from the Principal of Harbord Collegiate who had publicly stated extreme views with respect to the morality of a group of students who one day invaded the local school. The principal in turn demanded an apology from the paper. Explanations were made on both sides but no apologies.

There were few changes during the war years except that a larger page was used, and that the women's staff became an influential and well-trained section of the whole.

In 1921 and 1922 a group of young and experienced journalists came up to the University. As a result of their efforts, "The Varsity" became a daily in October, 1923, the women's staff was almost abolished, an associate membership in the Canadian Press was almost secured, and the Champus Cat first meowed at the instigation of "Dunc" Halliday.

Since then "The Varsity" has progressed calmly enough from a technical point of view. One hundred or more times a year, the second floor of the Press remains a scene of activity throughout the night as the undergraduate staff brings out its morning issue. Editors, reporters, columnists, critics, desk men and technical staff combine together in an organization modelled so far as possible on that of a fairly efficient down town daily to get out "The Varsity."

Editors of Past and Present Faced with Critics Day by Day

By A. E. F. Allen

Policy is the best faculty. Editors of "The Varsity" have been writing editorials for fifty years. And not one of those fifty years has been allowed to pass before some boy orator or eager parliamentarian has risen in his wrath within the safe confines of a college debating society and declared it as his opinion that the editorial policy of "The Varsity" was not only not all it should be but was distinctly smothering to be viewed with alarm.

What is the editorial policy of "The Varsity"? What has it been in the past? Is there any continuity in "The Varsity's" editorial policy from 1880 to 1931? If so, what is it?

In the bowels of the University Library, leaning indolently beside a shelf containing a complete file of that Yellow Book in which is embalmed the very soul and body of the Beardsley period, there are to be found a series of bound volumes containing every page of "The Varsity" since its inception fifty-one years ago. Each edition of this paper contains one page which custom has decreed shall be called the Editorial Page. When the publication was a weekly, there were about twenty such pages per year. When the paper donned long trousers and began appearing thrice a week, and eventually five times a week, the number of editorial pages a year increased to one hundred or more.

In an average year there will probably be four—or, at the outside, five —people responsible for the writing of these articles of opinion known as editorials. The bulk of the editorials will be composed, with varying degrees of travail, by the editor-in-chief; the rest by the women's editor and the associate editors, or those whom seniority grants the status of associates. But for all of these equally the editor-in-chief must assume full editorial responsibility, as he must for every other printed word which appears in the paper.

What do these people write about? Often about themselves. The first editorial which appeared in volume one, number one, of "The Varsity" was a statement of the liberal ideas and ideals which motivated those responsible for the new venture in undergraduate journalism and a promulgation of the criteria by which they wished their efforts to be judged. The second editorial in the same issue, strange to say, deals with the then inflammatory subject of co-education. Reiterations of the pros and cons of these two topics have proved perennial for half a century.

They have been rivalled in popularity only by investigatory or self-congratulatory discussions of the place of the University of Toronto in the cosmos, and by general considerations of the value of the so-called higher education. At least one editorial per year on the oily subject of "University Spirit" (sic) has usually been considered necessary to life, liberty and corporate happiness. In the days before extensive sport writing, a good annual crop of sports editorials was usual. Philosophizing on the topic of modern journalism has been increasingly popular of recent years, while the war-and-peace bone has come in for a fair share of contention. "The New Pacifism" was flaunted in the face of the sullen gods as the triumph of the illuminated mind over barbaric matter throughout the altruistic year of 1913-14. Religion was a favourite matter in pre-war days. An editorial in December, 1913, states that the majority of undergraduates are "un-religious and un-moral; and by this we do not mean irreligious and immoral."

But in all this plethora of printed opinionizing, where are we to look for a connecting link? There must be a sustaining ideal somewhere, some theme which runs through the editorial columns of "The Varsity" from

EVENING
O happy hour of eventide
When work is bade adieu,
And gastric yearnings down inside
Bring thoughts of steaming stew.

And when the toiler's hands have pried
The mud from his moustache,
He heaves his heavy hod aside
And hastens home to hash.

Then banker, bum, and artisan,
Go sup when labours cease,
And many a tired business man
Goes home to have his peace.

While golden gravy drops cascade
O'er cutlets carefully carved
The solemn soup songs serenade
The stomachs of the starved.

Then one by each at close of day
The garden hoses squirt
Their silvery chlorinated spray
Upon the grass stained dirt.

Aromas from the abbatoirs
Are borne upon the zephyrs,
Suggesting slaughtered sows and scores
Of disembowelled heifers.

Joy comes to all at close of day
When hungry hounds are hushed,
And all are smiling, happy, gay,
And e'en the streets are flushed.

Some weep for barps and golden wings,
But only one woe racks us,
That we can't print such foamy things
As are in "Epistaxis".
Some weep for haloes, some for horns,
We have one woe that socks:
We never can, our wisdom mourns,
Do things men do at Knox.

Some weep for fame, 'tis often said,
On stadium or campus,
But most uneasy lies the head
That wears the name of Champus.

What is being neglected at Toronto? And why is it being neglected? For years this state of affairs has flagrantly flaunted its stultified perspective before the unassuming student body. Let us educate our young to discharge their obligatory confirmations of Einstein's theory. Let us neutralize the gross materialization of this hallucination.

Gardner Family Ran Varsity, 1921

Greetings have been received by "The Varsity" from Elizabeth Cringan Gardner and her husband, W. J. Gardner, who were respectively women's and men's editors in the year 1920-21.

"Of course it is impossible to recall all the high spots of our 'Varsity' days, but I can still well remember the consternation among the women of the staff when the editorial offices were moved from their familiar quarters in the cloisters, to the forbidding walls of Hart House. In their joy in their privileged location, the men quite forgot that the women editors were automatically excluded."

In recalling amusing incidents, Mrs. Gardner tells of a "Varsity" dinner party when one of the associate editors was so pleased with the partner he drew in the lottery as his guest, that his friends still remind him of the fact that he drew his future wife. "Another interesting feature of this dinner was that it was unchaperoned—the astounding thing was not the missing chaperone, but that no one even thought about it till the next day when the avalanche of correspondence re university chaperone (a vital question at that time), reminded us of our own appalling delinquency."

HISTORY OF HUMOUR COLUMNS

Innumerable columns from 1880 to present day include Nuptial Notes and Di-Varsities.

By C. L. CONURN

From the day of its inception "The Varsity" has run columns of one sort and another, of every conceivable form and content. Columns have dealt with editorials (of course) humour, personals and gossip, exchanges, literary discussions, criticism of the arts, the propagation of poetry (for some years the editors seem to have believed that a poem a day keeps the ball off away), announcements, sport, women's affairs, social notes (including one headed Nuptial Notes), questions and answers, news comment, foreign news letters and even straight local news.

Lack of space prohibits mention of all the multitude by name and date, but excerpts from a few of the most important ones will give their general trend. From Observations of the Patriarch Student, Vol. I, 1880:

"A hundred years ago (sic) when you called on a girl she kissed you good-bye. Now, if you suggest anything of the sort, her father calls you into the library and asks you what you are worth. Are we a nation? And is this progress?"

"Doctor Wilson has recently missed several skulls, and during the past fortnight a new kind of soup has been added to the long menu of the residence dinner."

Antenatal shades of Hart House!
From Our Waller, 1883: "An exchange says, 'A dozen women ride now where one woman rode a few years ago.' This arrangement must be hard on the old horse."

In 1885 a new column calling itself Di-Varsities appeared, and may be considered a direct lineal ancestor of Campus Cat. In it appeared "The Varsity's" first limerick.

"There was a young fellow named Jno.
Who went skating out over the Dno.
The ice being thin,
Poor Jno'y fell in,
And was, very nearly, quite gno."

To the zeal for research of the editor of Di-Varsities in '86 we can credit the following: "An unrecalled law of New Jersey, passed when the State was a British colony, reads as follows: 'That all women of whatever age, whether virgins, maids or widows, who shall, after this act, impose upon, seduce and betray into matrimony any of His Majesty's subjects, by virtue of scents, cosmetics, washes, paints, artificial teeth, false hair or high-heeled shoes, shall incur the penalty of the law now in force against witchcraft and like mis-demeanors'."

In 1885 a literary column, Round the Table, was introduced. A single passage reveals the tenor of its way:

"Words can scarce depict the agitation in our midst these last two weeks. The sanctum has re-echoed with the thunder of debate and din of wordy strife. Indeed, such was the turmoil that I half expected that the Table, solid and substantial as it is, would betake itself to a more tranquil scene. What a loss were that, my countrymen! No more of our pleasant saunterings along the highways and by-ways of literature; no more halting by the way, as fancy might prompt, to pluck some quaint conceit of other days; no more laughter at merry jest and sober reflection on subject grave and weighty. The whole trouble grew out of certain editorial utterances on a subject of never-failing interest—Did I hear any of you say scholarships? Not so fast, my impetuous friend, you are quite mistaken; better wait another time till I have done. You did not give me time to tell you that these appeared in the 'Mail' and that the subject was Shakespeare."

And so it went on, and on, and on, for hours, and hours, and hours. . . .

In 1890 the Sanctum Philosopher arose to air his views on matters philosophical and otherwise. From him, also, one excerpt is sufficient:

"The delivery of an annual Latin Oration is without doubt one of the most commendable of practices in vogue among us. It has been objected that in devoting a portion of our annual exercises to this oration we are guilty in a measure of selfishness; outside the student body, it is urged, not more than sixty or seventy per cent. of the auditors are able to follow spoken Latin. We are fain to plead guilty to the accusation; but let those who raise such an objection consider how sweet a boon this annual address is to the pale student, hanging fascinated on every syllable of the oration."

A Personals column, Corridor Cullings, first appeared in '94, successor to "Midst the Mortar Boards", of the same ilk. A peep into the annals in '96 makes clear just how personal it sometimes was.

"Mr. Campbell McMurchy has decided to continue his course and graduate with '97."

"Mr. — is nursing an abscess on the back of his neck."

The Question Drawer, a semi-serious attempt to answer undergraduate problems which flourished briefly in '96, was also somewhat personal in its attitude at times, as replies show. "Sophomore, S.P.S.—You can get soap very cheap down at T. Eaton's on Friday (bargain day)."

"Horse Power, S.P.S.—In riding a tandem it is considered most proper for the gentleman to ride behind."

A note in Corridor Cullings of the same era reveals that you can purchase anything from Glee Club Concert tickets to University Crest Buttons from the janitor.

A column of news commentary, Week By Week, of the early "Naughties", took unto itself prophetic robes on an occasion in 1903, following restrictions upon the ancient rites of initiations, hazing and general bawling, coming out with the following glimpse of what might have been:

"What of the future? I venture a conjecture. In 1925, the boys will be dressed in skirts and bonnets, and will march to lectures in 'divisions'. They will live in residence and be subject to curfew law, which will require lights to be out at 9 p.m. No one will be allowed out later except under careful chaperage. Each student will take daily exercise in smiling, his diet will be carefully supervised, and the Sporting Editor of 'The Varsity' will conduct a two page department on 'Chats With My Boys'."

The columns which appeared in the first two decades of this century were mainly concerned with sport and other student activities. After the war, however, columns were conducted by returned men, under the names of The Bass Drum and The Old Estaminet. Both were in a breezy, straight-forward style reminiscent of "Over There" in strong contrast to previous efforts.

Convocation in Attic In Year of Fire, 1890

By C. H. MITCHELL, DEAN OF S.P.S.

It was in a dream of reminiscence that a representative of "The Varsity" left me a few days ago after he had asked me to contribute something to this celebration issue, having reminded me that in my college days I was an associate editor of that remarkable journal.

Yes, I admitted it and told him I was proud of the association. My three years on "The Varsity" Staff forty years ago left many indelible memories which have been burnished up over the past week end as I turned over the pages of the four volumes—bound in half leather—that I have treasured amongst my books.

Let it not be thought that because it was a weekly its editors had an easy time in the supply of material for its columns. There was, as there is today, the periodic effort to get one's copy in on time and there was the ever important editor-in-chief pressing his associates to have their contributions ready to his hand, even if they had to be pushed into the Varsity office letter box at the corner of Spadina and College on a Sunday evening, as we frequently did.

In those brave days there were brave editors, brave in work, industry and ability; men who have already gone a long way in Canadian life. The University and Varsity can be proud of Stephen Leacock, of W. S. McLay, now Dean of McMaster University, J. A. McLean, President of the University of Manitoba and S. J. McLean, now Vice-Chairman of the Board of Dominion Railway Commissioners.

Even of more interest is the fact that just forty years ago today G. H. Ferguson, lately Prime Minister of Ontario, was the Business Manager of Varsity. A year after that the list of associate editors included the name of W. L. M. King. During this period the President of the Literary and Scientific Society (always a graduate) was L. P. Duff, now Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Canada and, during the past two months, the acting Governor General.

Last month, as St. Valentine's Day passed, we were reminded that it was forty-one years ago when the disastrous University fire occurred. In the initial number of the year, October, 1890, the leading editorial was entitled "Convocation Notes" and described with much ado the Autumn Convocation. On that occasion, due to the fire a few months before, the ceremony was held in the "new School of Practical Science" then under construction. The member of the Varsity Staff attended "with reportorial intent" and described his approach "up the dusty new-made terrace" and his ultimate progress up the three flights of stairs to the "large room at the top" which is now the First Year drafting room. Then he said he "could only look silently on and be impressed. Impressed with what? With red brick walls and heaps of clay, with scaffold-poles and mortar hods and the clink of mason's trowel?" And concluding with the memory of the fire blackened walls of University College across the lawn.

During the present Session much effort has been put forth in the revision of the Constitution under which, along with other student enterprises, the Varsity is published. Had those engaged in this laborious work researched in the dim history of antiquity they would have discovered that their forebears had likewise struggled.

When the new constitution was given to Varsity in March, 1894, the journal was still published weekly by the Literary and Scientific Society. The Society appointed the Editorial and Business Boards, these being representatives of Societies by proportion. The Editorial Board had four from University College and there was one from each of the others. The Editor-in-Chief was chosen by the Board from among its members. The business Board was appointed in a like manner.

The financial provisions were ingenious but simple for "Surplus funds, after setting apart $50 for the succeeding year" were to go: a quarter to "improvement of the paper" a quarter to "be divided among the various societies in proportion to the number of paid subscribers from each" and a half "left at the disposal of the Business Board." On the other hand any deficit was to be met by the different societies in the proportion of their representation on the Business Board.

There were no salaries for editors in those days. The journal too had to stand on its own merits as a production, without outside financial help. It positively had to appeal in popularity and readable quality or its circulation would have languished and subscriptions and advertising revenue fallen.

In 1890 the circulation of "The Varsity" demanded a higher rate; and special efforts had to be resorted to to gain subscriptions. It was with surprise and amusement that I found, bound in with my issue of October 7, 1890, a blue subscription form designed for this purpose.

This blue slip, to encourage the renewal of one's subscription, was addressed to G. H. Ferguson, Business Manager, and instructed him to "Please send me The Varsity for the current year for which you will find enclosed $2.00—". After forty years it might be interesting to see the Hon. Mr. Ferguson's reaction, were he now to receive this communication by mail (along with the two dollars) at Canada House in London. One just wonders whether at that distance and recollecting various Varsity incidents of the past year he might conclude that again Varsity has gone on a subscription basis.

"Varsity" Led Crusade To Gain Co-education

By JEAN P. MORTON

The subject of co-education had, states a later editorial, "while unfair to the fair sex, implies a want of control on the part of the men, and a lack of disciplinary ability in the lecturers." Again as late as 1884, when the point was almost won, there was another comment stating that the adoption of co-education as the system for University College, "was a serious step, in the matter of social progress."

Women did enter the College in 1885, after petitions had been sent into the Government from all parts of the province, demanding a practical solution from the Legislature. It is notable that the University of Toronto was one of the last universities on the continent to give in to the demand. In the first year there were eleven women undergraduates in third and fourth years, all in honour courses, and "quite up to the average in point of comprehensiveness and difficulty." During the next five years the matter was left to solve itself. Always the men were extremely self-conscious, and made frequent comments as "the mingling of the sexes for higher learning tends to destroy that charm which underlies all the loveliness of a woman's character."

In 1904 there was a slight reaction. One person explained, "The women make the men less vigorous and manly, and they do not like girls to know more than they." The women at this date were evidently less demure and studious, desiring co-education in fact, as well as in theory. Also it was only a few years before this that Medicine had admitted women into its course. Trinity College and Victoria both had had their separate medical colleges, the latter having the honour to have graduated Augusta Stowe Gullen, the first woman graduate in medicine in Canada.

Since 1900, there had been so great an increase in registration of both men and women students that the classes were overcrowded and the suggestion was made to separate the men and women into different colleges in order to relieve the congestion. However it never became official, and was dropped as impractical as the same faculty staff would have to give double lectures. There was also a discussion raised during these years of a Union for both men and women for social academic activities. It never came to anything however, ending in Hart House for the men, and separate Women's Unions in the various colleges. This was one of the worst setbacks co-education had received. Now it is almost impossible to arrange for any Union where men and women may meet equally.

During the war the women were left to carry on alone, and developed remarkably; but when the men returned after 1918, older and stronger-minded, they dominated women's organizations, with the exception the Students Council where genuine co-education—joint interest—of men and women began to develop from that time. However in the smaller year executives, in University College, a decided reaction took place and the women began to agitate for separation of governing bodies. The men were agreeable to it would allow them to have smokers without bothering about separating their finances from the

The men were agreeable to it would allow them to have smokers without bothering about separating their finances from the women's. A separation was enacted in 1923, and is still in order.

At Trinity and St. Michael's the executives are usually divided because the Colleges themselves have separate men's and women's colleges, but under single management, and taking a few lectures together, particularly at St. Michael's. As far as real co-education is concerned, Victoria has far-outstepped the other colleges. Last year, 1929-30, an amalgamation of all societies at the college, and there are not a few, was formed under the name of the Victoria College Union, which is run by men and women representatives of the college and controls all the lesser activities, with perfect harmony.

Co-education has developed considerably since the days when men and women were moral degenerates if seen walking to lectures together, but it is not yet perfect.

Playwrite Began Career As "Varsity" Cartoonist

Merrill Dennison, now known all over the continent as a writer of plays, began his career on "The Varsity", not as a reporter but as a cartoonist. "But at the same time I was probably the first man who tried to invent a course in journalism," he said. He took all subjects he thought he would find useful, spent a year on a downtown paper, and then returned to college to become an architect. Some years after the war he became associated with the art side of Hart House Theatre; and as plays were needed, he decided to write them. Since then writing has become a career for him. He has borne the mark of the examination system through life, he told the reporter in being able to do things best rapidly and under pressure. "The Varsity" in the years before the war was becoming definitely a starting place for newspaper men. At the same time it was losing its independence, as it had to seek financial support from the Athletic Association. "There were hot battles in those days. A member of the Board of Governors called the students 'drunken ruffians' for crashing a dance at Harbord Collegiate. This was untrue; though the old Union was a Bohemian hang-out for smokers and pool players, very little drinking went on. It was distinctly declassé to get tight—worse than brown shoes with a dress suit. That is the only difference for the worse that I find in students of to-day. But the hard drinking that goes on now is probably due to the war and prohibition. It will be righted in time." A change in the right direction was the new relation between professors and students, Mr. Dennison thought. "In my time the professors—even the young ones—were all aloof creatures in tin pants."

In those days there were fewer clubs, but the same amount of big dances. Moreover, there were four good theatres in Toronto—the Alexandra, the Princess, the Grand and Shca's—with excellent vaudeville.

"No, I don't think you take things any more seriously than we did. We were too innocent and fumbling to make our paper as lively as it is today. 'The Varsity' has kept pace with the downtown papers, that's the only difference."

Campus Politics Gave Training To Well-known National Leaders

Back in 1898 Major Erie Armour was business manager of "The Varsity". He secured this position by election and was the executive official of the paper, arranging for the advertising and the printing and providing the security. He, like the other officers, received no salary; although the editor was usually given an honorarium at the end of the year.

Down in the office of the Crown Attorney at the City Hall, Major Armour and several members of his office staff, reminisced cheerfully of old days at the University of Toronto.

"At that time 'The Varsity' was not a newspaper, but a magazine published weekly. Each year elected its representatives and it was their duty to solicit contributions from their respective years. The work was entirely gratuitous. If you look up the files of those years you will see articles written by such men, as Dr. F. A. Cleveland, Arthur Stringer, Jim Tucker, Harvey O'Higgins, Stephen Leacock, Hamar Greenwood (now Lord Greenwood), and so on. Just previous to my term in office, at the time when the 'big row' of '95 took place, MacKenzie King and Arthur Meighen were both on the staff.

At that time the paper was printed by a printing shop down on Court Street, who did all the proof-reading and linotyping. A contract was made to print so many issues and the responsibility of paying the bill to the printers rested on the Business Manager. If he could not secure enough subscriptions he had to make up the deficit out of his own pocket, for the fee was not compulsory.

Massey Interests Conceded Need of Athletes For Hart House Site

When the Massey Foundation, in co-operation with the Y.M.C.A., began negotiations for the erection of a building on the campus to meet the demand of the male undergraduates for a Students' Union and Y building combined, the site which logically took their eye was that occupied by the University Gymnasium.

They immediately approached the Board of Governors with a view to completing a deal. Due to the timely foresight of one of the members of the Board, the Governors were made to realize that the position of the Gym was the only feasible centre for Varsity athletics. Thus they refused to give it up to the Massey interests.

Finding their efforts blocked at the first move, the Massey people offered to comply with the university's need for a new gymnasium and athletic centre and erect the necessary building in conjunction with their own undertaking, if the Board would contribute $125,000 to the fund. With their point acceded, the Governors, through the Athletic Association, made the necessary contribution. Then the Massey interests decided to take the whole undertaking in their own hands and returned the money to the Athletic Association, where it still rests and will until the erection of the Women's Union is undertaken.

With the best remaining unoccupied site on the campus in their minds the Massey Foundation proceeded with their undertaking, most of which was completed before the Great War broke out. During the War the building, although incomplete, was used by the Dominion Government as a hospital, and after the War, was finally completed and furnished, costing many times more than the original estimate. The building is now one of the finest pieces of architecture of its kind in the world and an institution unsurpassed in any university on the continent.

Contemporaries of The Nineties Led Lives of Sober Simplicity

Professor A. T. DeLury, Dean of University College, when asked for a tale of the days when "The Varsity" was young and men were allegedly men, when students drank till dawn and "The Varsity" came out once a week, had many things to say of early days.

"What about 'The Varsity'?" he was asked.

"During my undergraduate days 'The Varsity' did not make a point of publishing news, although the editorials took an active part in the burning questions of the time. The paper was more literary than now, containing poems and other contributions, and less space was devoted to advertising. 'The Varsity' was then a weekly, but as it grew gradually to its present status of publication five times a week it took the natural course of publishing news and more advertising with the frequent addition of humour, and sometimes wit. 'The Varsity' has always been very readable," he added, "largely because of the active editorial policy of discussing current affairs openly."

"There were a lot of men at the university about your time who have become very well known to the public, weren't there?"

He had plenty of names ready for this question. "Oh yes, for instance Canon H. J. Cody, Magistrate Edmund Jones, the Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Sir Thomas White, the Rt.

Hon. Arthur Meighen, Jock Inkster, the Hon. W. E. N. Sinclair, W. L. M. King, Hamar Greenwood, T. P. B. Stewart, the poet; Norman Duncan, Arthur Stringer—"

"Stephen Leacock was a student here about your time?"

"Oh yes, there was Stephen Leacock, and Edward Beatty of the C.P.R., and others. Many that I know then are on the staff of the university now. All of these people either gave promise in letters or otherwise gave indication of an activity likely to find recognition in public life."

"Could you say a few words about the life of the students when you were an undergraduate?" Professor DeLury was asked by his interviewer.

"Well, when I was an undergraduate life was noticeably simpler than it is now for a student. The so-called social events were infrequent, the most important one of the year being the Annual Conversation."

"Is what we hear true, about the wild life among the students of the gay eighties and nineties?"

"Not at all. In those days a mode of speech had it that the students as a body were somewhat wild, but of course they are much as the students of to-day, relative to their times. The tendency of our fathers to talk about their gay lives when young is just the 'poetry of the past'. Poetry, you know, means fiction, doesn't it?"

Women's Gymnasium Looms in Near Future

A gymnasium for women will be erected next year at Hoskin Avenue and Devonshire Place, unless the plans of the Women's Building Committee are doomed to failure. While certain announcement cannot be made yet, there are definite prospects of a $300,000 building in the near future.

For several years plans have been in existence for such a building on this site, but the proposed gymnasium have been outgrown before being built, and the original plans must be extended. During the last year 633 women have participated in athletics—tennis, basketball, baseball, hockey, swimming and badminton. The number required to take physical training totalled 303, whereas if the requirement were similar to that for men it would have been 1024.

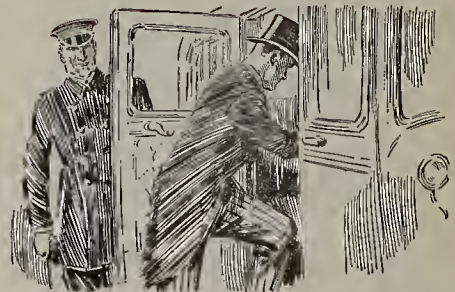

At present the compulsory classes are conducted in such cramped quarters that they are a misery to students and instructors alike. The only swimming pool available for women is that at the Household Science Building, a miniature affair drained and refilled by antique methods, situated at the northern extremity of the campus. The U.C. Badminton Club does its best in the auditorium of the Women's Union, where it is in constant competition with the Players' Guild, and where the court is frequently filled with chairs placed ready for a meeting. The basketball and baseball teams are often forced to practice in the gymnasiums of churches in various sections of the city.

If the plans for the new building are realized, the persistent work of the graduate committee will have borne its first fruit. A committee which had met spasmodically since before the troubled period of the war was reorganized two years ago. The present chairman is Miss M. E. T. Addison, Dean of Women in Victoria College, and among its members are women holding important positions in the university and well situated to gauge the needs of the undergraduate women. While they are at present directing their energies towards obtaining the gymnasium which are the most pressing need, they still hope for an adequate comprehensive building to serve all the women of the university.

As Dr. Malcolm Wallace, Principal of University College, says of such a large project: "There's no difficulty about that building except one—money"; and owing to the amount required it must be "inevitably private money". Yet from the 2500 women for whom such a building would be destined, the committee looks for enthusiastic co-operation next year.

Can You Command Success?

IT can be done, 'tis said, if will power in sufficient force is present. Certain it is, however, that the man with a healthy, vigorous body, radiating qualities of leadership, is more likely to succeed than the man with a delicate, undernourished frame.

Precursor of S.A.C. Met Financial Difficulties by Sale of New Rugs

One of the vital institutions of the University is the Joint Executive of the Students' Administrative Councils. This executive has the direction and administration of the activities of the men and women students of the university. It also acts as a means of communication between the university authorities and the student body.

In the fall of 1905 on the suggestion of J. R. McLean, B.A., a lecturer in Public Speaking, the Students' Parliament was founded. Mr. McLean felt that some effort should be made to provide a common meeting ground where men from all the affiliated colleges could assemble and discuss topics of general interest. The meetings of the Parliament took the form of a debate on subjects of general interest either in Provincial or Dominion politics.

The next step came in 1906-07, when the University Act was passed, introducing a new system of representation. The colleges represented at that time were University, School of Practical Science, Medicine, Knox, Victoria, Wycliffe, Trinity and Dentistry, one member from each college. The purpose of the Parliament was "to act as a unifying force in university life and to discuss general university topics and questions of academic and public interest."

In 1909 the Parliament received a new constitution. In this year it also took over the publication of "Torontoensis", which had formerly been published privately by the students. Also at this time the Parliament was in financial difficulties and in order to raise money it marketed a new rug, which was "an artistic creation in royal blue and white with a shield design and meander border."

In February 1912, the Parliament underwent a crisis, over the question of discipline. The question was referred to the students who voted, with a seventy per cent majority, in favour of student control. Three defects of the Parliament were pointed out in a long statement, as follows: (1) It has not had the active support of the student body. (2) Because of its unwieldy nature—about 120 members—the interest on the part of the individual members fell off and little active work was done. (3) For various reasons it has not been financially successful.

The final outcome was a new constitution and a new name. The Students' Parliament became the Students' Administrative Council in 1913. This constitution lasted, in its main details, down to 1921 when it was altered in order to incorporate the Women's Council.

In order to settle the financial difficulties of the Council, a compulsory fee of one dollar was imposed on all the male undergraduates in the Faculties of Applied Science, Arts, Education and Medicine. This fee was raised to two dollars in 1916. The representation numbered twenty-eight, composed of the representatives from the various colleges and faculties in the university. The control of discipline was formally given to the Council by the Capt. At this time also a permanent salaried secretary was employed by the Council.

Up to the year 1917 the women at the university had had no voice in the affairs of the students. But in this year they formed the Women's Students' Administrative Council. During the war it undertook the organization of collections for the British and Canadian Red Cross. The Council was composed of a representative from each college and faculty and an advisory board of the dean of Queen's Hall, Heads of the University and Victoria College Unions, dean of St. Hilda's, and an Alumnae representative from St. Michael's College. The Executive consisted of the heads of each college and the president of Medicine, a compulsory fee being levied on all women of the university. From this compulsory fee both men and women received their "Varsity" free of charge and provided working funds for both Councils.

In 1919 a Joint Executive was formed to handle all matters affecting both Councils, which lasted until this year.

The new constitution of the Joint Executive of the Students' Administrative Councils goes into effect next year. The reduction of the number of representatives to a minimum will no doubt greatly increase the efficiency of the Executive. During the evolution of the Council it has gradually decreased from a huge unwieldy body of over a hundred members to a small organization of a few representatives.

Stephen Leacock Mourns Mates

Caught in Varsity Editorial Clutches

BY STEPHEN LEACOCK

The occasion of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the Varsity calls back to me vividly my own connection with this great organ of thought and with College Journalism at large. I have always been one of those who have seen in College Journalism one of the best and most inspiring things in college life.

In every good circus the side-shows excel in interest the attractions of the main tent. So it is with college. College journalism, amateur acting, college dances and college sports are more interesting—I say it fearlessly of contradiction—than many of the college lectures. But of these activities, one at least, college journalism, is more useful, if rightly undertaken, than half a dozen lecture courses.

But having said that much of the advantages of being occupied with a college magazine, let me also sound a warning as to its potential dangers. So absorbing a pursuit must not be allowed to dominate the mind in an exclusive fashion. If it does so, serious consequences may ensue.

It is always well to point a moral by introducing actual individual cases as terrible examples. It supplies what is called in the newer language of newspapers and syndicates, the "personal touch". Without this all writing sinks into the class of high-brow moralizing. It was my good fortune to be associated with college newspapers from my school-days up. In my last year at the University of Toronto, I was appointed to be one of the Editors of the literary weekly then called the Varsity. I realized in time the danger involved in such flattering and fascinating work. I had the good sense to resign before the year was half through.

But others, my associates, were not so shrewd. It is no exaggeration to say that college journalism turned aside and warped their careers from what they might have been.

Among my colleagues was a boy called G. Howard Ferguson, a bright, innocent young fellow from Kempenville, Ontario. Up to that time he had kept his mind keen to a razor edge with the study of economics and philosophy. He read easily. I have often seen him sit over Kant's Critique of Pure Reason, to others a difficult book, roaring with laughter.

Unconscious of what we were doing, we gave to Howard Ferguson the position of "manager". It was a fatal mistake. From that time on the boy seemed to change; a restless activity took hold of him; he attended meetings, made speeches, and was heard to speak of German philosophy as "bunk". It was an open secret that Howard Ferguson's name had been mentioned for a lectureship in Comparative Etymology, a position that he might have held till today. But he had grown too restless. After a feverish year or so at law, he sank into the Ontario legislature. The rest everybody knows. But I have always maintained that Howard Ferguson had real ability.

Then there was Charlie Mitchell. In spite of all that has been said about General Mitchell since they made him Head of the School of Applied Science, I can only say that I never knew a straighter, decenter boy than Charlie up to the end of his third year at college, and for a month or so into his fourth. It was then that he became one of the Corresponding Editors of the Varsity. This position seems to have dazzled him. I noticed the change in him for the first time on the day when we all went as Editors to have our picture taken: it was all I could do, with Ferguson's help, to shove Charlie behind us into the back line. Another good student had been lost. I have that picture still on the wall of my study—Howard Ferguson, Charlie Mitchell and the rest. Among them stood "Doc" McLay, the present head of the Arts Faculty of McMaster University; he really could have succeeded. The fellow had a genuine gift. And Judge Stuart, too, on the left of the picture; college journalism literally ruined him; it bred in him a restless wandering that led him into the west, and settled him in Calgary. The moralist might say that it served him right, but the fault lay surely with college journalism. Stuart died a few years ago as a Judge of the Supreme Court of Alberta, a wasted life.

Compensations of course there were. I must not exaggerate the case. It was certainly gratifying to us all as editors to be able to lord it over the other students, to reject their feeble attempts at composition, to tell them just what we thought of them.

There was, I recollect a young freshman named William Lyon Mackenzie King who sent us a poem. The boy's name somehow has stuck in my mind all these years. He sent us in a poem called, Why I Like the Winter or the Futility of Human Greatness. I remember that Doc McLay said it was one of the worst poems we had received that week. We sent it back to King with a smart rebuke as a warning. Perhaps we were wrong. Without our rebuke King might be an established poet today. As it was he abandoned literature. Nor did I ever hear that he had any career beyond a little temporary employment at Ottawa.

There! I have not overlaboured the point of an allegorical talk. What I mean in plain prose is that the Varsity has always gathered round its editorial board all the brightest minds in the college—in fact men like my friends and myself. Floreat.

Punsters of Bygone Years Eyed Petticoats Askance

The first undergraduate journal was introduced to the University of Toronto in 1879 when a number of undergraduates of University College founded a weekly paper, "The White and Blue", under the auspices of the University College Literary and Scientific Society. The first issue of "The White and Blue" was published on Tuesday, October 7, 1879, with W. F. Maclean as editor, "as a medium for the opinions of graduates and undergraduates". The journal was printed in very fine type on four pages measuring about nine by thirteen inches. It would appear that financial support was dependent upon a few regular advertisers and the sale of subscriptions at one dollar per year.

The only volume of "The White and Blue" known to be in existence is now in the possession of the university library. An examination of its pages is illuminating.

For those who think that "puns" are a product of the present generation, we found the following in the issue of February 7, 1880: "They say Vassar girls are never so happy as when allowed to go down to the river and paddle 'round the buoys'."

But the ladies weren't very popular with the students at Toronto in the 80's. Following a controversy re co-education an editorial of March 13, 1880, contains the following: "We warn you men of the lower years that you'll have to bestir yourselves if you wish to preserve your rights. They'll devise all sorts of tricks to decoy men from their books. And they'll all 'crib' in the examination hall. Oh! you fellows may think it would be fun to have them 'round here, but I tell you that you'll regret it. Make it hot for the first petticoat caught in our lecture rooms. etc!'"

In 1880 the University of Toronto had not chosen official colours or a college cheer. Here's the cheer that was suggested by "The White and Blue": "To-ron-to, Whoop, Whang, Hello!"

Wouldn't that one go over big in 1931? Although statistics given in "The White and Blue" indicate that there was an average of four graduates in law each year from 1870 to 1880, an editorial comments thus: "The legal profession is overcrowded. Many a lawyer in the city of Toronto makes little more than an ordinarily well-paid clerk."

During the same ten years two hundred students passed through the faculty of medicine and four hundred through arts.

In 1880 the university authorities were debating whether to put gas in the buildings or wait and see if the electric light would be a success or not.

In answer to a quest by an undergraduate of 1879, "The White and Blue" gave the following as an estimated cost for attending University College per year: board, thirty weeks at four dollars, $120.00; washing $8.00; fees $12.00; books $20.00; extras $5.00. A total of $165.00.

Eye-glasses were not worn by students fifty years ago. But when the third monode appeared on the campus it was in the news items of the week. W. F. Maclean, the editor, was later the founder of "The Toronto World".

"The College Girl" Gave Advice in the Varsity to '97 Co-eds

Back in the dim ages, in the year 1897, "The Varsity" first gave definite recognition to co-education in this university by the establishment of a column called "The College Girl". This department was conducted by a woman elected each year to be responsible for the short weekly column. "Whether we believe in her or not, whether we are glad or sorry we must acknowledge that in our university at least the college girl has come to stay."

In the beginning "The College Girl" was noticeably chatty. The meetings of the Women's Literary Society, the most prominent feminine activity, were the chief news items. When debates waxed warm, "The College Girl" comments, "Warmth of temper is as much out of place on such occasions as warmth of eloquence is desirable." But the enthusiasm with which the women developed new activities such as the Athletic and Dramatic Societies shows clearly as one turns the pages from year to year. "The Greek play is the all engrossing topic of the day," says "The College Girl".

Early Cover

This cover appeared on the fifth issue of "The Varsity" and continued in use for nearly three years. It drew forth many sarcastic references from the contemporaries of "The Varsity" in other colleges on account of the placid self-satisfaction and purity expressed on the countenance of each of the figures represented.

After several years "The College Girl" introduced a series of short editorials. Advice was given annually to the incoming Freshettes and they were urged to join in the feminine life of the university. "Tradition as inexorable as that which decrees that Sophomores must hustle the Freshmen demands that the Women's Literary Society shall welcome the Freshettes into our midst by a social reception."

"The College Girl" attempted to keep in touch with various girls' colleges and took a keen interest in the introduction of new courses such as Physical Culture. The fight for a women's residence is also duly recorded in the pages of "The College Girl". After its establishment the following note appears, "Tea was served in the dining-room and the guests departed after what was felt to be a most enjoyable afternoon."

"We Were More Serious" Asserts Judicial Grad

In the days when "The Varsity" was an "independent stock company" one of its members was Magistrate James Edward Jones, of Toronto. "Yes", he told "The Varsity", "in order to be on the staff I had to purchase stock. I bought mine from Professor Wrong."

Mr. Jones has in his house bound copies of "The Varsity" from June '84 to March '89, besides "The University Book of Prose and Poetry" which was published in 1885. "In our efforts at journalism", he said, "we had in mind the production of something worth while reproducing in just such an anthology." And he mentioned some of the famous men on the staff: Archibald McMechan (now professor of English at Dalhousie), W. H. Blake (the translator of Maria Chapdelaine), W. W. Campbell the poet and W. J. Healy.

"Certainly", he admitted, "we wanted and got men of distinct literary ability on our staff—unlike your present day man of the world."

Not that Mr. Jones is an unbeliever in this generation. "We had our extremes in our day just as you have—drunkards and so on. I think, however, that on the whole we took things more seriously. We were an intent lot, and I was only one of many who worked their way through."

The magistrate hinted that undergraduate problems were much the same then as now. He pointed out that in an edition of Feb. 15, 1893, the Y.M.C.A. announced a lecture on "The Practical Atheism of Professing Christians."—"A modern note. And yet I feel there is more interest taken now in the discussion of religious subjects than in our days."

Women were first admitted to the university in Mr. Jones' freshman year. "Like them? Rather. They were about our own age and very welcome. And one thing we organized better than you do was the dancing. There were no clique dances. Some ten girls would arrive with a chaperone and the boy would be introduced to anyone he wanted to know. There was no one left out and you always had a chance of meeting new people. One thing I do bemoan in this generation is the passing of that sort of enjoyment."

The magistrate, whose hobbies include the study of wild flowers "and of young people," concluded with the statement that in his time "all was more simple and satisfying."

Queen's Hall Has Provided Home For Women Students Since 1905

Since the gay nineties the women of University College have been urging the necessity for adequate residence accommodation. The fact that the residence question is always present is a testimony to the astonishing progress of co-education in the University. Each addition has proved to be only a temporary solution of the problem, which has always been a source of interest in the columns of "The Varsity".

When Queen's Hall was opened in January, 1905, a description appeared in "The Varsity" which must be a revelation to those who live there now. "The bedrooms are all bright, airy, and well-heated. The furniture, though plain, is good and suited to the purpose. The greatest care has been taken to render its drawing-room homelike and attractive. The dining room is handsomely furnished in Flemish oak."

The three-story addition at the back of the residence was completed in the fall of the following year, thus making room for over sixty girls. "The Varsity" expressed delight that the women of University College no longer had to run from boarding-house to boarding-house looking for somewhere to live. The residence question was considered settled and "The Varsity" records that the Women's Residence Association, which had been formed in 1893 to collect funds for women's residence, ceased to exist since it had now achieved its purpose.

However, by 1907, just two years later, the accommodation was inadequate. In "The Varsity" of October there is a report of the reception of freshmen at Queen's Hall. "A most agreeable evening was spent by all and we feel sure that the only cloud in the enjoyment of the guests was the regret that Queen's Hall is not large enough to give to all who wish it the advantages of residence life."

During the next six years, two more houses, numbers 4 and 9 Queen's Park, were added, bringing the accommodation up to one hundred girls. Since then Hutton House and Argyle House have come into existence, but the ever-increasing number of women in the college has made it impossible to provide a home for all of them.

Varsity Staff in Days of "Adversity" Basked in the Glare of Press Publicity Troubles of 1929 student journalists put to shame previous undergraduate difficulties.

By J. C. Bowes

The dismissal of Leonard J. Ryan from the position of Editor-in-Chief of "The Varsity" on February 6th, 1929, drew the darkest storm clouds over undergraduate journalism that its fifty years of history had witnessed.

Other clashes between officialdom and students there had been; the sky has not cleared altogether in the intervening two years; but the forces of organized publicity and student uprising will make the Ryan episode go down in the annals of the past as one that is long to be remembered. A quarter century of comparative calm had dulled the recollection of past furies, and later episodes shade into dullness by comparison with this.

Assuming the editorship in the fall of 1928, an aggressive editorial policy was followed by Mr. Ryan and his associates. With minor hurries, the autumn term passed; however an editorial appearing in "The Varsity" on January 22nd, 1929, entitled, "To Pet or Not to Pet," aroused a storm of controversy in the columns of the undergraduate paper and, as usual, received its full share of publicity in the downtown Press.

The Board of Governors of the University, meeting on February 1st to discuss the question of "The Varsity" carrying on such a discussion, decided that "The Varsity" was not representative of undergraduate opinion, as they interpreted it, but left the whole matter to the discretion of the Students' Administrative Council.

In a succession of editorials following that date, Ryan discarded all reserve and levelled charges against student and full time officials, of lack of co-operation, lobbying and of hindering freedom of expression in the undergraduate daily. Culminating in the final editorial which he was destined to write as Editor of "The Varsity", Ryan discussed, under the heading "Where We Stand," the meagre salaries of the staff and laid explicit charges of lobbying and misrepresentation against officials and members of the Joint Executive of the Students' Administrative Council. A few hours later the blow fell; the Editor was dismissed.

Deprived of an organ in which to express his opinions, Mr. Ryan was not left without a staff of editors, however. In the course of several meetings when the horizon looked blackest, the entire editorial staff expressed their confidence in their editor and their intention to serve under no other. This decision was also taken by the whole junior staff of reporters, so that the dismissal of the editor involved the resignation of the entire staff of "The Varsity".

And then there arose a situation that is without an analogy in the history of Undergraduate journalism in the University of Toronto. When a make-shift staff attempted publication of "The Varsity", the old staff availed themselves of the offer of "The Telegram", and accepted a page in which they carried on the discussion already begun. "The Adversity" was born, Thursday, February 7th, on the same day that a Bulletin appeared on the campus, carrying the announcement of the dismissal of the Editor of "The Varsity". Tucked away on an inside page of the larger journal, "The Adversity" carried on for the students and the world at large the controversy already begun, while glaring front page streamers announced elaborate news accounts of the situation. Never before had Undergraduate affairs been under the spotlight of national publicity to the same extent as in February, 1929.

For one week "The Adversity" appeared, reiterating substantially the statements that had been responsible for the dismissal of Mr. Ryan. Explanations appeared in "The Varsity", which was appearing under a new editor and staff, denials and counter-charges were hurled back and forth. Demanding an investigation into the affairs of student government at the university, "The Adversity" band finally saw the slow machinery of official action begin to move. Allan H. Ferry, himself to become the centre of a later storm in student circles, moved in a Students' Administrative Council meeting that an investigation be carried on into the affairs of student government. A committee was formed, which brought in an elaborate report—but that is another story. Its short span of life probably prevented "The Adversity" from becoming a dominant force in the welding of University thought and opinion. To its influence, however, we may attribute many constitutional changes in the official student governing bodies of the University.

1914 POLICE COMMENDED A STUDENT AUTO DRIVER

To increase the skillfulness of drivers in the city the police of Toronto in January, 1914, offered a prize of $100.00 to the driver who showed the most skill in handling a car on the downtown streets of the city. Many experienced drivers took part in the competition, but the University of Toronto came through when G. S. Gregory, Business Manager of "The Varsity" for the term of 1913-14, took the first prize.

The official of the Police Department who gave out the prizes said to Mr. Gregory: "We have much pleasure in awarding to you the first prize of one hundred dollars."

Varsity War Supplements

In each of the four war years the Students' Administrative Councils published a book that was known as "The Varsity Magazine Supplement," the profits from the sale of which went to the support of military hospitals. The editorial board that published these supplements was headed by Professor T. R. London, and was made up of a number of interested graduates. In addition to Honour Rolls of the dead and wounded, and lists of University men on active service, there were articles by prominent historians, statesmen, financiers and men of letters on the progress of the war, and its repercussions on social and political life, and articles on the participation by University men in such military operations as the defence against the Fenian raids and the suppression of the North-West Rebellion.

ATHLETIC HISTORY DATES BACK TO 1877; CRICKET FIRST SPORT ORGANIZED AND RUGBY FOLLOWED

T. A. Reed reviews organization of athletics under student control, culminating in constitution of 1900.

By T. A. Reed

The history of University Athletics antedates that of the formation of the Athletic Association by many years. As far back as 1877 there was a Cricket Club, and in that same year the Rugby Club came into existence. In 1878 the Association Football Club was formed, in 1885 the Baseball Club, in 1886 the Annual Track Sports were revived and placed on a more permanent basis, in 1890 the Lacrosse Club was started, in 1891 the Hockey Club, in 1894 the Tennis Club and the Fencing Club, and in 1900 the Track and Gymnasium Clubs. In 1881, thanks to the aid and energy of Professor James Loudon (afterwards President of the University (189-1906) a large room was secured in the old Moss Hall, fitted up as a Gymnasium and used until 1888 when the building was demolished to make room for the present Biological Building.

In 1891 a Gymnasium Committee was appointed by the University Literary Society, which secured the co-operation and support of the University authorities. The latter undertook the erection of a Gymnasium building which the students were to equip and control. At a mass meeting of the student body in March, 1892, a committee was appointed to raise the necessary funds for the equipment of the building and to consult with the authorities in regard to plans. This committee did very valuable work in raising considerable money and carrying out the equipment of the building. It was owing to their foresight that the campus was saved for the students, for excavations were made and the foundations of the Gymnasium actually laid in the centre of it, and only removed by the efforts of the committee and at their expense. The following members of the committee deserve special mention for their activity at this critical time: Dr. J. D. Webster, J. C. Breckenridge, Dr. W. B. Hendry, Dr. W. P. Thompson, Ed Gillis, J. G. Merrick, Lorne Macdougall and Professor A. T. DeLury.

In December, 1892, at a mass meeting of the students it was decided to organize an Athletic Association to control the Gymnasium then nearly completed. The first Directorate, with Dr. J. D. Webster as President and Mr. J. C. Breckenridge, Secretary-Treasurer, took office in October, 1893. At that time there were only two faculties in the University, Arts and Medicine, the School of Practical Science being a separate institution. The Directorate was made up of eighteen representatives, ten from Arts, viz, four from the Fourth Year, three from the Third, two from the Second and one from the First, and four representatives from each of the four years in Medicine and S.P.S. A House Committee to govern the Gymnasium was formed, each member undertaking to be there one or two hours per week.

By 1895 the Directorate was increased by a representative from the Faculty, two representatives from Victoria and seven representatives from the University Athletic Club. It was found that the Association could not be self supporting and that the system of student control was impossible. (Continued on Page 13)

Disastrous Year Closes With Eleven Titles Lost

By T. A. Fleming

The close of the season 1930-31 marks the passing of the most disastrous year in sport which University of Toronto teams have ever experienced. Out of fourteen intercollegiate senior titles, athletes from Old McGill walked off with no less than ten to set a new record. No university has captured more than eight previously and the men under the direction of the astute Major Forbes have set a mark which is likely to stand for some time.

Out of the wreckage left by the McGill onslaught, Varsity managed to capture the titles in the rowing, harrier, and the Boxing, Wrestling and Fencing, while Queen's annexed their lone championship on the gridiron. The list of the Red and White victories reads like a summary of intercollegiate sport and includes track and field, tennis, golf, soccer, basketball, hockey, gymnastics, English rugby, and water polo.

Varsity started out well in the fall when the rowing crew won a thrilling race from the McGillmen on the Montreal course, and advance notices from the senior football team gave high hopes of the first title since 1926. Under the able direction of the canny "Les" Blackwell, the gridiron squad proceeded to live up to its promises and won its first three games in convincing style, defeating McGill 11 to 1 and Western 3 to 2 at the Stadium, and then battered Queen's into sub-

Rugby football will be 56 years old at Varsity this autumn, for it was on November 20th, 1875, that the first match was played by a Varsity team. The opponents were the Argonaut team with whose representatives so many games have been played in the past. What particular style of football was played it is difficult to determine, but it is stated that the posts were about 200 yards apart and that the first game lasted a little more than half an hour.

The team was: H. E. Morphy, captain; Bryce, Gunn, W. Aikens, Spotton, Aylesworth, Mackenzie, McGill, McLaren, Bull, Bowes, Ross, Gunn, A. Clements, Dobbs, Sutherland, Balantyne, Fletcher, Harstone and Campbell-Tibbs.

According to the early issues of "The Varsity" this game was called "the old university game". There was no limit to the number of players who participated. It was not permitted to carry the ball but it could be bounced along or passed in any direction. Hacking, tripping, charging from behind, were all allowed and doubtless made it more interesting for the players.

Apparently there was no settled code of rules and that would seem to account for the lack of any record of matches with other teams.

In 1879 the university rugby club sent a team of clever players to Detroit to meet the University of Michigan team and they did not know exactly what kind of a game they were going to play, but were prepared for emergencies. On the first scrimmage

Varsity lined up in their usual way with a regular "scrum", while Michigan had their forwards in a single line and snapped the ball out to the backs. It was a surprise, but it was met with similar tactics and so well was it met that the match resulted in a draw, neither team scoring. The following year a return game was played in Toronto using American style of play and Michigan won by one goal and one try to nothing. This was the first intercollegiate rugby game played in Toronto and also the first occasion when the snap-back was used.

English rugby has been introduced to the United States colleges mainly through the McGill-Harvard games of 1877 and 1878. Harvard did not like the close-locked "scrum" and developed what was known then as the "open" formation. This called for only eleven players and the ball was put into play by snapping it back with the hand or foot. By 1880 this type of play had become general in the States.

During this time the English rules were being brought into a more stable condition. The players were reduced from 20 to 15. Then in 1878 the greatest change was made, one that revolutionized the game. This was the rule by which a player when tackled and the ball held, was obliged to immediately place it upon the ground. It was practically this code of rules that was adopted by the Canadian Rugby Union upon its formation in 1880.

The teams consisted of 15 players with one or two full backs, two halves and two quarters with the rest of the team forming the "scrum". From the records of the matches it would appear that this formation was maintained for several years. Then a (Continued on Page 11)

In Dusty Records Scribes Do Peer To Find the Greats of Yesteryear

Four copy-hunting young writers, thumbing with all the pleasure of new discovery every issue of "The Varsity" in fifty years, while before our eyes half a century of University life is unveiled . . . the days of peg-top trousers and hoop skirts . . . the days of bitter struggles . . . when Varsity had one single rugby team . . . and won championships. . .

The days when board was $2.00 a week . . . including meals . . . and students went to church three times on Sunday . . . when Eddy Beatty was a promising quarterback . . . and cigars were three for a dime . . . then were the good old days!

Especially in the realm of sport are there items in these old papers which have for us a devastating pungency; like this one in 1900 (referring to a tennis tournament): "Mrs. Burgess and Miss Taylor excited much favorable comment by the excellent form which they displayed."

And how is this for an advance on lacrosse (1881): "Spring, gentle spring, with its flowers and all-pervading mud, is approaching, and this being the case, perhaps a few words on the subject of lacrosse may not be considered unseasonable." Shades of Lou Marsh and modern sport writing!

This was a soccer game before the reporter got through with it: "During the second half the ball seemed to travel promiscuously over the field . . . Robertson dribbled the ball in close proximity to the goal."

Speaking of Eddy Beatty (he has something or other to do with the C.P.R.), everybody knows that he played rugby here, but listen to this from "The Varsity" of 1897: "Eddy Beatty as captain and quarterback, placed his position to perfection against Petrolia." And elsewhere it speaks of the juniors of that year: "Eddy Beatty's boys were too good for their opponents." Riding on the trains of 1897 probably convinced him that the railway needed improving.

"Biddy" Barr a College Hero
A. F. "Biddy" Barr, whose article appears elsewhere in this issue, seems to have been as highly regarded as any athlete of his day, and indeed he was one of the great wing men of his time. The story is told that in 1894 he led a great fight against the Queen's team in Kingston, playing himself into utter exhaustion, and was finally dragged off the field. His injuries were such that he was forced to stay over in Kingston, but on his return on Monday he was met by a madly cheering mob of students, who unhitched a horse from a nearby cab and with their idol firmly esconced on the top, they pulled it all the way to the University.

Another time he undertook to show a squad how to crash through the line, but the team lined up the biggest fellows they could find. "Biddy" charged through, and came out the other side—with a broken shoulder. The demonstration was a success. . .

He has always been canny; in the picture of the team of '93 he is wearing shin pads, which must have been a good idea, because an early "Varsity" tells us that: "The game was featured by charging from behind, hacking, and tripping." Speaking of Gils McKelvey. . .

We were amused to see the McMaster-University College debate put under "Sport"; also in 1900 was recorded the "Intercollegiate chess match". There is no mention of ping-pong or even bridge.

Toronto Takes Pride in Hart House and Canada's Finest Stadium, Arena

Since the erection of the University Gymnasium in 1891, the Athletic Association and its leaders have supplied the University of Toronto with the finest athletic equipment in the country. Organized to control Varsity's athletics, this association has done more than its share in overcoming almost insurmountable obstacles to give Varsity the finest football stadium in Canada, the best university hockey arena and Hart House, the pride of the campus, the sight-seers' Mecca, and the despair of co-eds who behold it with envy from without.

In order to maintain student government in athletics the present Athletic Association was organized in 1892 and has continued in this capacity till now. In 1907 the small grand stand on the present stadium site could only hold three hundred people of the crowd that Harry Griffith's Blues were attracting to every game. As a result the stand was moved to Rosedale to meet the situation. Through the influence of Dr. D. B. Macdonald, the

Graduating Stars Leave Holes For Incoming Freshmen to Plug

By De C. H. Royner

After the experience of the past year in sport at the University of Toronto even the most wise of the sporting fraternity would hesitate to call the Blue and White's chances for achievement in any line of endeavour in the year to come. The year started in September last most optimistically; it ends as one of the worst years in this university has seen in its history, as far as intercollegiate sport is concerned. It is true that the B. W. & F. team bearing the Blue and White colours pulled a surprise by carrying off the intercollegiate honours in the face of great odds this year. It is also true that even the most optimistic of our supporters hardly hoped that the championship would come this way. To prophesy then is futile, to name the prospects that the various intercollegiate clubs of the U. of T. entertain for championships next year is another matter entirely. Even that must be done with a certain amount of hesitation, remembering that the incoming horde of freshmen may bring to fight either good or bad material, and the forthcoming examinations may remove some of the stalwarts from our midst.

From the intercollegiate rugby football team seven players have laid aside the Blue and White uniforms for good. Billy Bell is the outstanding loss in that respect, his beautiful broken-field running and his reliable performance of the seasons gone by will be but a memory. Charlie Ruddell, George Gooderham and Bill Adams will leave places that will be hard for the coach to fill next fall, and Jack White, Earl Davey and Solandt will have graduated as well. Only three of last season's O.R.F.U. senior team leave these walls of learning, Scott, Monkhouse and McCullough, but as usual that team will suffer from promotion of the more likely players. The entire junior team will be intact, and chances are that they will move up as a unit to the intermediate group or enter in the O.R.F.U. junior series. The heavy loss will be felt by the intercollegiate seniors, although veterans such as Jimmie Sinclair, Traynor, Johnny Keith, Gallows and Johnny Sinclair (if the latter decides to play again) will form the nucleus for a new team which may prove to be of high calibre, and which certainly will give any team that the other three universities have to offer some real battles for the title. Just to digress from our own prospects to point a prophetic hand—watch Western and Joe Breen!

A man that has received little credit for his short but efficient term in the net for the Varsity senior hockey team graduates from Pharmacy this spring, in the person of "Doc" Ames. Mel Harley and Billy Bell will be missed from the forward line, but Bill Stewart will be continuing his studies at O.C.E., so that he will be available next winter. Les Conn, Chite and Kress leave the senior "B" group winners. But with any number of recruits out for hockey every season, the places of these men should not be hard to fill. In fact some of the fast skating juniors may revive some of the old-time hockey spirit in senior ranks and perhaps bring the intercollegiate trophy back to these once-familiar walls.

The senior basketball team will lose three of its valued players when Ben Sailer, George O'Leary and Gordie Cook join the line of diploma-seekers. P. Sullivan and A. Pastermak of the Varsity intermediate cage team are among the graduates in that sport. Coach McCutcheon has been flooded each fall by the increasing number of aspirants for each of the (Continued on Page 10)

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By A. C. Cochrane, Sports Editor

In the preparation of this jubilee issue of "The Varsity" we have experienced the joys of learning of that rich heritage which is the prized possession of every member of this great university. It has indeed been good to read of the athletic achievements of those who have gone before and have prepared the way for the tremendous field of sport that we know to-day. We trust that the readers of these columns will likewise experience the same joys and at the same time have instilled into them a finer appreciation of the Blue and White . . . a stronger affection for the U. of T.

Every editor is faced with the problem of "lack of space". We have been no exception to this rule. But in the case of this particular issue it has been a cause of much regret that we couldn't give adequate space to the many articles that cry out for a place in this anniversary issue. On many occasions throughout the past year it has been found necessary to add an additional page to "The Varsity" in order that a liberal account of sporting events might appear. But now we have been confronted with the Herculean task of "covering" a half century of sport in a few slim pages. You witness the result.

As outlined in the first issue of this paper at the beginning of last Fall our policy was to give accurate and unbiased accounts of events in which Varsity teams were participating and to offer constructive criticism. This has been done. Our stand on the coaching situation at Varsity needs no reiteration at this time. As yet no word has been received from the Athletic Directorate regarding this matter. Doubtless some announcement will be made within the next few weeks. We trust that they will take thought first for our university, and that in the near future the glory of the Blue and White on the gridiron, as recorded in the pages of this issue, will return.

We are especially grateful to Mr. A. F. Barr and Mr. T. A. Reed for the articles that appear in this issue. They have been a ready source of help in its preparation. Mr. Reed has ever been eager to co-operate with "The Varsity". I personally wish to express my appreciation of the fine work of Tory Fleming and DeCourcy Rayner, and Miss Willie Ann Luckett. Miss Luckett established the praiseworthy record of writing The Sports-woman for every issue of the paper for the past year. And to the whole Sports staff I desire to express my thanks for the co-operation they have rendered and the excellent copy they have produced. Mr. A. Gordon Buras, as secretary of the S.A.C., has co-operated with the Sports staff to the fullest extent on every occasion and it has been a pleasure to work with him in the publication of "The Varsity".

Co-eds Chase Puck As War Threatens

(Taken from "The Varsity" of Wednesday, February 11, 1914)

On Tuesday afternoon the North House Fussers played a brilliant game against the U.C. girls' hockey team. The game started briskly with a spectacular rush by Miss Ziegler which "Fritz" cleverly missed. The Fussers seemed at a great disadvantage being only allowed to use one hand.

Miss Cameron and Miss Ferguson were a strong combination and bored through the North House defence in great style. The latter managed to tie the score at 3-all once, but the Venuses soon broke away for two more tallies, the final score being 5 to 3. Miss Marie Parkes was the star of the game for U.C. The Northmen would have done better only they were too busy decorating the penalty box.

change began to develop along the line of the Harvard "open" formation. It was found that by taking one of the forwards out of the scrum and playing him as a wing that more protection was given to the halves and that the attack was made faster.

The first record of wings in a Varsity game was that with Ottawa College in 1887 when the teams lined up with a back, two halves, two quarters, two wings and eight forwards. Within two years the number of wings had doubled and the line-up became one back, three halves, one quarter, four wings and six forwards.

The following year the Queen's team eliminated the old-time scrum and used only three men to form the scrum and played seven as wings.

In January, 1891, the Ontario Rugby Union made a number of changes in the rules and reached agreement upon the interpretation of other rules. It had been the custom following the practice in lacrosse to have a field captain, practically a coach, who came right out on the field and gave orders to the players. This custom was abolished and the playing captains were kept in full charge. The goal posts had only been 13 feet high and there were raised to the present height of 20 feet. The old system of deciding a game was by goals and tries and now was introduced the scoring by points. The try was set at 4 points, goal from try, 2 points, goal from a drop kick 5 points, from a flying or free kick 4 points, safety-touch 2, rouge 1.

Graham First Man To Get Third Term

For the first time in the history of the university a member was elected to the third successive term on the Athletic Directorate of the U. of T. at the election of the undergraduate members in Hart House last Friday, when Dr. J. W. Graham was re-elected. "Wally" Graham, who is a graduate of the faculty of Dentistry, and at present is taking a medical course, is well known for his work on the intercollegiate track and harrier team. D. H. Traynor was re-elected, and M. A. Wilton, H. A. Williams and Jr. R. Fitzpatrick were given places on the Directorate. Sixteen men stood for office, among them John Sinclair and Johnnie Keith of last year's Directorate, and of them the five mentioned above were made the electoral representatives of the undergraduate body.

O.R.F.U. since that organization was formed in 1883 and it was under this style of game that the team of 1895 brought home the first championship and went on to win the Dominion honours.

Even then the rules were not satisfactory and all kinds of suggestions were made, but the first complete step towards a solution was that of the late "Thrill" Burnside, who compiled a set of rules based on the American game. The main changes were a reduction of players and the use of the snap-back and the elimination of the holding on the wing line. These rules were given a good test by the O.R.F.U. during the four seasons from 1902 to 1905 and in the Mulock Cup series at Varsity, but the change was too pronounced and while the rules were not generally adopted they played a very great part in leading to the later alterations.

It is well to recall too that prior to the introduction of the 10 yard rule, which was first suggested in the Burnside rules, that the team in possession of the ball were not obliged to make any distance whatever. Games then were played in two three-quarter hour periods and if a wind was blowing the success of a team was dependent to a great extent, on its ability to keep possession of the ball. Consequently there would be long periods of successive scrummages without any progress even being attempted.

Meanwhile, the Intercollegiate Union had been formed in 1898 and Varsity gathered in another championship, but lost out in the Dominion finals. This Union attempted to solve the difficulties and adopted the 10 yard rule which had been a feature of the Burnside game and which helped materially to open up the play. The situation in 1905 was that the Quebec Union had the old game, the Intercollegiate the game with the 10 yd. rule, and the O.R.F.U. the snap back.

The outcome was that early in 1906 the Canadian Rugby Union adopted a uniform set of rules containing the 10 yard rule, the elimination of the throw-in from touch and a rule that during a scrimmage the opposing players must not come into contact with one another, but must stand clear of the ball. These major changes came again became more popular with the players and spectators. The further changes in the course of years were the introduction of legalized interference and finally the latest change, that of the forward pass.

The 1909 team brought the next Dominion championship and again it was from Ottawa on the Rosedale field. Jack Newton was captain and his team gave a very brilliant exhibition of running plays which completely fooled the Ottawa team. The score was 31 to 7 and Varsity was leading all through the game, having scored in the first few minutes. The following year Hugh Gall led his team down to Hamilton and after a most thrilling encounter came back with a victory of 16 to 7.

1911 marked another Dominion win. This time Jack Maynard was captain and his team trimmed the Argonauts to the tune of 14 to 7. It was during this period of victories that the coaching was done by H. C. Griffiths, and the play was marked by fast snappy team play and extremely successful extension runs around the end.

Joe Breen's team in 1920 had a hard battle with McGill for the Intercollegiate championship, winning out in a playoff at Kingston—a terrific battle which opened badly for Varsity, but the coolness of the halves won the victory.

Women's Sport Intramural Till 1921

Low Scoring Games in Early Days

By W. A. Luckett

That there was no women's intercollegiate sport at the University of Toronto until within the last ten years, is a most surprising thing in view of the fact that interfaculty athletics had reached such a high point of organization for many years before. Basketball, hockey and tennis had all been played long before any thought was given to intercollegiate leagues. Since the formation of such leagues, Varsity has won a large number of championships, the record being held by the basketball teams, who have won the trophy eight times in eleven years of competition.

Although basketball is one of the major sports among the women at the university now, it did not make its appearance until 1909 when the first record of an actual game appeared in the issue of February 5 of that year, between St. Hilda's and University. There was a great deal of confusion caused by the lack of standardized rules, and since the game was played under rules familiar to the Saints only, they had no trouble defeating University by a large score. Before this time there was an occasional reference to basketball, the first coming in 1895 when a letter from a Varsity graduate suggested playing in the "quadrangle". A little later, in 1897, an article appeared telling of the organization of basketball in the Normal School at Hamilton, where it was extremely popular. In 1902 a reference to proposed year games was made but no record of any actual results was forthcoming. In 1907 it was decided to play the game under men's rules, and two teams were chosen.

A feature of these early games was the lack of scoring. The first of these two teams lost to Evangelica, a city team by 8 to 7, while the second won a match by 4 to 3. In 1910, a league was formed between St. Hilda's, Victoria and University, which lasted in its original form until the present day, with the gradual admission of other teams, until in the interfaculty series, as played last fall, eleven teams competed. It was decided to play under girls' rules, and St. Hilda's won the first game 22 to 5. From 1911 on the games were played under an organized schedule, with St. Hilda's displaying a remarkable facility for winning for years in succession.

Not until 1921 was any intercollegiate sport made an actual fact, although in 1909 an effort had been made by Varsity to arrange a tennis tournament with Queen's, which proved unsuccessful. However, in 1921, letters were received from McGill and Queen's asking for some organized intercollegiate competition. The matter was laid before the President of the University, who advised the formation of a Women's Athletic Directorate, on the same lines as that of the men, to have graduate and undergraduate members.

This new body held its first meeting on November 6, 1921, and a constitution was proposed and adopted. Ratification by the Caput was necessary before any games with McGill and Queen's could be arranged. The constitution was passed by the Caput in time for the first intercollegiate basketball tournament to be held in 1921, at Kingston, with Queen's, McGill and Varsity all sending a team. Varsity won the first tournament in two very close games, beating McGill 32 to 28 and Queen's 29 to 24. In the next year the tourney was held at Toronto, and Varsity again proved their superiority. Up to the present time, Varsity has won the Bronze Baby, emblematic of the intercollegiate championship, eight times, losing it twice to McGill and once to Western, who were admitted to the league in 1928.

Hockey, also one of the major sports at Toronto now, was one of the earliest sports taken up by the women. On Jan. 20, 1901, "a small but enthusiastic" number of Varsity girls met to form a hockey league, and from that time on there was organized competition, between St. Hilda's, Victoria and University. Here again, as in basketball, the Saints proved their superiority in a surprisingly large number of years, on several occasions winning the cup three times in succession, thus necessitating a new cup every few years.

In 1921 the women's section of the T.H.L. was formed, composed of three city teams and an editorial appeared in "The Varsity" urging the university women to apply for admission to this league. In the same year, the first intercollegiate tournament was played with McGill, the necessary funds for the trip to Montreal being raised by canvassing the students. Varsity won the championship for the first two years, and in 1924 McGill withdrew from the hockey league, and they have not yet been readmitted. Queen's then entered competition for the Beattie Ramsay cup, and the league has continued in this form to the present. The Beattie Ramsay cup was donated by the undergraduates of the School of Practical Science, and was named in honour of a School man who had greatly distinguished himself on the Varsity hockey team, Allan Cup champions in 1921.

The very earliest sport indulged in by the women was fencing, and in 1895 a class was formed composed of 60 members, who practiced daily in East Hall. Fencing enjoyed great popularity for a number of years, but interest gradually waned with the advent of basketball and hockey. Another form of sport which aroused a large amount of competition, was the Paperchase, and regular schedules were held, to the winner of which a cup was presented. The last of these was held in 1913. Swimming was another sport which was very popular, the earliest records being made in 1909, when an exhibition meet was held with the University Guild. In 1910 a swimming club was organized

By W. A. L.

For the third year in succession the Varsity women's intercollegiate basketball team brought back the Bronze Baby from the tournament in Kingston. The team deserves great credit for their showing this year, and in the championship game against Western gave one of the finest exhibitions of basketball seen for some time.

The first game was against Queen's and the Blue and White had no trouble eliminating the Kingstonians. In the first half Varsity had some hard luck on their shots, but in the second they struck their stride and by some smart combination work made sure of the game.

Since McGill had been defeated by Western in the afternoon of the same day by a score of 36 to 18, the game for the title was between the Westerners and Varsity. The first half of this game was very close, and only some remarkably accurate foul shooting enabled Varsity to lead at half-time by a one-point margin, 12 to 11.

After the interval, however, Varsity's defensive system functioned almost perfectly, and Western were not able to get near the basket, while the Blue and White forward line combined beautifully to run up a substantial lead for Varsity. The score at the end of the game was 30 to 16 and Varsity had a distinct edge in the second half.

The Varsity team played the whole of the game with Western without substitutes and the work of Loretto McGarry at jumping centre, and Eleanor Sedgewick at side-centre, was the outstanding feature of the whole game. The whole team, however, turned in a remarkable exhibition of offensive and defensive basketball.

The hockey team was unfortunate this year in losing several games by a very close margin, and tying three others, when a victory would have meant the title. They have a smooth well-rounded offensive, which frequently carried them within the opposing defence, but they lacked scoring with competitions scheduled between the usual three colleges, St. Hilda's, Victoria and University. Swimming gradually increased in popularity, although the meet was generally an open one, with no college teams, individual competition being allowed.

1916 was the first year that "T's" were given for competition in the meets. Organization has gone ahead very fast in interfaculty, until at present there are usually five or six colleges and faculties represented. Nothing has as yet been done towards intercollegiate competition. There was a golf tournament held by women of University College in 1926, and in 1928 suggestions were made for co-ed football.

Tennis is another sport which has

The interfaculty swimming meet held on the 4th of March was one of the most successful and closely contested meets in years. The team championship was won by University College, who had a one-point lead over St. Hilda's, the score being 40 to 39.

Betty Edwards of U.C. won the individual championship and her work was a large factor in the success of the Red and White. In the diving, St. Hilda's took practically all of the points, with Nan Orde placing first, Naomi Slater second and Moyna Martin of St. Hilda's tying with Barbara Crowe of U.C. for third place. St. Hilda's also came first in the relay race.

In the newly formed badminton league, St. Hilda's won both the senior and junior doubles titles. All of the games were very closely contested and enthusiasm over this new interfaculty sport is running high. Application has been made to the Athletic Directorate for official recognition, and that body has decided to reserve its decision till the end of the season next year, so that it may be determined whether or not girls at the university want this sport continued as a regular interfaculty sport.

Besides the intercollegiate championship, the seniors took the city basketball title, as a result of a game with Margaret Eaton played just before the trip to Kingston. In the regular schedule, these teams defeated the other once, but in the playoff game Varsity was decidedly superior.

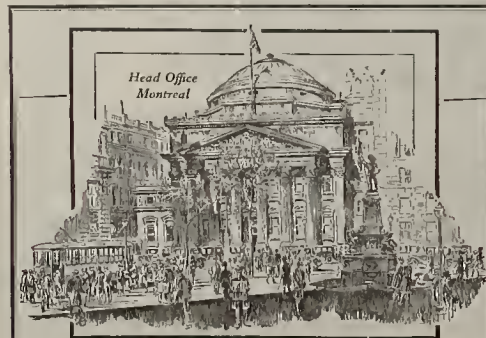

The intercollegiate hockey team lost the city title as a result of a 1 to 0 defeat suffered at the hands of the Silverwoods last Tuesday night. The game was very closely contested and overtime was necessitated before a decision was reached. In a game the week before Varsity defeated Aura Lee also 1 to 0, but the reverse with Silverwoods put them out of the running for the city championship.

The elections for the Women's Athletic Directorate, held on Monday afternoon resulted as follows: Jean Allen, III U.C.; Sally Ballard, III St. Hilda's; Frances Crooks, III St. Hilda's; Helen Gillies, III U.C.; Willie Ann Luckett, III St. Michael's.

will be eliminated in the very near future.

The Women's Athletic Association came into being in 1901, when the representatives from the three sports then played at college, tennis, fencing and hockey, met to draw up a constitution. For twenty years this Association had control of all the sport, but in the last few years the work has been divided up into several different clubs, one for each sport.

In 1909 it was decided that Varsity girls would be awarded "T's" on somewhat the same basis as those of the men. They were to be given only to members of winning interfaculty teams. This ruling was later amended to include intercollegiate activities. Shields also were to be presented.

SANDY SOMERVILLE, of golf fame played in 1921. HARRY HOBBS learned the game at Varsity.

Of the 1926 collection of gridders we have DON CARRICK who was also an outstanding boxer and golfer; HARRY BALES, last year's mentor of the intercollegiate junior champions; MURRAY SNYDER who besides being a smart football player earned himself a big reputation as a goal-keeper. Now he is in Kitchener and played against his former teammates during the past O.H.A. season; LOU CARROLL who handles the Orphans; DR. GEORGE "BUD" MORGAN who last year coached the University of Alberta. He was captain in 1929 and JACK SINCLAIR, the star of last year's squad. In the first three games last fall Jack scored all of his team's points. He is easily one of the best punters in the game today.

KEN LASH, a lawyer in Toronto, a star goalie at Varsity away back in 1902 and 1903 when senior O.H.A. was in its infancy.

W. W. DAVIDSON, now a lawyer in the city, played on the championship teams of '07 and '08.

R. W. EVANS was one of the star forwards of the same years. He is now practising law in Hamilton.

B. M. FRITH played in 1911 and captained the team in 1913. He was also a football player of no mean ability.

IVAN MOSLOW, now a manufacturer in St. Catharines, captained the hockey team in 1911.

"RAT" HANLEY was a star defenceman on the intercollegiate champions of 1913. To-day he is a doctor in the city.

ERNIE JUPP, captained the intercollegiate title holders of 1915.

BEATTIE RAMSAY was captain of the Allan cup champs of 1921. Probably the most effective defenceman in the game at that time. He had only one penalty called on him during all his years in amateur hockey. He turned pro for one year.

STAN BROWN paired up with Ramsay on the same team was the fastest skater on the ice. To-day he makes his living pulling teeth, and still finds time to play hockey in the pro league.

BILL CARSON, a doctor, was one of the most outstanding centre-ice in all time.

J. LANGTRY was the star goalie of the Allan cup squad of 1921. He is a dentist in Fort William.

DR. ED. GALLIE, of Toronto, coached the 1908 team which was considered the greatest amateur team of that time. His coaching extended from 1907 to 1912, during which time he had three intercollegiate titles to his credit.

JOHNNY KEITH, captain of the 1930 football team, played snap and was a fine tackler.

JACK SINCLAIR, for the past few years the finest place kicker in Canadian football. Accounted for all of team's points in the first three intercollegiate fixtures.

BILLIE BELL, the diminutive quarterback, whose faultless catching made him the hero of more than one game. He also played senior hockey and is an exceptionally fine boxer.

BILL STEWART, flashy centre-ice player for the past three years. He is a wizard at stick-handling.

BRUCE PAUL, considered by Connie Smythe of the Maple Leafs as the best defenceman in the O.H.A., started with O.H.A. champions of 1929-30. Last year he lined up with the Nationals. It is rumoured that he will turn pro next year with the Toronto Maple Leafs.

"DOC" AMES, goal-keeper for Varsity seniors for the last two years. In our opinion he is the equal of the famous "Stuffy" Mueller, generally recognized as the peer of net-minders.

EDDIE SINCLAIR, the best all-round athlete at Varsity now. Played rugby, waterpolo, was a member of the swimming and wrestling and track teams.

GEORGE O'LEARY who has played basketball with Varsity for the past three years and captained the team once.

DR. "MO" MITCHELL, a star basketball player with intercollegiate champions of 1927-8. "MO" was a track star and held any number of "T's".

TOM MURRAY, the best guard who ever played at Varsity. He is now physical instructor at one of Windsor's largest high schools.

A. M. GARRET, goalie, became Sports Editor of The World.

FRAN LORENZEN played on the waterpolo team of 1926-27 and he coached the '27 to '28 septet. He is now an accountant in Windsor.

IRVING LORENZEN, a brother, also played on the same team.

LEO LATCHFORD was a star of the 1926-7 and 8 waterpolo squads. He also has coached the Varsity teams for the past two years. He is now a student at Osgoode Hall.

BOB ARMSTRONG, one of the best centre players in Varsity. He has played on the polo team for the past three years. He graduates from Commerce and Finance this year.

JOHNNY GOSS holds the intercollegiate swimming record for the 50 yards free style. He played waterpolo and was famous for his back-hand shot.

HERB CLARKE was captain of Varsity's first intercollegiate hockey champions in 1907 and considered one of the best players that Varsity ever had.

CONNIE SMYTHE at present looking after the Maple Leafs was the coach of the famous Varsity grads as well as many other Varsity sextets.

DR. LOU HUDSON starred on Varsity teams for four years and was right wing for the Olympic champs of 1928.

DAVE TROTTER is now playing with the Montreal Maroons, and HUGH PLANTON who last year coached Marlboro seniors were the scintillating forwards of the world's champions. Plaxton was also a star football player while at Varsity.

ALAN SULLIVAN, novelist, whose writings have appeared in McLean's Magazine, played football with Varsity in 1885.

W. P. MUSTARD was a full-back in the early '80's and is now a Latin professor in John Hopkins University. J. STRACHAN JOHNSTON, a lawyer in this city, was a member of the same team.

DR. PORTER, of Hart House, played goal on the champion soccer team of 1890.

A. GOLDIE, of Galt, was on the same team. He is a manufacturer. "CASEY" WOOD, a star forward in soccer, is a lawyer in Toronto.

OF COURSE YOU WILL WEAR the official VARSITY BLAZER

The attractive appearance of the Varsity Blazer has popularized it with all Faculties. Particularly desirable for wear during early Spring and Summer.

This is the only official Varsity Blazer approved by the S.A.C. Orders to purchase are issued at the office of the S.A.C., Hart House, or Room 82, U.C.

sible. In consequence a very good financial and working arrangement was made with the University authorities by which they became responsible for the control of the Gymnasium. In this connection special mention should be made of the work of Dr. D. Bruce Macdonald (then President of the Athletic Association and now Vice-Chairman of the Board of Governors of the University), and Mr. J. G. Merrick, Secretary at that time.

By 1900, owing to the growth of the Athletic Clubs, the new conditions arising out of their use of the new athletic field and the confusion in their financial administration, it was felt that a change in the organization should be made. It was found, too, that such a large body was unwieldy, and that only a few of the elected members attended the meetings. In the Spring of that year a Constitution was drawn up by Mr. T. A. Russell, then the Secretary of the Athletic Association and now Chairman of the Finance Committee of the University, which brought the various Clubs under the direct control of the Association and which recognized the University Authorities and the graduates by giving them a direct share in its government. This Constitution was ratified by the University authorities and became effective in the fall of 1900.

SOCCER WAS THE RAGE IN THE GAY NINETIES

Unbeatable teams of past recalled; and great names of footer history.

"Way back in the 80's and 90's association football, better known these days as soccer, was the rage around the university and occupied the leading position in sport now held by rugby football. Many of the stars of the old days are now leaders in the business and professional life in Canada and can recall the stirring battles of the days when the footer game was at the height of its popularity. They favoured a more strenuous style then and the rules differed somewhat from those of to-day. Twelve men made up a team with five forwards, three halves and three defencemen who played strung out one behind the other in front of the goal keeper.

Perhaps the most famous of these old time teams was that of 1883. The line-up contained the names of such notables as J. Breckenridge, Franklin McLeay, A. M. Garret and W. P. Thompson. This squad was almost unbeatable and captured more than one championship. Three of its members were chosen by the Association Football League to play on the team that invaded Europe in the fall of 1889, winning nine and tying seven out of twenty-five games played against the crack teams across the pond.

Gradually the rules were changed until it became the game as we know it to-day, but the sport declined in prominence coincident with the rise of rugby football. However, it still retains a position of prominence on the campus, being one of the most keenly contested interfaculty sports, while the Varsity team engages in intercollegiate matches with McGill and R.M.C. annually.

Angus MacMurchy Said

On December 10, 1902, Angus MacMurchy then Solicitor at Toronto for the C.P.R., wrote a long article for the Varsity entitled "University Graduates in Railway Work." Therein he observes, "Education does not impart brains or bestow common sense."

A Pascoe Year...

TODAY men want real value for their money, whether they are buying a house or a handkerchief.

We believe this is one year when a name that represents value is worth more than a label that spells price.

Pascoes Proven Policy of selling clothes away from ground floor overhead, of buying and selling on a strictly cash basis, has exploded the idea that you can get more value if you pay more money.

This year we are going after more business by giving more value, and we know these new Spring suits will prove the test of our claim.

INTERFACULTY SPORT ENOS A MOST SUCCESSFUL YEAR

Irish win rugby, hockey cups while School and U.C. divide track titles.

This past year of sport may lack intercollegiate titles, but when the basketball and baseball championships are decided this week the university will see the completion of one of the most successful years in the history of interfaculty sport.

St. Michael's College won their first interfaculty rugby championship last fall by defeating Junior School in a torrid two-game series. This rugby feud was recalled last week when the Irish again overcame the engineers to capture their second successive hockey title.

Those favouring the footer game saw Knox College retain the soccer title, which they have held for three years, by defeating University College in the final.

For the fourth consecutive year S.P.S. took the outdoor track championship. U.C. turned the tables in the indoor series by gaining an early lead which the School athletes could not overcome.

O.A.C. added to their string of ten harrier championships. However, "the Aggies" were forced to accept their first defeat since 1925 in the Senior Assault-at-arms when they were nosed out by S.P.S. by one point.

Another upset occurred in the rowing series when the U.C. boatmen conquered School and ended a string of victories for the engineers dating from 1920. S.P.S. increased their string of championships by making it four in a row in the gymnasium meet.

By defeating Junior U.C. in the water polo final Meds gained their only interfaculty championship. The team swimming went to U.C. for the eighth time in the past ten years. Eddie Sinclair gave Dents their one title by winning the Durnan Cup.

The interfaculty tennis tournament provided some fine battles and after a hard fight Balfour (Vic) won the university championship by taking three straight sets from Noyes (U.C.) in the final.

Lawyer is Rugby Authority

One of the well-informed survivors of the days of '84 is Edward Bayly, K.C., who was captain of the seconds in '84, and played for the firsts in '85 and '86 under the captaincy of J. S. McLean, now an editorial writer on the Mail and Empire. Mr. Bayly, who is now deputy attorney-general, later refereed over sixty championship games, most of them for nothing. And now they want $35 to referee a single game! He weighed about 138 pounds in those days; now he carries about 175... but then he has a heavy job and has to hand down a lot of weighty decisions.

He tells an interesting story of how McGill were beaten in 1883. Varsity had a halfback, Alex Henderson (now a judge in Vancouver), who was amazingly fast, but only a fair catch. McGill were leading and had the Blue on their ten yard line when Alex found a hole, sifted through like a breeze, and outran the entire McGill team to score a try which was converted to win the game. If you are ever in court in Vancouver just tell the judge that story... and pay your fine like a man!

Eric Armour, K.C., prominent lawyer and member of the Board of Governors, was the first man at Varsity to wear a helmet in a rugby game. He probably thought he had more to protect. At any rate his penchant for headgear is shown in that he became Crown Attorney.

Speaking of hair-raising games, J. R. Gordon (brother of Ralph Connor), on the first team in 1884, wore a full black beard, which must have made him an easy mark for a high tackle.

The Great "Casey" Baldwin

Grads of yesteryear still talk about the famous lightweight "Casey Baldwin's" team of 1905, who fought the heavier Ottawa Rough Riders to a standstill. "Biddy" Barr coached that team, and "Casey" won the game on one of "Biddy's" trick plays in the last few minutes. The Rough Riders still think there were at least three footballs on the field.

Baldwin was as indomitable a player as ever wore the Blue; light, almost fragile, he used to take terrific punishment and come right back for more. You see, Billy Bell had a tradition to maintain.

The famous Hugh Gall wore the same cap for four years, and the team won the championship in three of them. A reward is hereby offered for the return of the cap.

Looking over the pictures of the great teams of the past proved a fascinating tour of old friends newly discovered. On the 21 champions was Fred Bartlett, popular teacher and coach at Jarvis C.I., and one of the best referees around town. In '20 came Joe Breen, captain of the squad, who guided his Western University Mustangs to a victory over his Alma Mater last fall. On the same team were Frank Sullivan and Harry Hobbs, names that speak for themselves in University sport. Incidentally Dr. Blatz got his chance to apply psychology to the boys in his capacity as manager.

1912 and '13 brought Frank Knight, well-known doctor and better known as coach of Argonauts in 1927 and 1928. The same years brought tales of Pete Campbell and Jack Maynard, the Batstone-Leadley of their day. This pair played on the half-line all the way from the bantams at T.C.S. right through to Varsity seniors. Way back in 1905 one H. G. Griffiths managed the team that put Intercollegiate football on the map. Then he went to Ridley College, where as Headmaster he has been putting both football and Ridley on the map ever since.

Soccer jogged our memory to present C. A. Mustard, captain of the champion team of 1907, and now minister of St. David's United Church, Toronto. Incidentally, his son played on this year's Intercollegiate junior rugby champions. Tempus sure does fugit, doesn't it?

Though Joe Wright never went to Varsity, he once played in the outfield as a "ringer" on the old Varsity baseball team, which shows they weren't as honest in the old days as they try to tell us. And as for us, we never were...

It is appropriate that this story should end with a yarn about Dr. Smirle Lawson, the original "big train", and probably the greatest running half who ever played in Varsity colours. If he had been playing rugby in these modern times, the sport writers would fill columns with such expressions as "the human thunder-bolt", "army tank", and other phrases which came to be applied to Lionel Conacher, his nearest competitor for premier halfback honours.

The story they tell about Smirle concerns a game against Ottawa College in 1910, which Varsity won 65 to 5. Smirle had already scored nine or ten touchdowns himself, when he spied one of his men who had yet to register a point.

"Haven't you scored yet? Follow me!" yelled the big half, and grabbing the ball, he charged at the line. The other followed; Smirle battered his way right through the whole team, and five yards from the goal line, he

BASEBALL, LACROSSE AND CRICKET MOURNED

Three old time sports favourites no longer draw the student throngs; tours of last century recalled.

Back in Varsity's days of yore the Blue and White were carried successfully in baseball and cricket, two sports which long since have been discarded, due to the seasons of the year in which they were played. Baseball was the best known sport among the incoming freshmen and thus was the most popular of all the games participated in by the undergraduates. In 1885 the large crowd of 500 attended one of the games in Rosedale Park.

1895 was the best year for Varsity baseball, with the team winning three of five games played. An exhibition game was played in a village near Quebec in 1888 where it acquired the name of Le jeu-des-barres-aux-balles. Entry in an International Intercollegiate was arranged, and arrangements were also undertaken to compete in the World's Fair Tournament at Chicago.

Back in 1887 Varsity had representatives on the Canadian cricket team which went to Great Britain and Ireland, and two Varsity players went to Philadelphia on the Canadian International Intercollegiate team of 1895. In 1895 Varsity and Trinity College sent an eleven to the U.S.A. to play a team made up of men from Harvard, Columbia, Haverford, and Pennsylvania. On these tours the Canadian teams lost all their games but made a creditable showing.

Lacrosse often brought Varsity fame. Through years of competition the Blues sailed undefeated. In 1895 the team travelled to New York where they defeated the much famed Crescent Club. Then they went down to South Bethlehem where they decisively downed the American Intercollegiate champions. In 1897 they again won the American title defeating Lehigh 9-6 and Harvard 8-3. In 1897 an Intercollegiate League was formed including Osgoode Hall and McGill.

passed by his scoreless team-mate, who scored his first touchdown!

Such are some of the men who have become an inextinguishable part of our tradition... men who are scattered across Canada and around the world... men who join with us in shouting: "Come on, Varsity!"

Is It Possible?

The following editorial appeared in "The Varsity" on October 29, 1913: "The Queen's Team" "Year after year, the tri-colour team from Kingston makes the round of the Inter-College Union, and year after year they occupy the bottom position at the end of the season. So seldom has victory crowned their efforts that the Kingston students, and better than the rest of the gridiron squads. Grouped with the great Balm Beach machine they succumbed in two games and the Old Gold and Blue later captured the Canadian title.

After holding the championship McGill team to a tie in the first game here, the English rugby squad were defeated by the Redmen in Montreal in the second game, the title remaining in the shadow of Mount Royal for another season. The Blue soccer team also bowed to McGill. Strong Varsity bids for the golf and tennis championships were also repulsed by McGill.

The Intercollegiate track and field meet at Kingston saw McGill again to the forefront when they walked off with the meet, amassing a total of 70 points to Varsity's 49. Charlie Drew of the Montreal institute of learning won the individual laurels, while the great Ralph Adams of Varsity finished first in both of the sprints. University of Western Ontario captured the honours in the intermediate track meet in a close battle with the Blues. As a change from the string of McGill victories in the fall sports, Varsity's harrier team journeyed down to Kingston and returned with a four point margin over the Red and White to their credit.

Lean Hockey Season

The U. of T. record in hockey in the past year was not much better than that in football. In the pre-season S.P.A. series the seniors were defeated in the final by National Yacht Club Sea Fleas after the Blue and White had eliminated the strong Port Colbourne Sailors in the first round. The juniors ran up a string of victories which carried them into the finals where they met defeat at the hands of Toronto Canoe Club in a close game.

For the first time in the history of the annual Christmas invasion of the United States universities, Varsity lost a majority of the games. Harvard, presenting a vastly stronger team than in the past, handed the "T" puck-chasers two defeats, 4 to 1 and 9 to 0. The game with Yale resulted in a tie, while the lone Varsity victory of the tour was gained at the expense of Princeton. In the O.H.A. senior "A" series six teams faced the starting barrier and when the season ended the Blue and White were reposing in fifth position, having won but two of the rugby world at large have come to look upon their defeat as a matter of course. Undaunted they keep playing the game manfully and fairly, and accepting their defeats without bitterness or excuse."

The hazards of the game have at least been changed. In 1907 "The Varsity" says: "The players in Ottawa were treated to a liberal shower of stones and mud on leaving the grounds by a crowd that did not consist entirely of small boys." Now it is the student supporters who bear this burden, as witness the trip to Kingston last fall.

of their league encounters. The two-game series with McGill for the intercollegiate title saw Varsity tie the Redmen in the first 2-all, while the second game in Montreal resulted in a win for the homesters, giving them their second successive hockey championship.

The intermediate team, in the past overshadowed by the senior squad, entered the O.H.A. senior "B" group this season and made the best showing of any of the Varsity teams. They captured their group with ease, and with the coaching in the capable hands of Dr. Rod Smylie, went into the semi-finals against Windsor. Frank Sullivan's junior squad, 1929-30 champions of the Big Four group of the O.H.A., again presented a brilliant line-up at the start of the season just passed. They did not play their best hockey consistently, however, and failed to do better than finish third in their group.

Cagers Fail to Shine

In basketball also Varsity felt the effects of the "lean" year. The seniors met defeat in all of their Christmas engagements across the border and were forced to bow to a strong McGill team in the intercollegiate. The intermediate "A" squad also tasted defeat, as did the juniors, who were entered in the Y.M.C.A. league. The latter team gave great promises of coming out on top on their pre-season form, but failed to live up to advance notices. The intermediate "B" cagers managed to win the second half of their group schedule, but lost out in the finals to Central "Y".

Few of the critics, with the exception of one or two optimists, expected that Varsity would succeed in carrying off the championship in the intercollegiate assault-at-arms this year. McGill were the defending champions and the Tricolour of Queen's promised the strongest kind of opposition. However, the Blue and White battlers excelled themselves in producing a great display to come out on top by a single point margin over the men of Kingston.

Led by those sensational brother mermen, Munroe and Clayton Bourne, McGill swimmers and divers retained their laurels in this field of sport at the annual meet in Kingston despite a determined threat by the Varsity natators. Honours in the gymnastic competition also fell to the lot of the Montreals.

The final hope of the U. of T. in stopping the McGill avalanche was the water polo team. With every man of last year's championship squad back and with the addition of two promising newcomers, Coach Leo Latchford's men were favorites to retain their title. Even the McGill critics conceded the palm to the Blues. In the first of the home and home games, however, the locals were below form and the Red and White earned a two-goal lead for the return contest in Montreal. This lead the Blues were unable to overcome.

Women Have Taken Active Part In Work of "Varsity" Since '15

Women had little interest in "The Varsity" in the early years. Not until 1892 was there even a woman associate editor and then they did no more than represent their sex. Miss E. Durand was the first woman representative, but there was no editorial point of view and little writing was done for over fifteen years, except, for a while a column called "The College Girl" ran under a superintending editress.

During 1915-16 there was a slight change in policy and the Editor-in-Chief chose a women's editor. At that time the staff was formed entirely by appointments and Miss D. J. Ferrier, '15, now Geological Editor of Ontario Department of Mines Publications, became the first Women's Editor. She had been on "The Varsity" over two years and was considered the only possible person eligible by the men. It was during her term that the women first took an active part in technical editing. The first women's issue was taken out on January 26, 1916, with Miss Ferrier as editor and Miss A. E. M. Parkes, '16, present secretary-treasurer of the S.A.C., as managing editor.

That was the beginning of the editorial influence of the women which increased greatly during the War, when the men's staff became so disrupted. Miss Ferrier was succeeded by Adeline Lobb, '17, for the spring term of 1917, who, after graduation became a member of the English staff of University College and is now married to George Haddow, professor of English at McMaster. During 1917-18, Margaret McCoy, '19, now Mrs. W. L. Johnston, was editor. Then for three terms, during the years 1919-20-21, came one of the outstanding women who have been associated with "The Varsity". E. R. Cringan, who married J. W. Gardiner, a graduate of S.P.S., and editor of "The Varsity" in the 1920-21 term. During her undergraduate days, not satisfied with women's editorship, she organized the Women's Press Club, still a thriving organization. She graduated in Political Science and was on the United Church Publishing Board and later was kindergarten superintendent in the Normal School. She is living in Hamilton and keeps up her connections, writing for Sunday School and Church papers.

Agnes Brown (Mrs. Bert Diltz), was editor in 1921-22. Marguerite

Gogo, '23, took the term 1921-22 and is now advertising writer for Murphy's department store, Montreal. Marguerite Spence, '24, Editor 1923-24, a graduate in Moderns, won a scholarship to France. She is now teaching in the Eastern H.S. of Commerce. Joy Kniveton, the next in line is now married and living in Hamilton. Winnifred Hodges, '26, came in 1925-26, a student of Philosophy. After a few hectic years on the Hamilton Spectator, where she is still talked of as one of their best women reporters, she is now married to Fred B. Strangways, Editor-in-Chief the same year, and now of the Telegram. Phil Griffiths, '27, was prominent at this time as one of the best Women's Sports Editors, and she is now working on the Telegram. Frances Stinson, '27, was Women's Editor during 1926-27, a classics student. She is at present Physical Instructress at Jarvis C.I. Coming closer to the present date, there is Eve Powell, '28, 1927-28 term, who spent a year on the London Daily Express a year ago, and is now doing advertising in Toronto. Helen Allen was Women's Editor in '29 when all "The Varsity" staff went out with L. T. Ryan. She is also working on the Telegram. Last year, 1929-30, the two terms were divided between Lois Girvan, now working at advertising in Toronto, and Grace MacCaulay, who writes occasional book reviews, and is working in Toronto.

During the current year, Marjorie Beer, '31, was Women's Editor in the fall term, a prominent undergraduate in Modern History.

Also five dollar suits and twelve cent meals; also pills and stables and fine wines and spirits.

Portraying a vivid and romantic picture of undergraduate life in the early eighties, when Muddy York encircled a Toronto that was little more than a thriving town, the advertising columns of "The Varsity", examined in retrospect, provide more than a passing glimpse of the earlier days in the Provincial centre of culture.

In the dawning days of undergraduate journalism, when "The Varsity" was a rather dull periodical, (viewed by present-day standards), of "Literature, University Politics and Opinion", advertisements appeared, in prosaic form, sponsored mainly by merchants of clothing, groceries and liquor.

A decade later considerable expansion took place. The best of rooms were to be obtained at one dollar per week, while those more impecunious or less fastidious students could find shelter in a hall bedroom for seventy-five cents. Tonsorial artists, unaided by feminine patronage, trimmed long locks for fifteen cents, while a mere shave cost five cents, with a beard trim thrown in for double the price.

"The Dining Hall", located at 556 Yonge Street, offered meals at a rate of twenty-three for two dollars and a half. Those were the days when the Bank of Commerce proudly advertised its paid-up capital at five million dollars, and boasted of three city branches, all convenient to students.

Nor was health neglected. In 1886, Horsford's Acid Phosphate, as advertised in "The Varsity", guaranteed relief from dyspepsia, mental and physical exhaustion, nervousness and diminishing vitality, with the added caution to "Beware of Imitations".

The college man in 1900 purchased the very best of suits ranging in price from five to ten dollars, while a few years later the coat shirt was thrown on the market. "Once wear a coat shirt and you will never go back to the old 'Over the head' style. Ours are cut to fit snugly, without binding anywhere," said a prominent clothing dealer in 1907, advertising dress shirts at one dollar.

Roller rinks vied with one another in advertising their various advantages in the undergraduate journal, while the Broadway Livery, located at 475 Spadina Avenue, reminded students that its Sales and Boarding Stable offered the best facilities for the maintenance of equine animals, or for the renting of mounts.

Undergraduate tastes in tobacco today may run to cigarettes, but their forbears preferred pipes or cigars. Tobacco companies carried on an intensive advertising campaign, but cigarettes of the more familiar brands are not mentioned until shortly before the Great War. Taxicabs began to grace the campus in greater numbers in 1913, an early illustration appearing in the columns of "The Varsity" showing a bearded driver seated in an open compartment, surrounded by a bewildering array of levers and equipment, while his fare rested at ease in the tonneau, enclosed by tightly drawn blinds.

Moss Hall and "Varsity" Sanctum

AN EARLY HOME OF "THE VARSITY"

Approximately on the site of the present Biological Building of the University there once stood a plain brick structure known latterly as Moss Hall and so called after Thomas Moss, the vice-chancellor of the university. For some years this building was the only home the University of Toronto possessed.

Moss Hall was built in 1850 for the accommodation of the medical faculty of the university after being forced out of King's College after the burning of the Parliament Buildings in Montreal where the medical faculty was previously housed.

The building was not much larger than a good sized house and according to a report of the committee of the Senate of 1851, it contained a lecture room, dissecting room, anatomical museum, professors' and curators' rooms and an apartment for an attendant and his family in charge of the building.

At that time an average of two students graduated each year.

Three years later the faculty of medicine was discontinued and the building was then occupied by the faculty of arts.

After the completion of University College, Moss Hall was for a short period occupied by an independent medical school, the Toronto School of Medicine, and finally, in 1872, it was used for Y.M.C.A. purposes. The Literary and Scientific Society held its meetings in Moss Hall and shortly afterwards "The Varsity" was given editorial and business offices in the building.

In 1880 Moss Hall was torn down to make way for the present Biological Building.

Reproduced herewith is a sketch of Moss Hall and a line drawing of the fire-place in "The Varsity" office.

Members of "The Varsity" Women's Staff Over Last 28 Years Contribute Stories of Student Journalism

Mrs. William R. Cook

Women acted in a merely advisory capacity in 1903, when Miss L. M. Bruels, now Mrs. William R. Cook, was on "The Varsity" staff. They sometimes wrote articles or covered purely women's affairs. That year the first women's hockey team was formed, amidst the excitement of many and the horror of some.

"We may have been more serious minded," Mrs. Cook told "The Varsity". "At least we didn't say what we thought, so there was no trouble about atheism and so on. There was one professor who had the reputation of an atheist, and people were dismayed."

At that time there were fewer activities and a much smaller attendance at college than at present. The most exciting times were the S.P.S.-Meds fights.

Miss D. J. Ferrier

A stern lecture on immorality was the result when the chaperone of University College heard that the women's editor of "The Varsity" had gone to the men's office to discuss news. Still greater horror was expressed when the dauntless co-ed insisted on taking out an issue by herself, and worked in the basement of the Library, where the monotype machines were operated, until three in the morning. Not even the fact that one of the men escorted her home—and incidentally presented her with a box of chocolates—could persuade the chaperone of the propriety of the occasion.

Until 1913 the only women on "The Varsity" staff were Literary Society representatives, who sent in lady-like copy and had little to do with the real work of reporting and editing. In that year the women agitated for real representation on the paper, and their Literary Society held an election. Two women ran for the position, one of them, Miss Ferrier, then an independent reporter. She was defeated; but the editor refused to accept the victorious candidate, since all his staff was appointed, not elected. The end of an embarrassing situation saw Miss Ferrier appointed women's editor.

The International Polity Club was formed the next year and Miss Ferrier became the representative for third year women. In the next elections she ran against a man for the position of secretary-treasurer, and was returned with an overwhelming majority: "A tribute to the men," she remarked, since many of those voting did not know her personally.

The position of women's editor was retained for her remaining two years as undergraduate, and the next year, during which she did graduate work in English. An offer to work on the news staff of the Star was refused and subsequently Miss Ferrier has been an associate editor of Willison's Monthly and of the Civic Gazette. She is now Geological Editor of the Ontario Department of Mines Publications.

Miss A. E. M. Parkes

It was the War that really put the women on their feet, as far as editorial work and responsibility was concerned, in the opinion of Miss A. E. M. Parkes, graduate of '16, and reporting editor of "The Varsity" in 1915-16, at the time of the first women's issues.

The women had no editorial comment until after 1914-15, but during the War the men's staff was so depleted that they could not carry on without help. From that date, therefore, the women ceased to be patronized. "Miss Ferrier was the first woman with actual editorial position," Miss Parkes remarked.

"The women didn't have a separate staff at first," she went on, "only about a half dozen in all. We had a joint office in the cloisters with the men, who were amazed to find the women did so well. The last two years of the War the women's editorials became the backbone of the paper."

"The issue we took out, January 26, 1916, with only two days notice, was a special number for a patriotic fund tag day. We never thought of anything but war—it was our life in those days."

Miss Parkes is now Secretary-Treasurer of the Students' Administrative Council and Secretary-Treasurer of the Women's Athletic Association, and has kept in close touch with the various policies and interests of "The Varsity".

Mrs. C. H. Diltz

"The women's quota consisted of teas, organ recitals, institute lectures and Sunday sermons at Convocation Hall," replied Mrs. C. H. Diltz when questioned by "The Varsity" concerning the inner workings of the paper when she was Women's Editor, 1920-21—then Miss Agnes Brown.

"The Varsity" saw a number of changes during these years, chief of which was the evolution of the Campus Chat to Campus Cat. And women were never allowed at the Press," she continued, "except when they night edited, their three or four times a year, such as at St. Valentine's and St. Patrick's. Even then there was a chaperone who spent the night with the women night editors and had to personally see each of her charges safely to their own homes before her duty was complete."

Evidently the only fusses at that time were when faculty news was cut or organ recitals poorly reported. The Telegram, it would seem, was their chief bugbear.

There have been notable changes since that date, which was not so many years ago. At present the women take out at least two issues a week, with full responsibility, and without any need of chaperone.

Mrs. Fred Strangways

Working for "The Varsity" in 1924 and 1925 was not all straight sailing for the women according to Mrs. Fred Strangways, at that time Winifred Hodges, women's editor. There was a decided feeling of contempt—partly justified—and in some cases personal antipathy for the women's staff. The remunerative positions were carefully guarded by the men and the office of Women's Managing Editor was abolished.

Evidently the men did not care for night editing, for in that year the women started their program of taking out "The Varsity" regularly once a week, and more often on occasion.

There were the usual fiery editorials written by Mrs. Strangways, even in the dark ages of 1924-25, on the Women's Building—the second Hart House-to-be.

One innovation that was decidedly killed was with reference to the Commencement ceremonies. Evidently the Simcoe Hall offices were finding the East and West Halls of University College too crowded for the increased graduating classes and suddenly stated that Examination Hall would be used that year. "The Varsity" rose to the occasion and thundered away. J. S. Will, professor in French at U.C., whom Mrs. Strangways knew well, said of these editorials that "they showed an appreciation of spiritual values".

There were about three joint editorial staff meetings throughout the year, but the women editors met once a week. The event was accompanied by much smoking, and usually finished as an afternoon tea and bridge party.

The question of smoking did not become a burning one until the days of Helen Allen. But there were men on "The Varsity" in 1924-25 who were inclined to be shocked. One "Varsity" man, said Mrs. Strangways, accosted her, and demanded whether it were true that she had smoked a cigarette at a certain luncheon.

Mrs. Strangways is one of the "trinity" of women editors who married the editors-in-chief of "The Varsity" in their years.

Evangeline Powell

The centenary, the opening of the new Union Station and the Metropolitan Church fire were landmarks during Eve Powell's term of office as women's editor, 1927-28. But, except for the acquisition of office, telephone and typewriter by the women's staff, "The Varsity" itself enjoyed a peaceful year.

A study-hour record book was kept for the women reporters, to prove that they really did academic study. The position of women's news editor was created during her term and the women had the honour of being allowed to night edit once a week, also there was a daily women's editorial.

The year succeeding her graduation Miss Powell was on the staff of the London Daily Express, and is now with Simpson's Advertising Department, also doing free-lance work.

Helen K. Allen

Helen K. Allen, graduate of University College in 1929, was Women's Editor on the staff of "The Varsity" during the terms 1928-29, the momentous year when the editor was discharged and the staff staged a sympathy walk-out.

When interviewed by "The Varsity" on the events during her tenure of office, Miss Allen said, "I think that year was the most hectic in the history of 'The Varsity'. But for some reason or other the staff was more united than ever before or since, and when the editor was relieved of his duties the whole staff automatically and without any doubts on the matter, resigned. "The Varsity" was involved in several disputes that year, too. Detentions was not given a favourable review in the columns of the paper and as a consequence the whole Faculty of Dentistry was irate. On another occasion "The Varsity" severely criticized the boisterous invasion of a downtown theatre by the first two years of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering and so "The Varsity" could elicit no sympathy in that quarter. Probably these incidents accounted for the bonfires of "Varsities" put on by these two faculties when the newspaper came to grief.

"It was during this year too," Miss Allen explained, "that the male members of the staff began to attend the staff teas (which formerly only attracted the mast head), turning out in numbers far exceeding the number of women and causing a shortage of food at every meeting. As a climax to 'The Varsity' year, the staff, bereft of the S.A.C. grant, put on their own dinner dance and held it at the Five Sisters Tea Room instead of Hart House, with a jollity imparted by the fact that "we were outcasts but free."

Miss Allen has been on the staff of the Toronto Telegram for the past year and a half.

Lois Girvan

Lois Girvan, graduate of '30, and at present doing advertising work, had the happy opportunity—or ill luck—of being women's editor during a particularly peaceful but successful term, the fall of 1929-30. "The women knew how to do good work by that time—frequent night editing, editorials, and equal responsibility with the men," she said.

The most interesting part of her career on "The Varsity" was when the whole staff resigned upon the firing of the editor-in-chief, Mr. Ryan, two years ago. "You might call it frustrated endeavours for me," she said. "I had a pass for the Household Science At-Home that night, and I was too conscientious to use it."

Literary Supplements of "Varsity" Featured Celebrities and Chickens

By G. G. Brooks

In its genesis "The Varsity" was a purely literary weekly. The first issue in 1880 bore the sub-heading "A weekly review of Literature, University Politics and Events." Two or three years later the literary character of the paper was emphasized by the substitution of the phrase "University Thought" for "University Politics and Events."

During these early years of "The Varsity" a number of the finest of the early lyrics of Archibald Lampman made their first appearance in its columns, and a number of other names since prominent in literature are to be found there. Among these it is interesting to note that of Louis Frechette. After 1886 the literary tone of the paper became even more pronounced, and in 1888 appeared the first Christmas literary supplement.

After 1890 when "The Varsity" was a purely undergraduate publication under the Literary and Scientific Society of University College, there was a decided decline in the literary content of the paper, and its columns were largely devoted to reports of the proceedings of the Society. In 1893, however, the Christmas Literary Issue was revived. An Easter Issue was published the following spring, and another Christmas issue in 1894. During this period the literary issues were graced by numerous bits of verse from the pen of Sir Daniel Wilson, then President of the University. Louis Frechette, Charles G. D. Roberts, Arthur Stringer, Duncan Campbell Scott, and Agnes C. Laut were frequent contributors.

The Christmas issue of 1898 was a very ambitious affair printed on a high grade coated paper and provided with an interesting frontispiece in violet ink entitled "Dreams of Youth." The scene was a barnyard—a very respectable barnyard with very respectable chickens in it looking quite shocked at the loving kiss that was being exchanged by nymph and swain over the well.

During the decade before the war "The Varsity" went through the agony of conversion into a newspaper, and there was little attention given to the literary aspect.

Finally in 1925 the Christmas issue once more became an undergraduate literary issue. In this year there was a four page insert made into the regular news issue of the paper. In 1927, for the first time, prizes were offered for contributions, and the arrangement made in this regard with the Literary and Debates Committee of the S.A.C. has continued until the present time. The prize list was increased substantially in following years, and in 1930 a mid-season spring supplement was published for the first time.

Belligerent Students Hazed and Egg-pelted

The "fight" assignment for this issue should have been given to a poet; it would be an apt subject for an epic. For fights at the University of Toronto have been with the students as long as academics, and judging from the interest they aroused, constituted the most interesting extra-curricular activity in which one could possibly participate.

Hustles and hazes, rough-house escapades and hilarious parades of victory, shoe-polish-plastering and shirt-lifting, barrel-rolling and egg-pelting—these are some of the features of inter-year and interfaculty temper-teasing jocularities, these are the products of youth undisciplined and harmless. They are the leaven of drab college monotony and are regarded now as moments when the exuberant youth reached the apex of a certain development—each contributor added something to the fracas in his own individual way, creative, ignoring the inherent knowledge of good and evil, forgetting the standard.

Ask any alumnus of IT2, IT1, or IT0 what the ideal initiative measures were for the bearded, he-men frosh of pre-war days and he will tell you that the senile egg was the zine qua non. How the sophs of those days started something when they herded the new men together on the circular campus or in the quad and from "strategic" points venerated their stark brethren. This, tea-drinkers of the new decade, is a form of hazing.

Hazing at the University of Toronto reached the peak of its development in the Nineties. Hazing was done systematically and everyone looked forward to it with anticipation. The eggs were bought from cold-storage companies and the price was so much a load, delivered. But that fine old tradition petered out somewhat with the coming of the new culture in 1900. There was formed an Anti-Hazing League with the noble goal of stamping out the naughty custom. Initiations, which with hazing always involved a fight, became the organized affair in which the sophs of each faculty could indulge without fear of losing their dignity.

Back in 1882 a group of four freshmen in University College wrote a questionable song to the seniors to be sung at a debate. The offenders were seized in the residence, with the exception of one who escaped from the bedroom window by a rope of sheets. They were ducked in the Taddle as was the custom. Driven to it by the *racoon*es scribbled so rampant in "The Varsity" of those days, an incog wrote a soliloquy apres Shakespeare "To haze or not to haze . . . or to take decisive action on this hazing question . . . and by initiation to say we end the abuse . . . to haze . . . perchance to be discovered—ay, there's the rub! . . . thus caution does make cowards of us all . . ."

In 1889 a "bombshell burst in our midst" in the form of a fiat from the Caput, "All interference with the personal liberty of any student . . . It is a dictum not quite unknown in these pacific days. A period of comparative quiet followed. Trinity Medical School invented a method of avoiding the law by introducing their annual "hustle". It took place between the first and second years, was pre-meditated and carefully planned, and had the desired effect.

There had always been some hard feeling between the residence and the out-residence students until "The Varsity" of January 13, 1898, called for better relations and more residences. Of these affairs there is not sufficient record because the paper at that time was printed only once a week.

The unruly spirit of the Medical Faculty had gathered about itself a reputation, but it was not until 1902 that the authorities found them particularly obnoxious. On November 5 of that year the first and second years of the college paraded "to town" to take in a theatre. On the way signs were ruined and merchants called the police to have the boys disci-

From Battles To Bath-Tubs Is Range of News Columns

The news columns of "The Varsity" came into action for the year 1930-31 with a bang. Issue No. 1 carried a big story on a University building program involving millions of dollars. Issue No. 2 featured a personal interview with G. K. Chesterton. The first week also included the installation of Dr. R. B. McElhann as Principal of Wycliffe, the laying of the cornerstone of the new residence for U.C. women, the usual soph-frosh battle at School and the opening gun in the campaign to keep the "Blue and White" free for rugby fans, un-honoured and unsung by Rudy Vallee.

Followed thereafter details of dress reform at Trinity, a heart-to-heart interview with Lillian Roth and an eyewitness account of outrages at the S.P.S. initiation.

Hot on the heels of that came revelations on "parking" on the Campus, with its alleged accompaniments obligato, and that subject flitted between the news and correspondence columns for a week. Before its echoes had completely died away they were ousted by rumours of suppression of "The Varsity", and its replacement by "a humorous and sporting bi-weekly magazine" under the auspices of a Pittsburgh underwear potentate.

Before the month was out embattled Engineers had laid siege to Burwash residences and the name of the Women's Union was forever linked with that of Diogenes and bath-tubs. After that, discussion of the merits of Hart House debates and debaters and of the constitutional security of the S.A.C. presidents filled in a gap till Clarence Darrow visited Toronto. He gave "The Varsity" a private interview, in which he slammed Prohibition and our educational system, stated that American crime was due to American enterprise and referred to Toronto-ians and Canadians in general as "you Britishers".

After that episode, interest centred on the Perfect Male; the expulsion of W. E. Algie following statements in Time Oike, of which he was editor; the visit of Lord and Lady Willingdon to Victoria College and the Hart House Masquerade.

In January Free Speech and Co-education shared the limelight. The latter was fun while it lasted, but it was the free speech issue that made the university so popular abroad. Successive polls of the teaching staff and student body revealed the attitude of the "intellectuals" on the question, and gave the downtown press and certain powers-that-be something to think about during the long winter evenings.

One of the high lights of the year was the publication of the new constitution of the S.A.C., which provided a new record for good, solid reading matter on the inner pages of "The Varsity". Undoubtedly it served a good purpose.

As an antidote to the S.A.C. constitution the search for the Perfect Female was taken up in the next issue and for a week shy co-eds were being observed from every secret vantage place that their "points" might be noted.

Following that Trinity again took the centre of the stage by staging a walk-out as a protest against residence meals. One thing led to another, and in a short time Hart House became the storm centre of an uproar over meals, hours and wages, till the Hall Committee took steps to investigate conditions.

In the meantime, editorial statements were made which to the eager, if slightly astigmatic, eyes of sections of the press cast aspersions on the integrity of the University. The hue and cry was raised, editorials were written, meetings were held, statements were made, politicians and others mumbled and finally "The Varsity" "thundered". Three innocuous Bulletins appeared, to be followed by this Jubilee Issue of "The Varsity" plined. In those days, however, the police were less metropolitan and did not interfere, except to arrest a stranger or two at the rear of the parade. They were treated rather roughly. "The Varsity" reports, with arm-twisting and shin-kicking. These are called the "good old days" by some even yet.

You may think that these boys were tough. But they didn't hold a candle to the show that the frosh put on Halloween Night, 1909. The Alumnae Dance was being held in Convocation Hall and a crowd of freshmen from the whole University for some reason waited outside until the guests were leaving, when they attacked the men. They were armed with hose, shoe-polish and flour. Some of the men were partially undressed, greased with the polish, covered with the flour, soaked with the hose, and permitted to go. A tussle ensued. But the fancy of the students had its way and being in the ascendant, became rather indiscreet. Some ladies narrowly missed injury and some were trampled under foot. Now these were tough guys.

Student opinion declined to praise the efforts of the frosh, however, and "The Varsity", which was prone to criticize certain elements of the University in those days, called the boys "cowards". The Caput met immediately. Suspension of all social affairs was threatened. But it was difficult to find the culprits. President Falconer addressed the men of the University, laid upon them the duties of gentlemen, urged them to take spontaneous action. Some students were suspended. The Medical Faculty swallowed their medicine "like the hemmen they had pretended to be", but School, always a thorn in the side of those who worship law and order, resented the penalty inflicted upon a very popular and esteemed fellow. Within a week President Falconer considered the affair a "closed chapter".

Even we who are students to-day can recall the tension of all citizens that caused so much unrest in the aftermath of the war. Students had added to that the pep of youth. The escapades they engineered in those days were dealt with in understanding.

Penalties took the form of fines and on October 31, 1921, when first and second year Meds held a parade downtown the money came out of the year treasures. On October 5, 1920, the first and second years of University College revived the old egg custom. The stadium was the citadel, which the frosh seized. It is said that on that day the News Editor of "The Varsity" swallowed—swallowed a rotten egg.

In our day we know how Meds and School will fly at each other on general principles. Election day at those faculties bring with them the hose, the snowball, the paint, and the taunts—"H.C.L.I. H.C.L.I." and "Dirty School!" School is held in awe at Varsity more than any other faculty for its expeditions. Burwash Hall at Victoria will not forget for some time the visit of the Engineers to its quad last fall. Much damage was done to the Gothic residence, but School paid without a whimper, and the Victorians were fined.

A Stepping Stone To Distinction Graduates from "Varsity" Hold High Places in National Life

Here follows brief notes on a very few former members of "The Varsity" staff. They are listed according to the year they served and in each case the name of the Editor-in-Chief appears first. There are, of course, many others equally prominent whose names should be mentioned also:

College Life Featured Simplicity Forty Years Ago, Says Dr. H. J. Cody

Simplicity in life, fewer diversions, and a more widespread intimacy between all students, and between professors and students, characterized the university of forty years ago, as related to "The Varsity" by Rev. Dr. H.
J. Cody, who graduated in 1889 and is now Rector of St. Paul's Anglican Church, Toronto, and Chairman of the Board of Governors of the University of Toronto.

"In the old era of the university, when University College was the centre of the university, practically every student knew everyone else, there was a very strong personal touch, and more of the spirit of comradeship,"
Dr. Cody told "The Varsity".

"The great feature of university life in the early days was the meetings of the University College Literary and Scientific Society, and their annual elections," Dr. Cody said, in explaining the interesting manner of voting.
Elections were held in old Moss Hall, which stood approximately on the location of the present Biology Building, which was the centre of activity in the early days of the university.

"The early factions in the Society were composed of residence versus non-residence men. This lasted for some time, until the men living outside residence so outnumbered all others that there was no comparison," Dr. Cody explained. One of the greatest controversies was as to whether the Medical students were to be admitted as members of the Society, since the old School of Medicine was not properly a part of the university until a little time after this period.

These were the days when Maurice
Hutton, in the full prime of his life, delivered his lectures on Aristotle and Plato, lectures that are described as revealing a marvellous splendour of learning.

With the burning of University College in 1890, the old era of the university came to an end, and the University Act, passed in 1887, came into effect, providing for the affiliation of the various colleges which are now welded into a complete whole, to make up the University of Toronto.

THE WEEK'S EVENTS.

THE appearance of THE VARSITY this week is an adequate representation of the feelings of those who love the University most. We could all see the ideals and every glorious hope that the century of the denial has set up in his century of hard earned progress. For what has all the effort of the past come to—the effort of those who loved alma mater and limped one day to see a great university stand on Turner's lustreless shore. Here, in this year of grace 1895, we behold the University torn by dissensions, torn by the twin evils of the latro policy of selfish, small minded men. And the tragic aspect of the matter is that he who would dare speak out, must be willing to sacrifice himself before the blinding hatred of those who would see him subjugated to their own ends. I shall

It is needless for us to recount the due doings of the party which Prof. Drake, admittedly one of the ablest men in the University, respected and revered by his students, loyal to the University as any man who ever trod her courts, honored again and again by her alumni, dares to express an opinion adverse to the current policy of those who have secured control, and is hounded out of his position! Other professors may write letters to the press. Their opinions are on the right side, you know, and the publication of letters is a good and proper thing! But Prof. Drake is so fortunate. He is constrained to say what he thinks, and his thoughts do not happen to coincide with the thoughts of certain gentlemen. They would—them!—pick where the skin is tender; and behold the public

THE "MOURNING" ISSUE

Review of Dramatic Year

It is significant that the various dramatic societies of the universities during the past year all made definite attempts—usually praiseworthy—to deviate from the usual placid courses of amateur dramatic societies. Three out of four of the undergraduate plays presented in Hart House had never been produced in Toronto before, The Dybbuck, The Way of the World and The Three Sisters, and all of them definitely experimental.

Last month the Trinity College Dramatic Society presented The Three Sisters, by Tchekov. They took much upon themselves, but were successful. The women of the cast did outstanding work, especially, Margo Clarkson, Erica Mundy and Loettie Wilson.

The Goldfishers, the Gilbert and Sullivan light opera, was presented by the Victoria College Music Club in February. It had a tremendous success financially, but was not as financially a production as the Pirates of Penzance of last year. The choruses were inclined to be weak, and the large cast of principles made it almost impossible to get real talent for all parts. Miss Betty Oram did clever work, however, both in acting and singing.

At St. Michael's, two plays were presented during the year, As You Like It and The Rivals. It is significant that the parts have been done entirely by women.

Mr. Stone's policy in two respects is working to the great advantage of the theatre by encouraging experimental plays such as Peer Gynt and Out of the Blue, and also his frequent use of undergraduate players.

Although the audiences were large and the plays chosen of a high standard, meetings of the Players' Guild this year did not develop into as intelligently critical assemblies as in the past. Otherwise the season was fairly successful. Plays presented came from dramatists of nine different countries. There were also three plays written by members of the Guild and one written by Gilbert Norwood. Selwyn Dewdney distinguished himself by taking part in nine of sixteen productions, but he was closely followed by Andrew Allan and Patricia Godfrey. This pair, with Stanley Ryerson, were the most successful actors seen before the Guild season. Some day it would be pleasant if the Players' Guild were to build a permanent stage and spend two weeks preparing a Wednesday afternoon play.

CLERICAL TAILORS—ROBE MAKERS—MEN'S FURNISHINGS

By M. M. Marks

There was a disturbance at the end of 1914 when an article written by Professor Reich at the request of "The Varsity", stating that the Germans considered that they were also fighting in self defence, met with the distaste of the "Mail and Empire". "The Varsity" refused to disgrace the cause of the allies they claimed by ignoring both sides of the question.

Articles from students at the front and constant speakers and lecturers seem strange as seen alongside academic news. No efforts were ever

"While the British cause is just, we should like to repeat that there is a strong case which the Germans make out which commands the attention of Germans the world over," is the substance of an editorial on Oct. 1914, which gives a clear view of the sane stand taken to view things in a clear light.

On Dec. 2, 1914, a very important issue came up out of the attempts of "The Telegram" and "World" to have three native German professors dismissed. The university paper took the stand that it was just as fair to dismiss King George V for having a cousin who started the war as to dismiss these professors. Finally the professors were given leave of absence.

professors were given leave of absence and Sir Edmund Osler resigned the university organ and gave as proof that their minds were poisoned already by the German professors.

Not a Happy New Year but a good one, was the wish of President Faheer at the beginning of 1915, and from then on the realization of the gravity of the war made itself increasingly apparent. Social affairs were held on a much smaller scale and passed on to welfare societies.

there were 1,700 Varsity men in action and by the end of the war over 4,500.

By the last year of the war the great strain could easily be seen and no more philosophical thoughts about the Germans appeared, but instead, "Why does he want peace? Because he sees his own devilishschieflicks about to strike home and desires our intervention between him and his unspeakable crimes." Finally peace was received as the day of justice dawning and the war became only a hideous memory in Varsity annals.

Enthusiasm Wanes Without, "Varsity"; Dinner Cancelled

Such a handsome program! With the proud crest of the college imprinted in red upon the front page. A menu that would make your mouth water from "Consome Princesses" to "Salad Delight" and "Meringue Crowned Glacee". And the toast list. W. B. MacMurray proposing "The University", with the reply by Principal Wallace; D. B. Murray, "University College", with Prof. W. J. MacAndrew replying; and Prof. C. N. Cochran, with D. A. Keith doing honor to "The Year". But greatest of all, Mr. Denton Massey as guest speaker.

Such a splendid banquet it was to be, according to the program. But the date? March 18th, 1931. That's the terrible part of it. There was no such banquet at Hart House on Wednesday last.

"The Varsity" has not been on the campus to tell the graduating year of University College all about the plans for this banquet. Eight tickets were sold. There was no banquet.

Echoes !

"He takes the most tender and motherly care of his fish." Quotation from an article on The True Fisherman, in "The Varsity", 1883.

"The college authorities have been compelled to have hurdles placed along the walks to prevent the grass from being entirely worn away by foot-paths across the lawn. This shows a lamentable want of thoughtfulness on the part of the students."

"The Varsity", 1883.

Extract from a letter from a freshman who is desirous of being allowed to study in the History seminar, Oct. 29, '09.

"My real reason is that the girls have not enough places for study and social intercourse. Of course we could study in the Library or in the Romance room or the Modern Language room or the Classical room or the Philosophy room or at home and when the library is finished we will have lots of room but I don't see why we can't have the history room, too.—C"

Frankness like this is delightful in an age of advertising (1913).

"Phi Sigma, a secret college society that flourished in Varsity's halls some twenty years ago," says a note in the issue of Feb. 22, 1893, of "The Varsity", "held a re-union and dinner at Webb's on Saturday night. The society was the first of its kind in any Canadian college and like all secret student fraternities had its origin on the other side of the line. Its founders were Messrs. Gilmore and Hunter, two Savannah boys, who a score of years ago made the hearts of dons and beards weary. They are now respectively a merchant and a banker and letters of regret were read from them for their absence. The society was never a large one, having been a close corporation, admitting only the choicest of spirits—"

Even in November of 1892 the Pass course was causing difficulties. Says an editorial, "Perhaps the most important changes in the routine and system of our college life are the ranking of the students in the Pass or General Course according to merit and the making of attendance upon lectures compulsory. Gone, alas-a-day, are the good old times when we, the independent undergraduates, could with lordly spirit—and otherwise lofty mien, disclaim all regard for the discourses of the sage professors and the sometimes not so sage lecturer."

"To the Editor of "The Varsity"—March 18, 1896.

"Dear Sir—Through the medium of your columns I desire to call the attention of the proper authorities and of all sensible undergraduates to an abuse of long standing and thereby the more urgently in need of correction. I refer to the practice of certain demonstrative gentlemen, presumably of the lower years, of expressing their varying moods and emotions through the medium of their feet upon the Library floor. This, besides being exceedingly juvenile is also extremely annoying to those who desire to use the reading rooms for their proper purpose, as the lady-killers in question certainly do not."

"On Tuesday morning," says a note, February 28, 1912, "the long-looked for and, by some, the long-dreaded event, the first wearing of gowns by the ladies of Queen's Hall took place. Without their wonted roof-gardens, protected only by their charming coiffures, robed in sombre black the ladies, blushing prettily, swept into their respective lecture rooms to the tune of loud cheers and stamps.

"This is a move in the right direction and one that is thoroughly appreciated by the men. They can get an occasional glimpse of their lecturers now instead of having to recognize them by their voices as heretofore."

Spooning is innocuous and needn't have a sequel, But recollect, if spoon you must, spoon only with your equal.

"We are of the opinion," states an editorial comment in 1882, "that the Library regulations prohibiting the taking of books home is an ill-advised one, although the extension of the reading hours is certainly a benefit."

SPRING

Venus and her youthful archer
On the winter-king's departure
And the joyful reinstatement of the spring

Will again exhaust their quivers
Rending hearts and making lovers—
But it is not of such that I sing,
Strike the lyre to other measures,
This is not a tune for mirth;
Imanolate your carnal pleasures
In their every hour of birth.
Ten more weeks, and all your powers
Will be on the spring exams—
Yes, the spring may yield some flowers
But it yields more cryptograms.

In 1907 there was some suggestion of a Union for both men and women, but the matter was not taken seriously as is seen in an editorial reply on December 17 of that year: "The idea of a fair co-ed sitting saucily on the corner of a billiard table and swinging her toes, conversing gaily the while between puffs of her cigarette, with an admiring circle of men, is an entrancing one. Unfortunately the authorities are prosaic in their views and the picture is unlikely to appeal to them."

"The skepticism of students is said by a writer in the Kansas Review (from the files of "The Varsity" in 1881) to be the offspring of seclusion. He urges as an antidote to belief the encouragement of societies and social clubs in the institutions and the development in every way of social intercourse among students themselves and with the outside world."

Sir William Recalls Cow in Tower And Slams Religion Test for Profs

Sir William Mulock, Chancellor of the University of Toronto, and Chief Justice of the Province of Ontario, has seen the university grow to its present place as "one of the leading universities of the world" in the "six dozen years" since he entered its doors in 1859.

"Of course I get great satisfaction from the accomplishments of the University of Toronto, but I don't make any claim that I have been responsible for this great growth," said the veteran chancellor when interviewed by "The Varsity".

Sir William was in 1873 elected to the Senate of the university. He has been a member ever since, having been made a life member when in 1881 he was made Vice-Chancellor, which position he held until parliamentary duties in the Federal House caused his resignation in 1901.

"That is without foundation," was the Chancellor's deliberate denial of the tradition regarding the "drunken undergraduates" of other days. "They came here for a definite purpose. They came here to advance themselves. In my day the ambition of the students kept them from excesses."

"Ambition" was also the motive that made the famous cow climb the stairs of the University College tower and ring the bell, he said. "It went up there itself, moved by a legitimate ambition to reach a higher station in life," was his cautious answer to "The Varsity's" queries as to just how the cow found itself ringing the college bell one Halloween when Sir William was an undergraduate.

In the Chancellor's undergraduate days, a sort of messenger and handy man, Frank Summers, slept in "The Wicket", which is now the Women's "Varsity" office, by the western entrance to the U.C. quadrangle. "The door was locked at nine o'clock and any students coming in late had to ring the bell. Frank Summers was supposed to report those coming in late, but he was a very decent chap. I never heard of him reporting anyone."

Boxing was a popular sport in Sir William's undergraduate days, although "there was no organized sport." "We played football on the grounds where the parliament buildings now stand, and cricket on the campus in front of University College. "Religion at the university is in good hands now, with the denominational colleges affiliated with the university and looking to the religious needs of the students. We have an ideal system and one that is the admiration of the whole educational world," said Sir William when shown a newspaper article reporting the demand of the grand master of the Orange Grand Lodge of Eastern Ontario that religious tests be applied to all professors at the university.

"There are a great many different denominations. We would have each of them with a different set of religious tests to apply. The religious tests would become sectarian tests. They are not really entitled to the term 'religious'," he said in vigorously opposing the whole idea.

JOHN GORDON INKSTER

Ever since he first discovered the Orkney Islands, . . . "John Grampian" has been a man of mark. Most especially is this noticeable in his Gaelic accent.

EDWARD WENTWORTH BEATTY

At school he was always a good little boy. . . In the presence of ladies he is most bashful, but hopes in a few years to overcome this inconvenient perversion of nature.

Torontonensis Vol. 1

In the dark ages, before the presence of woman gave that indefinable delicacy that characterizes the S.P.S. of to-day, there was a certain professor of Mathematics. And he did find the rows of boyish faces irksome, and made a little plan. Accordingly, two radiant young girls from Maths and Physics joined classes. On a momentous morning they made their first appearance in the historic and hitherto horribly masculine halls of the Engineering Building. Stupefaction, consternation, indignation, admiration. As the two Chastening Influences made their modestly blushing (they were fresh-ettes) way to the front, then, true to the finest instincts of their sex, leaped onto their seats, and raised such a shout as shook the very foundations. The professor could be seen to open and close his mouth; presumably words issued therefrom but no noteworthy words. Manhood paid its tribute to Womanhood from nine o'clock till nine-thirty. Those days of Naughty-Seven!

BULLETIN BOARD

The last regular meeting of the year will be held in the Women's Union, 79 St. George St., on Tuesday, March 24th. Annual election of officers will take place at 8.15 p.m. Professor Kenneth Taylor, of McMaster University, Hamilton, will address the Club at 8.45 p.m. His subject will be "Industrialization in China."

A. J. Elder, Pres.

B. W. AND F. CLUB

There will be a meeting of the B.W.F. Club in the Debates Room, Hart House, at 5 o'clock Friday, March 20th, for the election of officers for the year 1931-32. All those interested in Boxing, Wrestling and Fencing are asked to come out.

A dinner is being given to the B. W. F. team, Club executives, Advisory Board and Coaches at 6.30 Friday, March 20th.

MATERIAL FOR STUDENTS' HANDBOOK

All organizations, societies, clubs and fraternities in the University are reminded that detailed information for publication in the Students' Handbook should be forwarded to the Editor at the S.A.C. office, Hart House, as soon as possible and in any event before the end of April.

General Secretary-Treasurer.

LACROSSE CLUB

Any students interested in lacrosse are cordially invited to turn out with the U. of T. Lacrosse Club. Practices will be held on the back campus as soon as the turf is in a fit condition. There are a number of vacancies on the team to be filled this year. The team as a rule makes a trip to the U. S. immediately after exams.

UNCLAIMED BOOKS AT HALL PORTER'S DESK IN HART HOUSE

A considerable number of text books have accumulated at the Hall Porter's desk during the year and are unclaimed. The House Committee has ruled that any of these books not claimed by Friday evening, 27th March, will be handed to the Student Christian Association for their book exchange.

WOMEN'S PRESS CLUB

The theatre party that was to take place to-morrow will be postponed until next Saturday March 28. "Michael and Mary" by A. A. Milne, at the Royal Alexandra.

Election results for 1931-32 term of the Women's Press Club are as follows:

President—Jean Morton, Victoria. Vice-Pres.—Hazel Hammond, U.C. Secretary—Jennie Farley, St. Mike's. Treasurer—Kay McIntyre, U.C. Social and Publicity—Margaret Ryerson, Victoria.

Shortage of Coal Cancelled Lectures

"This building closed until further notice."

These words, printed on large white cards and fastened to the doors of nearly all the University buildings, confronted the students of the University of Toronto on a memorable morning some 14 years ago, when, on February 14, 1917, a shortage of coal resulted in an edict being issued from the office of the president closing most of the University buildings indefinitely.

Students, with varying emotions, gathered in groups to discuss the situation. The majority, visualizing an extended holiday with many lazy mornings, were in pleasant frame of mind; some few, bethinking themselves of the narrow margin of time

FRIDAY AFTERNOON RECITAL

At 5 p.m. to-day the last Friday Afternoon Recital of the year will be held in the Music Room of Hart House, when Miss Florence Singer and Mr. Viggo Kihl will play the last two movements of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Last Friday they played the first two movements and Mr. Kihl gave a brilliant exposition of what he described as one of the most important musical works ever composed.

VISITORS' DAY

Sunday, 29th March, and Sunday, 26th April, will be the last two Visitors' Days of the year in Hart House when members may introduce visitors including ladies into the House between the hours of 2 and 4 p.m. MEMBERS WILL BE ASKED TO SHOW THEIR MEMBERSHIP CARDS AT THE DOOR.

The whole building including the new kitchens will be open for inspection.

Tea will be served in the Graduate Dining Room on each of these days between 3 and 4.30 p.m. at 25c. per cover.

BACH'S ST. MATTHEW PASSION

The annual performance of Bach's St. Matthew Passion will take place at 8.10 p.m. on Tuesday, 31st March, in Convocation Hall. Student tickets at fifty cents (50c.) each are on sale at the Hall Porter's desk in Hart House and in the residences.

SUNDAY EVENING CONCERTS

The two remaining Sunday Evening Concerts of the present academic year will take place on 29th March and on 12th April when Mme. Jeanne Dusseau and the Conservatory String Quartet will give the respective programmes.

Representatives from the various colleges and faculties are requested to call at the Warden's Office on Wednesday, 25th March, and on Wednesday, 8th April, between 12.30 and 1.30 p.m. for their allotment of tickets for these concerts.

Eighty single tickets, which will admit men only for each of the two remaining concerts, will be issued at the Hall Porter's desk at 1 p.m. on Thursday, 26th March, and on Thursday, 9th April.

KIRBY LAW LECTURES

Professor W. P. M. Kennedy, Professor of Law in the University of Toronto, has been invited by the Department of Law of Lafayette College, Pennsylvania, to deliver, in May, the Kirby Foundation Lectures on Comparative Constitutional Law.

T.I.C.C.U.

Rev. F. Noel Palmer is expected to speak to the T.I.C.C.U. at five in Wymulwood on Tuesday, March 24. Mrs. Palmer, who accompanied him west will also tell of the work in the other unions.

U.C. FRENCH SOCIETY

The last meeting of the year will be held on Wednesday, March 25 at 8.15 at 79 St. George Street. The program will include an original one-act play, "Abelard", by Stanley Ryerson.

before examinations, were sober.

It was the first time that the University had been compelled to close during the session, and hence there was no precedent for the organization of classes. Various residences, fraternity houses, and other buildings not affected by the coal famine were "commandeered" by professors. Girls' residences were the most popular, and one professor, wandering around upstairs looking for the common room, was gently but firmly put upon the right path.

"The Varsity", which at that time was published three times a week, suspended publication on February 14. With no students at the University there was no news, and without news "The Varsity" found it necessary to shut up shop.

It was not until March 5, 19 days after the edict, that the coal came through and the buildings were reopened. Regular lectures were resumed immediately.

Feminine Candidates Compete For Moss Scholarship Award

For the first time since the presentation of the Moss Scholarship, the nominees are all women, Marjorie Beer, at Victoria; Jessie Gray, from U.C.; Mabel Quinn, St. Michael's, and Naomi Slater at Trinity. The award is worth $300.

The committee who determine the winner of this award give preference to the candidate who is likely to engage in post-graduate or professional work, or travel abroad in the year following graduation.

A. Marjorie Beer, graduate of Malvern Collegiate, has stood high in Modern History during her three years at Victoria. Vice-president of her class in her first year, she began to take active part in many societies in both her own college and in inter-faculty organizations. She is holder of Senior Stuck at Victoria, is a member of editorial board of the Canadian Student, associate editor of Acta Victoriana, member of Sigma Phi journalistic fraternity and past women's editor of "The Varsity". She has always been prominent at the S.C.M. conference at Elgin House, and S.C.M. in general around the university. At Victoria she has been active in dramatics and debating. She is particularly interested in journalism, and has become known for her poetry, of which one poem has been set to music and sold extensively in the United States.

In University College, Jessie Gray and Adele Statten first tied, but a re-election gave the nomination to the former. Miss Gray, B. and M. IV, has also had a very active academic career. In her first year she won the Alexander T. Fulton Scholarship in Science, and in her third year the David Dunlop Memorial Scholarship in Psychology. She has been a member of the Honour Science Club and S.A.C. representative in third and fourth years. Last year she was vice-president of '31. She played hockey and tennis in U.C., and was vice-president of the Hockey Club in third year.

Mabel Quinn of St. Michael's is a Moderns student, in residence at St. Joseph College, coming to the University on a Knights of Columbus Scholarship. In her second year she won the Sir Wilfrid Laurier Scholarship and the Hughes Prize for English. In her third year she was vice-president of the Newman Club and on the executive of St. Joseph's Debating Society, and is now president of the Students' Administrative Council of St. Joseph's College. She has also been on the St. Joseph's Athletic Executive for the last two years, and has always been actively interested in athletics, especially tennis and swimming.

At Trinity, Naomi Slater is in Modern History, and in her second year won the Pattenon-Rigby Scholarship. She is head of St. Hilda's Library Committee, a member of the League of Nations Club, the Trinity College French Club and St. Hilda's Reception Committee. She is the Toronto-nensis representative of her college, and a member of the Athletic Directorate of the university. She played basketball for St. Hilda's and is on their Athletic Executive. She also won her senior "T", playing on the university women's hockey team this year.

Confederation of Arts Colleges Big Step in University Growth

A man who has watched the university grow from one small faculty to a "confederation", is Dr. James Brebner, former Bursar of the University until June 1930. Talking to him is like being transported suddenly back to an entirely different world where the "picturesque figure of Sir Daniel Wilson strode through the halls of old University College, and when Professor George Young, philosopher, did more to mould men than anyone else."

"Students were different in those days," Dr. Brebner remembered, "but I would not dream of saying they were better. Undoubtedly they were more mature. Most of them had taught school 4 or 5 years before coming to college and naturally after such a battle they took their studies seriously. Their definite purpose was to follow a profession, but they had little money to do it on. People were not rich in those days."

Even so, Dr. Brebner was convinced that there was plenty of life about the college. Dr. Loudon's short stories proved it. In general, however, "students were too profoundly serious to have much social intercourse. In the beginning the girls had few rights. There was no room for them in the old library, so a lift had to be installed which brought books down to them in their own reading room."

Dr. Brebner from his office in Simcoe Hall looks out on a different campus now. But he does not regret it. "They may call us old fogies if they like, but we had the advantage of seeing a period never to be repeated—science and invention changing the aspect of things year by year. Certainly the confederation of the four colleges, which formerly had to strive separately with insufficient means to keep up with modern thought, has been the very best thing for Ontario."

Less Frivolity Says Scotty of Old Days

"Students were not so frivolous then—and the women wore more clothes than they do now," remarked "Scotty", chief janitor and confidante of University College, commenting on conditions in his early days of office over twenty years ago.

In those bygone days the men and women students did not indulge their inclinations to loiter and chat in the rotunda. If they so far forgot themselves, Scotty had only to go and mention the fact to Miss Salter, chaperone before the vogue of Dean of Women; as soon as she appeared on the scene, the guilty ones vanished into thin air.

"The Varsity" office has had a number of migrations in the course of its career: from the small room just inside the cloisters, now the women's office, to the top floor of what has become the German Seminar; and from there a descent to Room 82 in the basement, where tea shared the honours with journalism. The meetings were quiet and decorous affairs, but smoking was quite in order in the cloisters.

"The Varsity" does not and never did condone any lawlessness on the part of students—states an editorial in Nov. 22, 1912.

Vic Dean of Women Resigns From Post

The resignation, taking effect next year, of Miss M. E. T. Addison, Dean of Women in Victoria College, from the position which she has held since 1904, will deprive the college of a dominating, broad-minded and interesting personality who has always taken an active part in the affairs of the university.

"It is difficult to adequately express the debt owed to Miss Addison by Victoria and the thousands of young women who have come under her influence during her twenty-eight years as Head of the Residence and Dean of Women," Chancellor E. Wallace stated.

Miss Addison's connection with Victoria began in the time when she was one of the first women students at the old college in Cobourg. Later she became Professor in Modern Languages and has always been a prominent leader both in the academic and social life of the university. Although a graduate of an early date, she has understood the modern youth as few other women do. Largely on account of her influence dancing was permitted at the college functions. Also under her leadership a system of student government in the women's residences, "Asga", has been evolved.

THE ROBERT SIMPSON COMPANY LIMITED

When Wallace Ran for Editor

In 1896, when Malcolm W. Wallace, Principal of U.C., was in his fourth year at University College he was a candidate for the position of editor of "The Varsity", after spending the previous year on the staff. He was defeated by R. H. Coates, now Dominion Statistician.

"At that time the office of 'The Varsity' was in the University College gymnasium on the site of Hart House," said Dr. Wallace. "The paper published prose and poetical contributions from the faculty and the undergraduates and there were editorials in every issue. I remember writing an editorial in my third year."

"Was there a literary society in those days?" "Yes, there was a very live Lit. and everybody went to the meetings on Friday night. The elections were very picturesque but very scandalous. Only those who had paid their fees were eligible to vote and they soon came to consider it the duty of the party to pay their fees. Oh, the party had to collect the money, usually from some man with money at the University. At one time the parties were the Insides and the Outsides. The insides were the residence men who lived in the west wing of the college. Each party had a 'moral suasion' committee."

"The elections were held downtown and the polls, which were to remain open as long as there was a voter every five minutes, usually stayed open all night. The 'moral suasion' committees took possession of the door to the polling booth and allowed only the members of their party to go in and vote."

"In those days the graduates voted for the president. In 1906 I ran for president of the Lit. but was defeated by Mr. Robinette. I had a majority of the undergraduates but lost out on the vote through the downtown graduates. There was no 'Moral Suasion' in that election."

"Who'll mildly reprove?" "I," says Queen's Journal, "Because I'm so vernal, 'I'll mildly reprove.'" Quoted from Sunbeam, April 16, 1881, in "The Varsity".
